· PREFACE.

THERE is no finality about English law, and we need not sigh over the fact. If there were our national life would be stagnating. Where there is life and growth there can be no finality. Day after day, month after month, year after year, the great legislative machine, and the great judicial machine in all its many-sided activity, are turning out new statutes and new cases to mould and readjust law and social order to the changing needs and conditions of the community.

The Digest of English Case Law—published in 1898—did a splendid work in reducing to rational and lucid order the case law of more than a century and a half. It consolidated at least 100,000 decisions. It fused law and equity, as represented respectively by Fisher's Digest and Chitty's Equity Index. It incorporated the statute law wherever the case law without it would have been misleading. Its sixteen volumes were, in no conventional sense, a notable achievement, not only as an editorial and publishing feat, but as marking an epoch in the history of English law. Since then the work has been carried on by supplementary Annual Digests edited, like the larger work, by Mr. John Mews.

This "Annual Digest of Decided Cases"—to give it its proper name—is a model of what such a Digest should be: the arrangement of the Titles is alphabetical—incomparably the most convenient, as Lord Lindley said; and the pith of each case is pointed in catchwords printed in clarendon type, which at once arrest the eye. The references are to all the Reports; the cross-references are abundant; and, most important of all, the range of the Digest is so comprehensive that no decision of any importance whatever is sought in vain. The Law Journal Reports, the Law Reports, the Law Times Reports, the Times Law Reports, the Weekly Reporter, the Commercial Cases, Aspinall's Maritime Cases, Cox's Criminal Cases, Manson's Bankruptcy and Company Cases, the Court of Session Cases, the Court of Justiciary Cases, the Irish Reports, the Local Government Reports, the Justice of the Peace, Smith's Registration Cases, Railway and Canal Traffic Cases, are all dealt with, and contribute to make the Digest as complete as it is excellent.

A Digest arranged on these principles is the most useful book which the practising lawyer can possess. It is better than a Code, because it is not, like a Code, a mere bundle of dry legal propositions—colourless generalities. It starts—if well arranged—like a Code from general principles, but it goes on to illustrate those principles, as a Code does not, by a number of concrete examples from decided cases, and an English lawyer—such is the power of precedent with us—is never happy unless he can found himself upon a case, which, if not identical with, yet closely resembles his own. A Code, for instance, gives us such a proposition as this—"An infant cannot bind himself except for necessities": a useful statement, no doubt, but there it stops. A Digest goes on to illustrate by decided cases what are and what are not necessities—champagne, a diamond pin, a bicycle, a marriage settlement, and so on. A Code tells us that "gambling in a public place is illegal." A Digest goes on to illustrate what is and what is not a "place"—the bar of a public-house, a newspaper office, an inclosure, a street archway, an umbrella stuck in the ground. What is even more important, in the arguments and judgments which lie behind the cases of the Digest we get the reason of the thing. In the Code the law does not disclose its reasons. "Incipit a jussione," as Bacon says.

Ten Supplementary Digests have now appeared, and as they have multiplied the task of hunting through them has become more and more troublesome. Consolidation was imperative, and it is represented by the present work—the Decennial Digest. In compiling it the author cannot hope that he has escaped all errors. He will be satisfied if it makes the path of the practitioner easier. The real test of a Digest is the arrangement—lucidus ordo—and it is on this that the author has bestowed more especial pains: with what success the reader must decide for himself.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

Intention of Parties — Cheque — Receipt Annexed to Cheque.]—The defendants, who were tobacco manufacturers, agreed with their customers to distribute among them annually for four years, from April, 1902, their entire net profits on goods sold by them in the United Kingdom and in addition the sum of 50,000*l.* each quarter in proportion to their purchases. The defendants paid the first quarterly bonus, and before the time for the second distribution arrived they sold their business and went into voluntary liquidation. They paid the second bonus to each customer by means of a cheque upon a banker, which was signed by the defendants and the liquidator, the cheque being stated as sent as the customer's share of the second and final bonus distribution. The cheque was payable to the customer or order, and at the foot were the words: "The receipt at back hereof must be signed, which signature will be taken as an endorsement of this cheque." On the back were the words: "Received from Mr. Joseph Hood (liquidator of Ogdens, Limited) this cheque for" the amount specified, "being my share of the second and final bonus distribution of the company." The customers did not intend by signing this receipt to waive any right they might have against the defendants. It having been decided that the sale by the defendants of their business did not get rid of their liability under the contract,—Held, that the acceptance of the above cheque was not an accord and satisfaction of the customer's claim against the defendants. Nathan v. Ogdens (A. T. Lawrence, J., 93 L. T. 553, affirmed), 94 L. T. 126; 22 T. L. R. 57—C.A.

VOL. I.

Essential Error—Mutual Error.]—An employer tendered 2*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* to D., a workman, who had been injured in his employment, as in full satisfaction of any claim he might have in respect of the accident, stating, as was the fact, that he had obtained a report from a surgeon that D. would be fit to return to his work in six weeks from the date of the accident. D. accepted the money, and granted a discharge in full. The medical opinion on which both parties relied proved to be mistaken, for D. was not able to work for more than six months from the date of the accident:—Held (Lord Young dissentiente), that these facts were not sufficient to shew that the parties in entering into the agreement for settlement of the workman's claim were under essential error to the effect of rendering the discharge null and void. Dornan v. Allan, 3 F. 112—Ct. of Sess.

Acceptance of Money in Full Discharge of Claim for Compensation for Injuries—Subsequent Development of Injuries not before Apparent—Right to bring Action for Further Damages.]—The plaintiff, who was injured in a railway collision, signed a receipt for a sum of money paid him by the railway company in full satisfaction and discharge of all claims. He returned to work, but his eyesight soon began to fail, and he became totally blind. Having commenced an action to recover damages from the railway company, the defendants pleaded that the action was not maintainable, and the question was ordered to be tried first, whether the plaintiff had by his conduct debarred himself from suing for damages:—Held, that the action was maintainable, it being a question for the jury. Ellen v. Great Northern Railway, 49 W. R. 395—Bucknill, J.

Debtor and Creditor—Promise to Pay Debt by Instalments—Consideration.]—An agreement by a debtor to pay, and the creditor to accept payment of, an existing debt by instalments is nudum pactum. Therefore, where a judgment creditor put in an execution upon the goods of the judgment debtor, an agreement by the debtor to pay part of the debt at once and the balance by monthly instalments affords no consideration for a promise by the execution creditor to withdraw the sheriff. Hookham v. Mayle, 22 T. L. R. 241—Walton, J.

ACCOUNT.

Action for—What is.]—An action for an account in equity is an action for the balance found due on taking the account; it is not a series of actions for the various items included in the account, nor a series of actions for damages for breaches of covenants to make particular payments. Manners v. Pearson, 67 L. J. Ch. 304; [1898] 1 Ch. 581; 78 L. T. 432; 46 W. R. 498—C.A.

Periodical Payments—Foreign Currency—Rate of Exchange—Date of Conversion.]—When a plaintiff sues a defendant in England on a contract made abroad, under which periodical payments in foreign currency ought to have been made to him in a foreign country, and the Court orders an account, he is not entitled to have each periodical sum treated as converted into English money at the rate of exchange which prevailed at the date when the payment ought to have been made under the contract. The date of conversion cannot be fixed before the balance is found on the account. Per LINDLEY, M.R., and RIGBY, L.J. (dissentiente, VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.). Ib.

ACCUMULATIONS.

Debts—Payment out of Capital—Direction for Recoupment.]—Where debts (or portions) have been paid and satisfied out of capital moneys, a provision in a will for accumulation to recoup capital what has so been taken from it is not within the excepted cases mentioned in section 2 of the Accumulations Act, 1800, and cannot take effect after twenty-one years from the testator's death. Tewart v. Lawson (43 L. J. Ch. 673; L. R. 18 Eq. 490) followed. Heathcote, In re; Heathcote v. Trench, 73 L. J. Ch. 543; [1904] 1 Ch. 826; 90 L. T. 505—Swinfen Eady, J.

Trust to Accumulate Income until Youngest Child attains Twenty-one—Gift to all the Children of A who shall attain Twenty-one—Period of Ascertaining Class—“Portions.”]—Where a fund is settled upon parents and their children with a direction to accumulate a part of the income of the fund until the youngest child attains twenty-one, and then to distribute it, the accumulated fund is a “portion” within the meaning of section 2 of the Accumulations Act, 1800, and therefore the period of accumulation is not limited to the periods prescribed by section 1 of that Act. Beech v. St. Vincent (Lord) (19 L. J. Ch. 180; 3 De G. & Sm. 678) followed. Stephens, In re; Kilby v. Betts, 73 L. J. Ch. 8; [1904] 1 Ch. 322; 91 L. T. 167; 52 W. R. 89—Buckley, J.

The class thus entitled to take under a direction to accumulate for a period which is not cut down by the limitations imposed by section 1 of the Act is determined not by the first child attaining twenty-one, but by the arrival of the date at which the testator directs the distribution to take place. Watson v. Young (54 L. J. Ch. 502; 28 Ch. D. 436) followed. Wenmoth's Estate, In re; Wenmoth v. Wenmoth (57 L. J. Ch. 649; 37 Ch. D. 266), discussed and explained. Ib.

A testator gave his residuary estate to trustees in trust to set apart out of the income thereof the sum of 24l. a year until the youngest child of his daughter should attain twenty-one, and subject thereto to pay the income to his daughter for life, remainder to her husband for life, with a direction that if the daughter survived her husband the accumulation should cease, and the whole income become payable to her. After the death of the survivor the capital was given to the children:—Held, that section 1 of the Accumulations Act, 1800, did not apply, as the accumulation directed was a “portion” for the children within section 2 of the Act, and that the class of children did not close until the period of distribution arrived, which was when the youngest child attained twenty-one. Ib.

“Provisions for raising portions.”]—By a codicil to his will a testator directed his trustees to pay the income of the residue of his estates to A, his nephew's widow, during her life, and by a subsequent codicil directed them out of this income “to reserve 1,000l. annually, and to invest the same with the interest . . . accruing thereon,” in the trustees' names, for behoof of A's two daughters “equally between them, share and share alike, or in the event of one dying without leaving lawful issue, then the whole to the survivor,” “declaring that said sum shall be payable” to the daughters on A's death, “provided they have attained the age of twenty-one or have been married”:—Held, that the directions as to the annual reservations for behoof of A's daughters was a “provision for raising portions” for the children of a person taking an interest under the testator's will within the meaning of the second exception in section 2 of the Thellusson Act, and that consequently section 1 of that Act did not apply. Colquhoun's Trustees v. Colquhoun, [1907] S. C. 346—Ct. of Sess.

Will—Trust—Investment in Land—Will Made before Death of Testator after Act—Retrospective Effect.]—The Accumulations Act, 1892, applies to a will of a testator made before the passing of the Act who died after the Act came into force, for a testator does not “settle or dispose” of any property by his will until such will is brought into effective operation by his death. Llanover (Baroness), In re; Herbert v. Freshfield (No. 2), 72 L. J. Ch. 729; [1903] 2 Ch. 330; 88 L. T. 856; 51 W. R. 615—Farwell, J.

The Act cannot be evaded by putting in some alternative dispositions for the accumulations, such as paying off incumbrances; those dispositions which offend against the Act will be void, and those which do not offend will remain in force. Ib.

Cows—Cowhouses—Ventilation and Air-Space—Order of Privy Council, June 15, 1885—Regulations by Local Authority.—The word "ventilation" in clause 13 of the Privy Council Order, 1885, made under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, s. 34, includes air-space; and a regulation made by a local authority, under the order, that cowkeepers shall not suffer any greater number of cattle to be kept in a building used as a cowhouse than will admit of the provision of 800 cubic feet of free air-space for each cow, is intra vires. Baker v. Williams, 66 L. J. Q. B. 880; [1898] 1 Q. B. 23; 77 L. T. 495; 46 W. R. 64; 62 J. P. 21; 19 Cox C.C. 81—D.

Dogs.—See 6 Edw. 7 c. 32—the Dogs Act, 1906.Bite by—Ferocious Character—Evidence of Scierter.—In order to render the owner of a dog liable for a bite by the dog it is not necessary to show that the dog has, to the knowledge of its owner, actually bitten or attempted to bite anybody. It is sufficient to prove that the dog is to the knowledge of its master ferocious in regard to human beings. Such ferocity may be of an intermittent character, as, for instance, when a bitch has pups. Barnes v. Lucille, 96 L. T. 680; 23 T. L. R. 389—D.

— Control—Summons for Order that Dog be Kept under, or Destroyed—Dangerous to Mankind—Evidence of Injury to Sheep.—To obtain an order under section 2 of the Dogs Act, 1871, that a dog be kept under proper control or destroyed upon a complaint that the dog is dangerous, it is not necessary to prove that the dog is dangerous to mankind, as the word "dangerous" in that section is not confined to meaning dangerous to mankind. Williams v. Richards, 76 L. J. K.B. 589; [1907] 2 K.B. 88; 96 L. T. 644; 71 J. P. 222; 23 T. L. R. 423—D.

— Shooting at Dog Trespassing—No Intention to Kill—Ill-treating and Abusing.—Shooting at a dog that is trespassing, without intending to kill it, but with the intention of injuring it if necessary to frighten it away, is not of necessity cruelly ill-treating it. Each case is a question of degree and is for the Justices. Armstrong v. Mitchell, 88 L. T. 870; 67 J. P. 329; 20 Cox C.C. 497—D.

— Injury to Cattle or Sheep—Liability of Owner.—The plaintiff's sheep were trespassing on the defendant's field, which adjoined the plaintiff's land, and while the sheep were being driven by their owner back to his own field, the defendant's dog, which was in the field where the sheep were so trespassing, worried and killed one of the sheep. The defendant had several times warned the plaintiff to prevent his sheep from trespassing on his land:—Held, that under section 1 of the Dogs Act, 1865, the owner of the dog was liable for the injury done by his dog to the sheep, although such sheep was trespassing on his land at the time when the injury was inflicted. Grange v. Silcock, 77 L. T. 340; 46 W. R. 221; 61 J. P. 709; 18 Cox C.C. 644—D.

— Dangerous Dog—Order for Destruction—Form of.—An order for the destruction of a dangerous dog need not contain an adjudication by the Justices that the dog was not under proper control, nor by section 2 of the Dogs Act, 1871, need the Justices give the owner of the dog the option of keeping the animal under proper control before ordering its destruction. Pickering v. Marsh (43 L. J. M.C. 143) followed. Rev v. Dymock, 49 W. R. 618—D.

— Sheep—Sheep Suffering from Scab—Certificate of Inspector—"Lawful Excuse."—An inspector of a local authority certified under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, that certain sheep were suffering from scab, and, in terms of an order of the Board of Agriculture, gave written notice to the owner of the sheep to have them treated by dipping or other remedy in his (the inspector's) presence. The owner failed to comply with this notice. In a complaint against the owner for failing to comply with the notice the owner pleaded lawful excuse, and gave evidence to shew that the sheep were not in fact suffering from scab at the time in question. The Justices found that the sheep were not suffering from scab, and that the respondent had lawful excuse within section 52 of the Act for not complying with the notice:—Held, that the certificate of the inspector was conclusive evidence of what was therein stated, and that the respondent had failed to shew any lawful excuse for not obeying the notice. Jamieson v. Dow, 2 F. (Just. Cas.) 24—Ct. of Just.; and see CRUELTY.

— Swine—Holding Sale of—Taking Round Swine in Cart and Offering for Sale.—By an order of the Board of Agriculture, dated December 11, 1896, made in pursuance of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, s. 22, sub-s. 19, "no market, fair, sale, or exhibition of swine shall be held in a district to which this order applies, except as expressly authorised by this order," and "a sale of swine (not being in a swine fever infected area) may be held with the licence of the local authority." The respondent Monk was in charge of a horse and float passing along a highway containing pigs, two of which had been previously ordered, and, whilst so travelling, asked other people if they wanted to buy pigs, and subsequently sold them all to various people. This was not a swine fever infected area, and there had been no licence obtained from the local authority. The magistrates held that there had been no contravention of the order of 1896, and dismissed the information:—Held, that the magistrates were right, for, although there was a selling, there was no holding a sale. McLean v. Monk, 77 L. T. 663; 62 J. P. 180; 18 Cox C.C. 686—D.

3. CRUELTY TO.

— Intention to Commit Cruelty.—An intention to commit cruelty is no part of an offence under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849. The question is, whether in fact there is cruelty. Duncan v. Pope, 80 L. T. 120; 63 J. P. 217; 19 Cox C.C. 241—D.

— Branding Sheep—Branding Nose with Hot Iron—Necessity for Identification.—The respondent, who was a farmer in a mountain district in Wales, used to brand his sheep by marking their noses with a red-hot iron so as to burn the hair away and destroy the hair cells, thus leaving a permanent mark. Upon an information under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, charging the respondent with having cruelly ill-treated and tortured the sheep, the Justices found that branding the sheep with a hot iron as above described caused substantial pain and suffering; that there had been no unnecessary abuse of the sheep; that the practice of branding sheep on the uninclosed mountain lands in certain counties in Wales had existed for a great number of years; and that it was reasonably necessary for the purpose of identifying sheep grazing in large numbers on uninclosed mountain lands, which could not be effectually obtained by earmarking and pitchmarking. They accordingly dismissed the information:—Held, that there was evidence upon which the Justices could come to the conclusion that the branding was necessary, and the Court could not interfere. Bowyer v. Morgan, 95 L. T. 27; 70 J. P. 253; 22 T. L. R. 426—D.

Working Horse in an Unfit State—Guilty Knowledge.—The appellant, who was charged with causing two horses to be worked in an unfit state, carried on business in London, and the two horses in question were under the charge of one L. at a farm at C., where the appellant resided. He was practically always away, and did not see the horses above once a fortnight, they being under the entire management of L. There was some evidence that the appellant knew that the horses had been out of condition at some time, but no evidence was given as to the date when that was, or how long it was before the alleged improper working. There was no evidence that the appellant had interfered with L., had given any order for the horses to be worked, or knew of their condition on the day in question. On May 2, 1901, the horses were being worked in an unfit state. The Justices convicted the appellant:—Held, that there was a failure on the part of the prosecution to give any evidence of guilty knowledge with regard to the offence in question. Greenwood v. Backhouse, 86 L. T. 566; 66 J. P. 519; 20 Cox C.C. 196—D.

Lion Tamer—Pony in Lion's Cage—Pony Attacked by Lion.—The appellant conducted a public performance with lions in a cage. The performance consisted of a roundabout with six boats, in each of which there was a lion, the roundabout being drawn by a pony. At one of the performances a lion jumped out of its boat on to the hindquarters of the pony and sniffed at it. It was driven back to its boat by the appellant, but immediately afterwards, when his attention was diverted, the lion attacked the pony, and so injured it that it died. The appellant had given a similar performance for several years. Formerly, during the performance, three or four men with iron bars kept watch on the stage; but recently, instead thereof, one man with a fire-hose kept watch. The magistrates convicted the appellant under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, of having caused the pony to be cruelly ill-treated:—Held, that there was evidence of mens rea upon which the magistrates could convict, and that the conviction must be affirmed. Thielbar v. Craigen, 93 L. T. 600; 69 J. P. 421; 21 Cox C.C. 44; 21 T. L. R. 745—D.

Cock—Cock-fighting.—A cock is an animal within section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, and to cause cocks to fight is an offence within that section. Budge v. Parsons (3 B. & S. 382) and Bates v. McCornick (8 Ir. Jur. N.S. 239) followed. Allen v. Small, [1904] 2 Ir. R. 705—K.B. D.

"Brought to or delivered at such place for the purpose of being slaughtered."—The respondent, a licensed horse-slaughterer, purchased a mare for 10s., for working which the seller had been fined, and sent it by his servant to his premises licensed for the slaughter of such animals. He entered it in his statutory register "... bought ... brown mare to kill for 10s." The mare was kept on those premises for nine days, and, after being cautioned, the respondent had cut the hair from its neck:—Held, that the mare had been brought to the premises for the purpose of being slaughtered within section 8 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849. Edgar v. Spain, 84 L. T. 631; 65 J. P. 502; 19 Cox C.C. 719—D.

Shooting a Cat—Cat left in Pain.—The respondent shot a cat which belonged to his next-door neighbour, and which was at the time in the respondent's garden, with a saloon rifle, intending to kill it. The bullet struck the cat in the back, wounding it severely, but not killing it. The respondent saw that the cat was not dead, and it crawled away on to its owner's property out of sight of the respondent. After about half an hour the cat was found by its owner alive, but in great pain, and it was killed. Upon an information charging the respondent, under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, with cruelty to the cat, the Justices dismissed the summons upon the authority of Powell v. Knight (38 L. T. 607), there being no finding by them that, after shooting the cat, the respondent with knowledge of what he had done allowed the cat to linger on in pain:—Held, that the Justices were right. Hooker v. Gray, 96 L. T. 706; 71 J. P. 337; 23 T. L. R. 472—D.

"Domestic Animal"—Tame Seagull used in Photographer's Business.—In order to bring an animal wild by nature within the meaning of the term "domestic animal" in the Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849 and 1854, it must be proved not only that it is tame, but that it is sufficiently tamed to serve some purpose for the use of man. Yates v. Higgins, 65 L. J. M.C. 31; [1896] 1 Q.B. 166; 44 W. R. 335; 60 J. P. 88—D.

It was found by justices that a tame seagull had been used by a photographer in her business, but there was nothing to show that the finding meant more than that the bird had been photographed:—Held, that it was not shown that the bird was sufficiently tamed to serve some purpose for the use of man, and therefore the bird was not proved to be a domestic animal within the meaning of the Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849 and 1854. Id.

—Performing Lions.—Lions kept in a cage are wild animals kept in confinement, and not "domestic animals" within the Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849 and 1854. A domestic animal is one which has been tamed for the service of man. Harper v. Marks, [1894] 2 Q.B. 319; 63 L. J. M.C. 167; 70 L. T. 804; 42 W. R. 605; 58 J. P. 527; 17 Cox C.C. 758; 10 R. 335—D.

Failure to Dip Sheep on Certain Date—Conviction Disclosing no Offence.—The appellant, as the owner of certain sheep, duly obtained an exemption from the provisions of article 3 of the Sheep Dipping (North of England) Order of 1906, subject to the condition that the sheep should be dipped between September 15 and 30, 1906, and should not be moved in the meantime. On September 26, 1906, the sheep were dipped in a sheep-dip which was not a sheep-dip approved by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. The sheep were not again dipped on or before September 30. The appellant was thereupon prosecuted and convicted "for that he on the 26th day of September, 1906 ... then being the owner of certain sheep, did not dip the same in a sheep-dip approved by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries ...":—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, as it disclosed no offence, the offence created by the order in question being not that the sheep were not dipped in an approved dip on September 26, but that they were not dipped in an approved dip by September 30. Bingley v. Quest, 97 L. T. 394; 71 J. P. 443; 5 L. G. R. 938—D.

Counselling Commission of Offence.—Where a person aids or abets an offence which is punishable on summary conviction, he is liable under section 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, to be proceeded against in every respect as if he were a principal offender. Therefore a person who knowingly counsels the owner of a horse to perpetrate an act of cruelty upon the animal may be convicted, upon an information under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, for cruelly ill-treating the horse, although the advice given by him to the owner was the remote and not the proximate cause of the cruelty. Benford v. Sims, 67 L. J. Q.B. 655; [1898] 2 Q.B. 641; 78 L. T. 718; 47 W. R. 46; 19 Cox C.C. 141—D.

Cruelty to Five Animals—Summons—Whether Distinct and Separate Offences.—Where a person has been guilty under section 2 of the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, of cruelty to a number of animals at the same time, it is competent, but not necessary, to take out separate summonses in respect of each animal; one summons may charge the offence in respect of the whole of the animals. Therefore the conviction of a person for cruelty to five animals is not bad on its face as being a conviction for five separate and distinct offences. Rex v. Cable; O'Shea, Ex parte, 75 L. J. K.B. 381; [1906] 1 K.B. 719; 94 L. T. 772; 54 W. R. 626; 70 J. P. 246; 21 Cox C.C. 186; 22 T. L. R. 438—D.

4. DAMAGE BY.

Animals Feræ Naturæ — Rabbits—Deer.—In the year 1898 W. came into possession of a demesne where there were rabbits and deer, which trespassed upon adjoining lands in the occupation of B., doing considerable damage to his crops. W.'s predecessor had, on two occasions, let loose foreign rabbits, with a view to the improvement of the breed, and W. had, since he entered into possession, trapped the rabbits for profit, and exported them to England, but had done nothing to improve them or increase their numbers. Rabbits bred in considerable numbers on B.'s lands as well. The deer, which at one time had been confined within a walled deer-park in the demesne, broke loose in the year 1893 through a temporary breach in the wall, and only portion were recaptured. The remainder had since been wandering about the demesne, breeding there, and trespassing continually on B.'s lands, but always returning to the demesne. W., with his friends, occasionally shot the deer for sport; and, in response to B.'s complaints, told him that he might shoot them; and, in fact, gave it out generally in the neighbourhood that he desired that any one who could shoot them might do so. At the same time he kept a wood-ranger, whose duty it was to look after the deer, and his predecessor had occasionally fed the deer in winter time with bay, laurels, and oats:—Held, that W. was not liable in respect of the damage done by the trespass of the rabbits. Held also (Bovd, J., dissenting), that there was evidence to support the finding of the jury that the deer were W.'s deer, that they were tame, and "kept" by W., and under his control; and that W. was liable upon that finding for any damage done by the deer to B.'s land and crops. Brady v. Warren, [1900] 2 Ir. R. 632—Q.B. D.

1. DIRECTION TO PURCHASE.

Direction in Will to Purchase Government Annuity for Life of Widow—Death of Widow before Probate—Right to Value of Annuity.—Where a testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to convert the same, and out of the proceeds to purchase a Government annuity of a given amount for the life of an annuitant, and the annuitant survived the testator, but died before the annuity could be purchased or the will proved, her legal personal representatives were entitled to such a sum as would at the date of the testator's death have sufficed to purchase the annuity. Dawson v. Hearn (9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 249; 1 Russ. & M. 606) followed. Robbins, In re; Robbins v. Legg, 75 L. J. Ch. 751; [1906] 2 Ch. 648—Swinfen Eady, J.

Government Annuity for Life of Testator's Widow—No Time prescribed for Purchase—Death of Widow before Probate—Right to Value in Money of Annuity at Testator's Death.—Where a testator gave his residuary real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to convert the same and out of the proceeds to purchase a Government annuity of 400l. for the life of his wife, and she survived the testator, but died sixteen days later and before the will was proved or any steps had been taken by the executors to purchase the annuity, her legal personal representatives were held entitled to such a sum as would at the date of the testator's death have been required to purchase the annuity. The character of the annuity does not depend upon the form in which it is secured, and in the absence of words defining the date of its commencement it ought in all cases to commence from the testator's death. Robbins, In re; Robbins v. Legg, 76 L. J. Ch. 531; [1907] 2 Ch. 8; 96 L. T. 755—C.A.

In the case of a Government annuity directed to be purchased on a prescribed day there is an implied gift of the annuity out of the testator's estate from the prescribed day until the purchase is made; and when no time is prescribed there is an implied gift of the annuity from the testator's death until the purchase is made. Ib.

Dawson v. Hearn (9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 249; 1 Russ. & M. 606) explained and applied. Decision of SWINFEN EADY, J. (75 L. J. Ch. 751; [1906] 2 Ch. 648), affirmed. Ib.

2. CHARGE OF.

Whether Charged on Corpus or on Income only.]

—By marriage settlement the intended husband granted lands to trustees upon trust to permit him to receive the rents and profits for life, without impeachment of waste, and after his death to permit the intended wife to receive 300*l.* a year "out of the rents, issues, and profits thereof, for and during her life, without impeachment of waste, and for her jointure," and in lieu of dower, and "immediately after her decease" in trust for the settlor, his heirs and assigns. The settlor covenanted that the lands or any property to be taken in exchange therefor under a power of exchange therein contained should, during the life of the wife, produce the clear yearly sum of 300*l.* In case of there being issue of the marriage living at the death of the settlor, all his estate and property at the time of his death was charged with a sum of 3,500*l.* for such issue:—Held, that the annuity was a charge upon the corpus of the settled property. West's Estate, In re, [1898] 1 Ir. R. 75—C.A.

Grant of—Charge on Moiety of Tenant in Common—Right of Distress.]—By his will, dated November, 1831, J. W. devised certain lands and premises to his daughters A. and H. as tenants in common in tail. A. married H. A. and H. the defendant. In 1858 by a deed of settlement on her marriage H. disentailed her moieties, and settled them upon trust to pay the income to the defendant for his life or until he became bankrupt, and then for the issue of the marriage, and in default of issue (which was the case) in default of appointment for her next-of-kin. H. died in 1863, and the defendant became bankrupt in 1873, and thereupon A. became entitled to the whole. In 1881 a deed was executed between A., her husband and the defendant, whereby A. with the assent of her husband, in contemplation of the defendant's second marriage, agreed to grant to the defendant an annuity of 300*l.* charged upon the moieties, shares, and premises comprised in the marriage settlement of 1858 payable out of the rents and profits and income thereof respectively. And by that deed if the annuity should be in arrear the defendant could enter into and distrain upon all or any of the said moieties, shares or premises, and hold them and receive and take the rents and profits thereof until the arrears were satisfied. The rental value of the undivided moiety has been of late years quite insufficient to satisfy the annuity, the profits of the whole hardly amounting to that sum:—Held, that although there was power to distrain on the entirety of the lands, the deed gave him no power to distrain for more than one-half of the rents and profits of the whole. Ashwin v. Bullock, 81 L. T. 48—Bucknill, J.

Charge on Certain Freehold Land—No Specific Devise of the Land—Mixed Residue—Rent-charge or Legacy—Estate Duty.]—Whether a gift of an annuity followed by a direction that it is to be a charge on certain land makes it a charge on that land only, and renders the personalty not liable, depends upon whether, according to the true construction of the instrument in question, that is the result. Where there is a simple gift of a legacy or annuity with a mere charge upon real estate, the personal estate is not only not exonerated, but remains primarily liable. Trenchard, In re; Trenchard v. Trenchard, 74 L. J. Ch. 135; [1905] 1 Ch. 82; 92 L. T. 265; 53 W. R. 235—Warrington, J.

A testator by his will gave his wife, so long as she should remain his widow, an annuity of 500*l.*, and declared that the same should be a first charge on certain freehold land at Greenwich not specifically devised by the testator, and after giving certain legacies devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate not otherwise disposed of to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion and out of the proceeds to pay his funeral and testamentary expenses and debts and legacies, and to stand possessed of the residue upon certain trusts:—Held, on the construction of the will, that the annuity was not a rentcharge, but a mere personal legacy payable like the other legacies out of the mixed residue of real and personal estate, but with a special charge if necessary on the land at Greenwich, and that consequently the estate duty was payable out of such residue as a testamentary expense. Ib.

"Use upon a use"—"Rent"—Express Trust.]—

A "rent" may be created after a use, so as not to transgress the rule that a use cannot be limited upon a use. The gift of a "rent" by a limitation of a use upon a use does not necessarily create a trust or equitable estate, but may create a new legal estate and give the seisin in the "rent" to the annuitant, and such a "rent" will not be deemed a "use upon a use." Hanly v. Carroll, [1907] 1 Ir. R. 166—C.A.

3. DURATION.

Whether for Life or Perpetual.]—A testator devised all his property to his two sons, William and Thomas, equally. Portion of his property, which he specified, he charged item by item with certain annuities. He also gave to his two sons all other unmentioned property of his. The will contained the following direction: "My two sons Thomas and William are to pay out my property as follows: to pay to my wife yearly during her life 18*l.* 4*s.*; to my daughter Mrs. O'Neill yearly 36*l.* 8*s.*; to my son Tim Ward yearly 18*l.* 4*s.*; to said William Ward's eldest son yearly 3*l.* 12*s.*" The testator then directed that after the death of his wife her annuity was to be equally divided between Thomas, William, and Tim Ward and Mrs. O'Neill, and that after the decease of Mrs. O'Neill her annuity was to be divided equally between her surviving children. Should Tim

Ward not come home, or die without issue, his annuity was to be divided equally "on the surviving families, viz. Mrs. O'Neill, Thomas, William, and mother":—Held, that the annuities were for the lives of the annuitants only, and not perpetual. Ward v. Ward, [1903] 1 Ir. R. 211—V.C.

— A testatrix devised her interest in certain lands to trustees on trust "to permit my nephew R. B. O. to receive every year the sum of 100*l.* during his natural life, and after his death to the use of his son or sons as may be most deserving, or as he may by will appoint." The power of appointment was never exercised. R. B. O. left two sons who received the annuity during their lives and the life of the survivor. On the death of the survivor,—Held, that the annuity terminated with the death of the survivor of the two sons of R. B. O. Smith's Estate, In re, [1905] 1 Ir. R. 453—C.A.

Terminable or Perpetual.—By marriage settlement, L. R., being entitled to certain lands held under a bishop's lease for twenty-one years, customarily renewable, and also to certain other lands held under a lease for a term of sixty-one years, demised the former to the trustees of the settlement for the term of one hundred years, and the latter for a term of thirty years, upon trust, after the solemnisation of the intended marriage, for the said L. R. and his assigns, during the residue of the said terms of one hundred years and thirty years, if he should so long live, and from and after the decease of L. R., during the continuance of the said terms, in trust to permit T. N. (the intended wife), if she should survive L. R., yearly during as many years of the said term as she should survive L. R., to have, receive, and take out of the said premises an annual sum or yearly rentcharge of 300*l.*, as and for her jointure, and also the said annuity or yearly rentcharge of 300*l.* to be charged and chargeable on the said lands for ever, in trust, after the decease of T. N., for the issue of the marriage, in such shares as L. R. and T. N. should appoint, and in default of appointment share and share alike. The lands comprised in the bishop's lease were subsequently conveyed to L. R. in fee-simple:—Held, that the annuity was terminable by the expiration of the terms vested in the trustees. Finlay's Estate, In re, [1907] 1 Ir. R. 24—Wylie, J.

4. PAYMENT.

Payable out of Income—Arrears of Annuity—Charge on Corpus—Continuing Charge on Income.—A testatrix, after bequeathing certain legacies, devised and bequeathed all the residue of her estate to trustees upon trust to convert and invest the same, and out of the income thereof to pay annuities to three persons for their respective lives, including an annuity of 300*l.* to D., and "subject thereto" to pay the income of all the said moneys and investments to her sister during her life; and the testatrix directed her trustees after her sister's death to raise out of capital and pay certain pecuniary legacies, and "subject to the trusts aforesaid" to hold the trust premises and the income thereof in trust for certain persons in equal shares absolutely. D. died in 1902, and at his death his annuity was largely in arrears, as the income of the residuary estate had proved insufficient to pay the annuities:—Held, that, in so far as the annuity of D. was in arrear at his death, the annuity failed, the testatrix having shewn no intention in her will either to charge the annuities on corpus or to make the arrears of the annuities a continuing charge on income. Bigge, In re; Granville v. Moore, 76 L. J. Ch. 413; [1907] 1 Ch. 714; 96 L. T. 903—Neville, J.

The question whether an annuity is charged on corpus, or, if not so charged, whether it is payable out of current income only, or constitutes a continuing charge on income, depends in every case on the words of the particular will construed in their ordinary grammatical sense. Id.

Payment—Capital or Income.—See TENANT FOR LIFE AND REMAINDERMAN.

5. VALUATION.

Administration—Valuation of Annuity—Successive Annuitants—Arrears—Hotchpot.—Where a life annuity is given to persons in succession, and the estate being ascertained to be insufficient at some period after the testator's death, the annuity requires to be valued for the purposes of administration, the interest in future of such of the annuitants as may still be living are alone valued, and a prior annuitant is not required to bring into hotchpot sums already paid to him before the date fixed for the valuation to be made. Where the annuity of a prior annuitant who dies before a valuation is made is in arrear at his death, the arrears must be paid up in full out of the fund applicable to that purpose before a reversionary annuitant is entitled to claim anything, notwithstanding that the fund is thereby entirely exhausted. Todd v. Bielby (27 Beav. 353) and Potts v. Smith (39 L. J. Ch. 131; L. R. 8 Eq. 633) considered. Metcalf, In re; Metcalf v. Blencowe, 72 L. J. Ch. 786; [1903] 2 Ch. 424; 88 L. T. 727; 51 W. R. 650—Farwell, J.

Upon the construction of the will, the Court held that sums raised out of capital under a power to mortgage, and paid in satisfaction of prior annuities, need not be brought into hotchpot for the benefit of subsequent annuitants. Id.

6. COMMUTATION.

Commutation for Fixed Sum—Tenant for Life and Remaindermen—Capital and Income—Apportionment—Actuarial Values.—A testator gave property, subject to an annuity, to his daughter for life with remainder to her children. The annuitant agreed to take a fixed sum of 3,500*l.* for the annuity, which sum the daughter paid out of her own moneys:—Held, that the daughter was entitled to be repaid the 3,500*l.* out of the estate, and that it ought to be raised by sale or mortgage so as to throw a fair proportion of the burden on the tenant for life and remaindermen. Muffett, In re; Jones v. Mason (57 L. J. Ch. 1017; 39 Ch. D. 534), and Bacon, In re; Grissel v. Leathes (62 L. J. Ch. 445), followed. Dawson, In re; Arathoon v. Dawson (75 L. J. Ch. 604; [1906] 2 Ch. 211), not followed. Henry, In re; Gordon v. Gordon, 76 L. J. Ch. 74; [1907] 1 Ch. 30; 95 L. T. 776—Kekewich, J.

(a) TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

Final Character of Decision.]—A decision of the House of Lords upon a question of law is conclusive and binding upon the House itself. Nothing but an Act of Parliament can set right that which is alleged to be wrong in such decision. London Tramways Co. v. London County Council, 67 L. J. Q.B. 559; [1898] A.C. 375; 73 L. T. 361; 46 W. R. 609; 62 J. P. 675—H.L. (E.)

Certiorari—Jurisdiction.]—By the joint operation of section 12 of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, and section 86 of the Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877, there is no appeal to the House of Lords from an order of the Irish Court of Appeal affirming or discharging an order for the issue of a writ of certiorari. Reg. v. Barton, 71 L. J. P.C. 80; [1902] A.C. 268; 87 L. T. 82—H.L. (Ir.)

Practice—Concurrent Findings of Fact by Tribunals Below.]—There is no rule of practice that the House of Lords will not entertain an appeal on a question of fact where there have been concurrent findings in the Courts below. Observations in Gray v. Turnbull (L. R. 2 H.L. Sc. 53), The P. Caland (Owners) v. Glamorgan Steamship Co. (62 L. J. P. 41, 44; [1893] A.C. 207, 215), and McIntyre Bros. v. McGavin ([1893] A.C. 268, 275) explained. Montgomerie v. Wallace-James (No. 1), 73 L. J. P.C. 25; [1904] A.C. 73; 90 L. T. 1—H.L. (Sc.)

Common Law Court in Ireland—Interlocutory Order.]—No appeal lies to the House of Lords from an interlocutory order made in Ireland by a common law Court, or by the Court of Appeal

therefrom. Gosford (Earl) v. Irish Land Commission, 68 L. J. P.C. 69; [1899] A.C. 435; 81 L. T. 330—H.L. (Ir.)

Interlocutor of Court of Session.]—In cases arising in the Sheriff Court and appealed to the Court of Session the interlocutor of the Court of Session must contain all the findings of fact; for, if a fact is not found by the interlocutor appealed against, the House of Lords must, unless the parties agree to the fact not found, remit the cause to the Court of Session to find the fact in question. Glasgow Corporation v. M'Omish, [1898] A.C. 432—H.L. (Sc.)

Appeal from Several Interlocutors—Allowance of Appeal—Interlocutors not Argued—Form of Order.]—Where an appeal was brought from several interlocutors of the Court of Session in Scotland, but the appeal from one interlocutor only was argued, the defendants were held not to be entitled to an order for the reversal generally of the interlocutors appealed from, but only of that on which the House had heard arguments. Montgomerie v. Wallace-James (No. 2), 73 L. J. P.C. 116; [1904] A.C. 214—H.L. (Sc.)

(b) TO COURT OF APPEAL.

Statute.]—62 & 63 Vict. c. 6 is the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1899.

— 2 Edw. 7 c. 31 is the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1902.

“Criminal cause or matter”—Order to Pull down Building in London.]—A magistrate convicted a person of having erected a building beyond the general line of buildings in a street in London and made an order for the demolition thereof, under the provisions of the London Building Acts, 1894 and 1898, and he refused to state a Case for the opinion of the High Court. The King's Bench Division refused to grant a rule nisi for a mandamus to the magistrate to state a Case, but a rule nisi was granted by the Court of Appeal:—Held, that this was a “criminal cause or matter” within the meaning of section 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that the Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for a mandamus. Re v. D'Eyncourt, 85 L. T. 501; 20 Cox C.C. 68—C.A.

“Criminal cause or matter”—Recovery of General District Rate.]—Sections 6 and 22 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, apply to proceedings taken under section 256 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for the recovery of a general district rate made by an urban authority under that Act, and an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a judgment of the High Court, on a Case stated by Justices on the hearing of a complaint for non-payment of the rate, for such appeal is not an appeal “from a judgment of the said High Court in any criminal cause or matter” within the meaning of section 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Seaman v. Burley (65 L. J. M.C. 208; [1896] 2 Q.B. 344) distinguished. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton Urban Council, 68 L. J. Q.B.

Case Stated—Judgment Entered by Quarter Sessions before Hearing of Appeal.—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the Queen's Bench Division upon a Case stated under the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849, s. 11, notwithstanding that judgment has been entered by the Court of quarter sessions in conformity with the decision before the hearing of the appeal. Lodge v. Huddersfield Corporation (No. 2), 67 L. J. Q.B. 571; [1898] 1 Q.B. 859; 78 L. T. 582; 46 W. R. 482; 62 J. P. 515—C.A.

Special Case.—No appeal lies from the decision of the High Court upon a Special Case stated by an arbitrator with regard to a question of law arising in the course of the reference under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Knight and Tabernacle Permanent Building Society, In re (62 L. J. Q.B. 33; [1892] 2 Q.B. 613), followed. Shrewsbury (Countess) v. Shrewsbury (Earl), 23 T. L. R. 224—C.A.

— Order in "any matter not being an action" — Proceedings under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and Employers and Workmen Act, 1875—Time for Appealing—Order LVIII. rule 15.—The decision of a Divisional Court on Special Cases stated under section 164 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (as amended by section 11 of the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages) Act, 1880), being an order in a matter not being an action within Order LVIII. rule 15, no appeal can be brought from that decision to the Court of Appeal after the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the decision, except by special leave. Austin Friars Steamship Co. v. Strack, 75 L. J. K.B. 658; [1906] 2 K.B. 499; 94 L. T. 875; 70 J. P. 528; 22 T. L. R. 701—C.A.

Arbitration Clause in Statute—Objection to Jurisdiction of High Court.—The provision for arbitration contained in section 33 of the Tramways Act, 1870, ousts the jurisdiction of the High Court with regard to differences coming within the terms of the section. Where such a provision applies, objection to the jurisdiction of the High Court may be taken on appeal in the Court of Appeal, although it has not been taken at the trial. Norwich Corporation v. Norwich Electric Tramways Co., 75 L. J. K.B. 636; [1906] 2 K.B. 119; 95 L. T. 12; 54 W. R. 572; 70 J. P. 401; 4 L. G. R. 1114; 22 T. L. R. 553—C.A.

Judicial Separation—Divorce—Consolidation of Suits—Costs against Co-respondent.—A wife having filed a petition for judicial separation, on the ground of her husband's cruelty, the husband afterwards filed a petition for dissolution of the marriage. An order was made for the consolidation of the two suits, and they came on for trial together. The wife's charge against the husband was withdrawn, there being no evidence in support of it; and her petition was dismissed. On the husband's petition a decree nisi was made for dissolution of the marriage, with costs and damages against the co-respondent, and the decree was afterwards made absolute. Upon the taxation of the costs under the final decree, the co-respondent was ordered to pay the costs of the wife's petition:—

Held, that this order, not being an interlocutory order within section 1 of the Judicature Act, 1894, was part of the final decree, and that consequently an appeal against the order could be brought without the leave of the Court. Forbes-Smith v. Forbes-Smith, 70 L. J. P. 61; [1901] P. 258; 84 L. T. 789; 50 W. R. 6—C.A.

From Judge at Chambers—Order directing Arbitrator to State a Case—Appeal to Court of Appeal—"Matters of practice and procedure."

—An order of a Judge at chambers under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, directing an arbitrator to state a question of law arising in the course of a reference in the form of a Special Case for the opinion of the Court is not a matter of practice and procedure within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 4 of the Judicature Act, 1894, and therefore an appeal will not lie from it to the Court of Appeal. Frere and Staveley Taylor & Co. and North Shore Mill Co., In re, 74 L. J. K.B. 208; [1905] 1 K.B. 866; 92 L. T. 194; 53 W. R. 242; 21 T. L. R. 188—C.A.

Action Referred to Master with Consent of Parties—Appeal from Master to Court of Appeal.

—No appeal from the decision of a Master, to whom an action has been referred with the consent of the parties, under Order XIV. rule 7, lies direct to the Court of Appeal. Fraser v. Fraser (No. 1), 73 L. J. K.B. 6; [1904] 1 K.B. 56; 89 L. T. 491; 52 W. R. 147; 20 T. L. R. 54—C.A.

But a motion lies to a Divisional Court under Order XL. rules 6, 6A, to set aside the judgment which he has directed to be entered, and to enter some other judgment. Fraser v. Fraser (No. 2), 74 L. J. K.B. 183; [1905] 1 K.B. 368—C.A.

Amendment at Trial—Patent—Assignee's Right to Sue.—At the trial of an action for infringement of patent the Court held that the plaintiffs had no title to sue without joining other parties as co-plaintiffs. The plaintiffs having elected to amend by adding these parties, the Court gave the defendants leave to amend their defence on certain terms as to costs. On an appeal by the plaintiffs from this order, Held, that there was no order against which they could appeal. Bowden's Patents Syndicate v. Smith, 73 L. J. Ch. 776; [1904] 2 Ch. 122—C.A.

Interlocutory Order—Refusal to Commit—Liberty of the Subject.—By the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1894, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (b), no appeal lies without the leave of the Judge or of the Court of Appeal from an interlocutory order made by a Judge dismissing a motion to commit. Such an order is not within the exception contained in sub-clause (i) of that section. Bowden v. Yozall, 70 L. J. Ch. 5; [1901] 1 Ch. 1; 83 L. T. 419; 49 W. R. 247—C.A.

Transfer of Action to Commercial List.—Where a Judge of the Queen's Bench Division charged with commercial business orders the transfer of a cause to the Commercial List, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal upon the ground that the cause is not a commercial cause. Sea Insurance Co. v. Carr, 69 L. J. Q.B. 954; [1901] 1 K.B. 7; 83 L. T. 517; 49 W. R. 55; 9 Asp. M.C. 138; 6 Com. Cas. 11—C.A.

Moore*, 72 L. J. K.B. 539; [1903] 2 K.B. 140; 89 L. T. 8; 51 W. R. 648—C.A.

From Order as to Costs.—See COSTS.

Defect of Parties.—A member of an industrial and provident society became insane, and the society, purporting to act under section 29 of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1893, transferred a balance standing to the lunatic's credit in their books to the credit of his wife (who was also a member of the society) on the footing that she was a person whom they deemed proper to receive the balance on the lunatic's behalf. Guardians who had incurred expenses in relation to the lunatic then presented a petition to the County Court, to which the society were made respondents, but to which the wife was not a party, asking for an order for the payment of the balance to them to defray their expenses in relation to the lunatic. No objection was taken in the County Court that the wife had not been made a party to the proceedings, nor was it made a ground of appeal to the Divisional Court, and it was raised for the first time on behalf of the society in the Court of Appeal:—Held, that in those circumstances the point could not be taken in the Court of Appeal. Gloucester Union v. Gloucester Industrial Society, 5 L. G. R. 493; 71 J. P. 169—C.A.

(c) TO DIVISIONAL COURT.

Appeal from Judge at Chambers—Application for Prohibition to County Court—“Practice and procedure.”—An appeal from an order of a Judge at chambers upon an application for a writ of prohibition to a County Court is to a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division. Watson v. Petts (No. 1), 67 L. J. Q.B. 970; [1899] 1 Q.B. 54; 79 L. T. 330; 47 W. R. 68—C.A.

—“Matters of practice and procedure”—Claim against Railway Company for Compensation in Respect of Lands—Notice to Settle by Jury—Order for Trial in High Court.—An order of a Judge at chambers under section 41 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, for the trial in the High Court of a question of compensation in respect of lands falling within the operation of that section, is not a matter of practice and procedure within the meaning of section 1, subsection 4 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Procedure) Act, 1894, and an appeal from such an order lies to a Divisional Court under Order LIV. rule 23 of the Rules of the Supreme Court. Long v. Great Northern and City Railway, 71 L. J. K.B. 598; [1902] 1 K.B. 813; 86 L. T. 440; 50 W. R. 402—C.A.

2. INTERLOCUTORY OR FINAL.

Test.—In an action for damages for failure to carry out a contract an order was made that the action should be transferred to the non-jury list, “Questions of liability and breach of contract only to be tried. Rest of case (if any) to go to the Official Referee.” At the trial an order was made dismissing the action, on the ground that there was no contract binding on the defendants:—Held, that this order was a final order within Order LVIII. rules 3 and 15. Shubbrook v. Tufnell (9 Q.B. D. 621) followed. Salaman v. Warner (60 L. J. Q.B. 624; [1891] 1 Q.B. 734) not followed. Bozson v. Altrincham Urban Council (No. 1), 72 L. J. K.B. 271; [1903] 1 K.B. 547; 51 W. R. 337; 67 J. P. 397—C.A.

Per LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.—The test as to whether an order should be considered final or interlocutory is this: If the order finally disposes of the rights of the parties, it ought to be treated as final; if, on the other hand, further proceedings are necessitated, it ought to be treated as interlocutory. Ib.

Summons for Delivery of Solicitor's Bill of Costs and Taxation.—Upon an originating summons taken out by a client against his solicitor for the delivery of a bill of costs and taxation, the order, whether allowing or refusing the application, finally determines the question between the parties, and is a final order for the purpose of an appeal within Order LVIII. rule 3. The test laid down in Salaman v. Warner (60 L. J. Q.B. 624; [1891] 1 Q.B. 734) applied. Reeves & Co., In re, 71 L. J. Ch. 70; [1902] 1 Ch. 29; 85 L. T. 495; 50 W. R. 252—C.A.

Order Refusing Review of Taxation.—An order refusing a review of a taxation under the Solicitors Act, 1843, is an interlocutory order within the Judicature Act, 1894, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (b), from which no appeal lies without leave of the Judge or of the Court of Appeal. Furber, In re (43 Sol. School Board Election Petition—Order for Special Case to be Stated.—An order of a Judge at chambers upon an application under section 93, sub-section 7 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, for a Special Case to be stated in proceedings relating to a school board election petition, is an order on an interlocutory question arising in such petition, from which an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal. Harman v. Park (50 L. J. Q.B. 227; 6 Q.B.D. 323) followed. Monks-well (Lord) v. Thompson (No. 1), 67 L. J. Q.B. 243; [1898] 1 Q.B. 353; 77 L. T. 707—C.A.

And see next heading—LEAVE TO APPEAL.

Special Case Stated by Arbitrators—Opinion of Court—Right of Appeal.—Arbitrators stated a Special Case in which the question for the opinion of the Court was thus stated: "Whether our construction of the contracts upon the two points above stated is correct. If both points are correctly decided, this our award is to stand. If either or both points is or are wrongly decided, the matter is to be remitted to us to give effect to the true construction of the contract in our interim and final awards. The costs of the Special Case are referred to the Court":—Held, that the Special Case was stated under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and not under section 7, and that therefore an appeal would not lie to the Court of Appeal from the decision of the High Court. Quare, whether the appeal was a final or an interlocutory appeal. Holland Steamship Co. and Bristol Steam Navigation Co., In re, 95 L. T. 769; 23 T. L. R. 59—C.A.

3. LEAVE TO APPEAL.

Expiration of Time for Appealing—Mistake of Counsel—Discretion of Court to Allow Appeal to be Brought.—Where an appeal to the Court of Appeal from an order in a matter not being an action has not been brought within fourteen days as prescribed by Order LVIII. rule 15, that Court will not grant special leave to appeal under the rule on the ground that the delay has been caused by a mistake of the appellant's counsel. Helsby, In re; Trustee, ex parte (63 L. J. Q.B. 265; [1894] 1 Q.B. 742; 9 R. 139), followed. Coles and Ravenshear, In re, 76 L. J. K.B. 27; [1907] 1 K.B. 1; 95 L. T. 750; 23 T. L. R. 32—C.A.

Order of Divisional Court Varying Findings of Official Referee—"Right of appeal to the High Court from any Court or person."—An application to a Divisional Court to vary the findings of an official referee is a case "where there is a right of appeal to the High Court from any Court or person" within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 5 of the Judicature Act, 1894, and the determination thereof by the Divisional Court is final, unless leave to appeal is given by that Court or by the Court of Appeal. Daglish v. Barton, 68 L. J. Q.B. 1044; [1900] 1 Q.B. 284; 81 L. T. 551; 48 W. R. 50—C.A.

Refusal to Commit—Liberty of the Subject.—By the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1894, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (b), no appeal lies without the leave of the Judge or of the Court of Appeal from an interlocutory order made by a Judge dismissing a motion to commit. Such an order is not within the exception contained in sub-clause (i.) of that section. Bowden v. Yowall, 70 L. J. Ch. 5; [1901] 1 Ch. 1; 83 L. T. 419—C.A.

Order Setting Aside Award.—An order setting aside an award on the ground of the conduct of the arbitrator is an interlocutory order within the meaning of rules 3 and 15 of Order LVIII. Croasdell and Cammell, Laird & Co., In re, 75 L. J. K.B. 769; [1906] 2 K.B. 569; 95 L. T. 441; 54 W. R. 620; 22 T. L. R. 759—C.A.

Refusal of Divisional Court to Grant Leave—Appeal from County Court—Jurisdiction of Court of Appeal.—The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction under section 1, sub-section 5 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Procedure) Act, 1894, notwithstanding the provisions of section 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, to grant leave to appeal from the decision of a Divisional Court on a judgment of a County Court where the Divisional Court has refused to grant leave to appeal. Godman v. Moses, 69 L. J. Q.B. 823; 83 L. T. 46; 48 W. R. 689—C.A.

From Inferior Court—Leave of Judge—Right to Appeal from Divisional Court to Court of Appeal—By Leave of Court of Appeal.—"In all cases where there is a right of appeal."—The words "in all cases where there is a right of appeal to the High Court from any Court," in section 1, sub-section 5 of the Judicature Act, 1894, include cases in which leave to appeal has been given by a County Court Judge, and the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction in such cases to give leave to appeal from the Divisional Court, notwithstanding that leave has been refused by the Divisional Court. Moore, Nettlefold & Co. v. Singer Manufacturing Co., 73 L. J. K.B. 457; [1904] 1 K.B. 820; 90 L. T. 469; 52 W. R. 385; 68 J. P. 369; 20 T. L. R. 366—C.A.

Appeal in Forma Pauperis—Certificate of Counsel.—On an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis it is not necessary that the application should be supported by the certificate of an independent counsel who did not appear for the applicant in the Court below. Mitchell v. New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Co., 89 L. T. 83—P.C.

Application—Affidavit—Respondent—Leave to Appear in Forma Pauperis.—A respondent to an appeal may apply ex parte, by way of original motion, to the Court of Appeal for leave to appear in forma pauperis upon an affidavit that he is not worth 25*l.*, his wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the cause or matter only excepted. The affidavit need not be accompanied by a case or opinion of counsel. Handford v. Clarke (No. 1), 76 L. J. K.B. 76; [1907] 1 K.B. 181; 96 L. T. 175; 23 T. L. R. 127—C.A.

4. HOW BROUGHT.

Notice—Party Directly Affected—Bankruptcy—Receiving Order—Stay of Proceedings—Creditors—Appeal of Official Receiver.—Upon an appeal by the official receiver against an order staying proceedings under a receiving order in bankruptcy, the petitioning creditor is a party "directly affected by the appeal" within Order LVIII. rule 2, and he ought to be served with notice of the appeal unless he has assented to the order in such a way that he must be taken to have waived his right to be served. The other creditors who appeared when the order appealed against was made are not parties directly affected by the appeal, and need not be served. W. L. (a debtor), In re, 70 L. J. K.B. 699; [1901] 2 K.B. 354; 84 L. T. 666; 8 Manson, 247—C.A.

Cross-notice of Appeal—Different Subject-Matter.—Where the claim and the counterclaim in an action are addressed to separate and distinct matters, and the defendant appeals against the order on the counterclaim, it is not proper for the plaintiff to appeal against the order on the claim by means of a cross-notice under the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Order LVIII. rule 6. He should give a substantive notice of appeal under rule 1. If, however, the Judge has, with the acquiescence of the parties, linked the claim and counterclaim together so that one decision disposes of them both, the cross-notice may be treated as a distinct notice of appeal. National Society for the Distribution of Electricity by Secondary Generators v. Gibbs, 69 L. J. Ch. 457; [1900] 2 Ch. 280; 82 L. T. 443; 48 W. R. 499—C.A.

5. TIME.

Extension of Time for Appealing to Court of Appeal—Jurisdiction.—A Judge at chambers cannot make an order extending the time for appealing to the Court of Appeal, and an order so made is of no effect. Sellar v. Bright, 91 L. T. 9; 20 T. L. R. 586—C.A.

6. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

Stay of Execution Pending Appeal—Jurisdiction of Court of Appeal.—The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to hear an application for a stay of execution in a cause in which an appeal has been entered in that Court, although no application for a stay has previously been made to the Judge who tried the cause. Brown v. Brook, 86 L. T. 373—C.A.

Staying Proceedings Pending Appeal to House of Lords.—The Court of Appeal refused an application to stay an order, directing enquiries as to the market value of shares in a company pending an appeal to the House of Lords. Shaw v. Holland, 69 L. J. Ch. 621; [1900] 2 Ch. 305; 82 L. T. 782; 7 Manson, 409—C.A.

7. JURISDICTION AT HEARING.

Variation of Order of Court of First Instance—No Cross-Appeal—Will.—Where a Court of Appeal varies the order of the Court below on a point not raised at the trial, and that point is not made the subject of a cross-appeal to the King in Council, the appeal being against the order as a whole, no order can be made with respect to it. Karunaratne v. Ferdinandus, 71 L. J. P.C. 76; [1902] A.C. 405; 86 L. T. 329—P.C.

A testator's next-of-kin presented a petition for the revocation of probate of an alleged will on the grounds of undue influence and that the testator was not of sound mind. The Court of first instance ordered revocation. On appeal by the executrix the Supreme Court varied the order by declaring the will valid as to the personal estate but invalid as to the real estate of the testator, no such question having been raised below. The executrix appealed to the King in Council, but there was no cross-appeal by the heirs or next-of-kin:—Held, that, though the appeal must be dismissed, the course taken by the Supreme Court was not correct unless that Court were prepared to pronounce against the will, but only forebore to do so because the testator's heirs were content with less. Id.

On the principle stated in The Tasmania (15 App. Cas. 223), a Court of Appeal ought only to decide in favour of an appellant on a ground then put forward for the first time, if it is satisfied that it has complete possession of the facts. Id.

Varying Order in Matter as to which no Notice of Appeal.—The defendant appealed against the whole of the order of Court below except one declaration. The plaintiffs gave no notice of appeal:—Held, that the Court had power, under Order LVIII. rule 4, to vary the order of the Court below by substituting a different declaration in the place of that in respect of which there was no appeal. Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, 70 L. J. Ch. 828; [1901] 2 Ch. 671; 85 L. T. 325—C.A.

Assessor—Opinion of Assessor—Reasons for Opinion—Admissibility of, on Hearing of Appeal.—Where a trial takes place before a Judge, assisted by an assessor, and the assessor has given his opinion to the Judge, upon an appeal from the decision of the Judge the Court of Appeal has power to consider the opinion given by the assessor, and the reasons, if any, stated by him for that opinion. Hattersley & Sons v. Hodgson, Lim., 21 T. L. R. 178—C.A.

8. EVIDENCE.

Judge's Notes—Practice.—In appeals from the Chancery Division in witness actions it is the duty of solicitors to apply to the Court of Appeal in good time for the Judge's notes of evidence in order that the Court of Appeal may apply to the Judge for them. Batt & Co.'s Trade Mark, In re, 67 L. J. Ch. 579; [1898] 2 Ch. 482, 701; 79 L. T. 206, 298 n.—C.A.

Findings of Judge—Questions of Fact—Inferences of Fact.—When a Judge after trying a case upon viva voce evidence comes to a conclusion regarding a specific and definite matter of fact, his finding ought not to be reversed by a Court that has not the same opportunity of seeing and hearing the witnesses unless it is so clearly against the weight of the testimony as to amount to a manifest defeat of justice. The same rule does not apply, at least in the same degree, where the conclusion is an inference of fact. Where the decisive finding is a deduction from facts hardly disputed or easily ascertained, the appellate tribunal is in as good a position for arriving at a correct conclusion as the Judge appealed from, and it would be an undue restriction of the functions of the former if it were to hold itself bound by what has been found by the latter. The Gairloch, [1899] 2 Ir. R. 1—C.A.

Point as to Evidence not Raised in Court Below.—The Court of Appeal will not entertain technical objections to the admissibility of documentary evidence which were not taken in the Court below, and which if taken might have been met by calling further evidence. Bradshaw v. Waddington, 71 L. J. Ch. 627; [1902] 2 Ch. 480; 86 L. T. 726; 50 W. R. 561—C.A.

Action Tried by Judge Sitting without Jury—Evidence—Reversing Judgment on Question of Fact.—The hearing of an appeal from a decision of a Judge sitting without a jury is a re-hearing of the case, and it is the duty of the Court of Appeal to reconsider the evidence, and, if the circumstances warrant, to differ from the Judge even on a question of fact turning on the credibility of the witnesses. Coghlan v. Cumberland, 67 L. J. Ch. 402; [1898] 1 Ch. 704; 78 L. T. 540—C.A.

9. NEW TRIAL.

Jurisdiction to Order New Trial.—See PRACTICE.

New Trial Ordered by Court of Appeal—Competency of Appeal to the House of Lords.—An appeal without leave lies to the House of Lords from an order of the Court of Appeal for a new trial of a suit in which a decree nisi has been granted by the Divorce Court on the verdict of a jury. Butchart v. Butchart and Hill, 70 L. J. P. 29; [1901] A.C. 266; 84 L. T. 209—H.L. (E.)

Entering Judgment for Defendant.—Where the Court of Appeal has set aside a verdict for the plaintiff and ordered a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, if, on an appeal against that decision by the plaintiff, the House of Lords comes to the opinion that there is no evidence to go the jury, they will order judgment to be entered for the defendant, though there has been no cross-appeal on his part, instead of sending the case for a new trial. Ibo Syndicate v. Wyler, 87 L. T. 83; 51 W. R. 320—H.L. (E.)

Consent Order—New Trial.—Where both parties to an appeal to the House of Lords agree to a new trial the application must be made to the House itself, and not to the Appeal Committee, and a proper consent be filed. Hannah v. Hunter, 73 L. J. P.C. 72; [1904] A.C. 379—H.L. (Sc.)

Costs.—See infra, COSTS.

10. COSTS.

Company—Winding-up—Dismissal of Petition—Unsuccessful Appeal—Two Sets of Contributories Opposing Petition.—On an appeal against an order made by a Judge on a winding-up petition in which, according to the established practice, one set of costs has been allowed between the creditors and contributories respectively who supported the winning side, if the appellant does not wish to run the risk of incurring additional costs by asking for the discharge or modification of the order so far as it gave those costs, he must make it clear by his notice of appeal that he does not ask for that; and if the notice of appeal goes to the whole order of the Court below, he must write to the creditors or contributories, as the case may be, or to their solicitors, and inform them that he does not propose to ask for an order which would affect the part of the order of the Court below under which they got their costs. If the creditors or contributories choose to appear on the appeal after receiving this notice, and the order of the Court below is affirmed, the rule as to allowing one set of costs only between them respectively will be applied in the Court of Appeal. New Gas Co., In re (5 Ch. D. 703), explained. Ibo Investment Trust, Lim., In re, 72 L. J. Ch. 661; [1903] 2 Ch. 373; 88 L. T. 752; 51 W. R. 593; 10 Manson, 309—C.A.

Will—Construction of—Trustees—Right to Appear.—According to the established practice in an appeal upon the construction of a will, trustees served with notice of appeal are entitled to appear by counsel and to be paid their costs of appearance; but the Taxing Master in taxing the costs should allow a moderate fee only in the case of trustees not required to take any active part in argument. Semble, per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., there is no reason why trustees who are neutral should appear in such an appeal by separate counsel. Carroll v. Graham, 74 L. J. Ch. 398; [1905] 1 Ch. 478; 92 L. T. 66; 53 W. R. 549—C.A.

Trustees—Costs of Appearance of—Construction of Will.—Where the trustees of a will had been duly served in the ordinary course with notice of appeal in an action relating to the construction of the will, no intimation having at the same time been given to them that their appearance at the hearing would not be expected, and they accordingly appeared by separate counsel thereat—who was not, however, in the events which happened, called upon to take any part in the proceedings or to assist the Court in any way—they were held to be entitled to have their costs of appearance, notwithstanding the decision in Carroll v. Graham (74 L. J. Ch. 398; [1905] 1 Ch. 478). Catterson v. Clark, 95 L. T. 42—C.A.

Deed of Separation.—Trustees were not allowed the costs of an appeal by the wife against her husband on a question as to whether income tax could be deducted from an allowance under a deed of separation. Barry's Trusts, In re; Barry v. Smart, 75 L. J. Ch. 676; [1906] 2 Ch. 358; 95 L. T. 165—C.A.

Shorthand Notes.—The costs of copies of shorthand notes of evidence taken at the trial will be allowed on an appeal where such copies are necessary to enable the Court to follow the argument. Castner Kellner Alkali Co. v. Commercial Development Corporation, 68 L. J. Ch. 402; [1899] 1 Ch. 803; 80 L. T. 476; 47 W. R. 534—C.A.

—Costs of shorthand notes of evidence will only be allowed by the Court of Appeal in very special cases. Goldberg v. Liverpool Corporation, 82 L. T. 362—C.A.

Shorthand Note of Judgment.—Costs in the Court of Appeal include the costs of shorthand notes of the judgment in the Court below without express mention. De Falbe, In re; Ward v. Taylor, 70 L. J. Ch. 286; [1901] 1 Ch. 523—C.A.

Costs—Copies of Material Documents for the Use of the Court—Affidavits.—Where an appeal is brought, office copies of affidavits are prima facie sufficient, and, if on any appeal further copies are made for the use of the learned Judges of the Court of Appeal, that Court should be asked at the time to allow them; and unless the Court is asked to, and does allow such copies, the Taxing Master properly disallows the costs thereof. Bollason's Registered Design, In re, 78 L. T. 511—C.A.

House of Lords—Court Equally Divided.—Where their Lordships were equally divided in favour of affirming and reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, the judgment of that Court was affirmed without costs, following the rule laid down in Eastern Steamship Co. v. Smith (unreported). Paquin v. Beaucherk, 75 L. J. K.B. 895; [1906] A.C. 148; 94 L. T. 350; 54 W. R. 521; 22 T. L. R. 395—H.L. (Ex.).

Security for Costs—Motion for New Trial.—The Court of Appeal will no longer act upon the general rule of practice laid down in Heckscher v. Crosley (60 L. J. Q.B. 75; [1891] 1 Q.B. 224), not to require security for costs to be given by a party moving for a new trial. Wightwick v. Pope, 71 L. J. K.B. 709; [1902] 2 K.B. 99; 86 L. T. 750; 50 W. R. 531—C.A.

The practice laid down in Heckscher v. Crosley (60 L. J. Q.B. 75; [1891] 1 Q.B. 224), that no security for costs is required to be given by a party moving in the Court of Appeal for a new trial, after trial of an action with a jury, under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1890, applies to a motion for a new trial of a petition for a divorce. Rickaby v. Rickaby and Swift, 70 L. J. P. 24; [1901] P. 134; 84 L. T. 182—C.A.

—“Satisfaction of Judge in Chambers.”—In orders for security for the costs of appeals in the Chancery Division, the practice, as in the King's Bench Division, is to require that the security be approved by the Judge in chambers. Hope v. Hope, 86 L. T. 863—C.A.

Workmen's Compensation Act.—The rule that no security for costs is required on an application to the Court of Appeal under the Supreme Court of Jurisdiction Act, 1890, for the new trial of an action in the King's Bench Division will not be extended to an appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, which, if successful, will practically result in a new trial of the case. Harwood v. Abrahams, 70 L. J. K.B. 746; [1901] 2 K.B. 304; 84 L. T. 857—C.A. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

Dividends on Shares—Company's Articles—Express Stipulation against Apportionment.—

A testator bequeathed certain shares in a company to his trustees upon trust to pay “the income arising therefrom” to his wife for life. The testator died on January 4, 1906. Some time after his death a dividend for the financial year ending October 31, 1905, was declared. The full dividend for the next financial year was not yet declared. The company's articles provided (inter alia) as follows: Article 90: “Every dividend, whether arising from past or current profits, shall for all purposes be deemed to accrue and fall due upon the day on which it is declared, and not before.” Article 91: “Every dividend shall belong and be paid (subject to the company's lien) to those members who shall be on the register at the date when every such dividend is declared, notwithstanding any subsequent transfer or transmission of shares.”—Held, that, as between the testator's estate and the widow, these articles did not amount to an express stipulation against apportionment within section 7 of the Apportionment Act, 1870, and the dividends were therefore apportionable. Whether the express stipulation referred to in section 7 can be contained elsewhere than in a will or other instrument of gift, quære. Oppenheimer, In re; Oppenheimer v. Boatman, 76 L. J. Ch. 287; [1907] 1 Ch. 399; 96 L. T. 681; 14 Manson, 139—Swinfen Eady, J. And see Lysaght, In re; Lysaght v. Lysaght, 67 L. J. Ch. 65; [1898] 1 Ch. 115; 77 L. T. 637—C.A. (under Will).

Direction Excluding Apportionment—Bequest of Dividends “as received.”—A testator directed that certain shares in a company “shall be retained by my trustees during the survivance of my wife, and the dividends accruing from said shares shall, as received, be paid over to her.” The testator died on July 7, 1905, survived by his wife. The accounts of the company had to be made up yearly on April 30, and it was the practice to hold the annual meeting of the company in the following October. In October, 1905, a dividend for the year ending April 30 was declared, and was afterwards paid:—Held, that the use of the words “as received” amounted to an express direction which excluded apportionment within the meaning of section 7 of the Apportionment Act, 1870, and that the whole dividend fell to be paid to the widow. Macpherson's Trustees v. Macpherson, [1907] S. C. 1067—Ct. of Sess.

1. REFERENCES BY CONSENT.

(1) SUBMISSION.

Submission—Statute of Limitations.—A submission to arbitration does not per se exclude the right of either party to raise the defence of the Statute of Limitations; but if it be intended to exclude such a defence, an express term to that effect must be imported into the agreement of submission. Astley and Tyldesley Coal Co. and Tyldesley Coal Co., In re, 68 L. J. Q.B. 252; 80 L. T. 116—D.

Application to Revoke Submission—Building Contract—Submission of Disputes to Architect—Litigation Between Builder and Architect—Action of Fraud.—Where, by the terms of a building contract, all questions are submitted to the arbitration of an architect appointed by the building owners, the mere fact that the builders, or those claiming through them, bring an action against the architect charging him with fraud in relation to the contract does not entitle them to revoke the submission. Baring and Doulton, In re (61 L. J. Q.B. 704), distinguished. Belcher v. Roedean School, 85 L. T. 468—C.A.

Agreement to Submit to Jurisdiction of Court having Jurisdiction Abroad.—By a policy of insurance entered into at Budapest, in Hungary, a foreigner resident abroad effected an insurance with an English company, having its head office at London, upon his own life in favour of his wife. The policy contained a condition that, for all disputes which might arise out of the contract of insurance, all the parties interested expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the Courts having jurisdiction in such matters of Budapest. In an action upon the policy against the insurance company by an assignee of the policy, Held, that the condition was a "submission" within the meaning of section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, so as to entitle the insurance company to a stay of the action. Austrian-Lloyd Steamship Co. v. Gresham Life Assurance Society, 72 L. J. K.B. 211; [1903] 1 K.B. 249; 88 L. T. 6; 51 W. R. 402—C.A.

(2) STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

"Court"—County Court.—Whether the word "Court" in section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, includes a County Court, quære. Runciman v. Smyth, 20 T. L. R. 625—D. See Morriston Tinplate Co. v. Brooker, 77 L. J. K.B. 197; [1908] 1 K. B. 403—D.

Matters in Dispute coming within Arbitration Clause—Fraud—Construction of Contract.—On a motion to stay an action on the ground that the matters in dispute come within a clause in a contract for the execution of works agreeing to refer matters in dispute, arising in the settlement of the accounts, to arbitration, the construction of the clause is for the Court. The Court will not stay the action where it is of opinion—first, that the plaintiff is suing upon substantial and bona fide causes of action which do not come within the clause; or secondly, that there are serious and difficult questions of law involved in the action not proper to be submitted to the determination of an arbitrator; or thirdly, that a cause of action based upon fraud actual or constructive, is bona fide sued upon; or fourthly, that in the exercise of its judicial discretion it ought not to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration. Vaudrey v. Simpson (65 L. J. Ch. 369; [1896] 1 Ch. 166) followed. Workman v. Belfast Harbour Commissioners, [1899] 2 Ir. R. 234—Q.B. D.

Claim under Accident Policy—Arbitration—Negligence.—P. was insured with the defendant company to the extent of 100l. against liability for injuries caused to third persons through the negligence of his servants, it being a condition precedent to his right to sue the company under the policy that he should accept arbitration if required. A sum of 270l. having been awarded against him in respect of a cause of action contemplated by the policy, P. alleged that the company had been guilty of negligence in the conduct of the defence, and, refusing arbitration, sought in this action to recover from the company the full sum of 270l., together with the costs on both sides of the former proceedings. The company was willing to pay the 100l., together with the costs on both sides, upon such sum being accepted in final settlement. Otherwise they reserved the right to defend as to the entire amount claimed in this action, inasmuch as they charged that P.'s alleged interference in the defence of the former action was the cause of the award of damages against him;—Held, on motion to stay proceedings, that as the substantial portion of the present action was founded upon negligence, the Court should not stay the proceedings. Patteson v. Northern Accident Insurance Co., [1901] 2 Ir. R. 262—Q.B. D.

Master and Servant—Agreement to Refer Disputes—Wrongful Dismissal.—An agreement by the defendants to employ the plaintiff as their agent contained a provision that any dispute arising in connection with the agreement should be referred to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the arbitration clause in the by-laws of the Liverpool Corn Trade Association. That clause provided that all disputes arising out of transactions connected with the trade should be referred in the manner therein provided. Disputes arose between the parties, which were referred to arbitration and resulted in an award adverse to the plaintiff, and the defendants dismissed him from their employment. He brought an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held, that the matters in dispute in the action were disputes arising in connection with the agreement, and the action ought to be stayed under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Reishaw v. Queen Anne Mansions Co. (66 L. J. Q.B. 496; [1897] 1 Q.B. 662) followed. Parry v. Liverpool Malt Co., 69 L. J. Q.B. 161; [1900] 1 Q.B. 339; 81 L. T. 621—C.A.

Per LINDLEY, M.R.—Davis v. Starr (58 L. J. Ch. 808; 41 Ch. D. 242) was decided upon an erroneous view of the facts. Ib.

Arbitration Clause in Charterparty—Bill of Lading—Charterer the Holder of Bill of Lading—Cesser Clause—Action for Demurrage by Shipowners against Charterers.—By a clause in a charterparty it was provided that delay in loading arising from certain specified causes should not be counted as part of the lay days, and that any dispute arising under that clause "in the loading" of the vessel should be settled by arbitration in the Argentine Republic. The charterparty contained the usual cesser clause. A cargo was shipped by the charterers, at a port in the Argentine Republic, under a bill of lading which incorporated all the terms and exceptions of the charterparty and gave the shipowners an absolute lien on the cargo for freight, demurrage, and all other charges. There was delay in loading, which the charterers alleged, but the shipowners denied, arose from the causes specified in the charterparty. At the port of discharge the shipowners claimed a lien on the cargo for demurrage at the port of loading, and they brought this action against the charterers, who were the holders of the bill of lading, for a declaration that they were entitled to the lien. The charterers applied for a stay of proceedings in order that the dispute might be referred to arbitration under the clause in the charterparty:—Held, that the arbitration clause was binding between the parties, and that the dispute came within that clause. Runciman v. Smyth (20 T. L. R. 625) overruled. Temperley Steam Shipping Co. v. Smyth, 74 L. J. K.B. 876; [1905] 2 K.B. 791; 93 L. T. 471; 54 W. R. 150; 10 Com. Cas. 301; 10 Asp. M.C. 123; 21 T. L. R. 739—C.A.

Authority of Master—Lloyd's Salvage Agreement—Committee of Lloyd's.—The master of two steamships signed an agreement known as "Lloyd's Salvage Agreement," by clause 1 whereof they agreed to perform salvage services to another steamship for a fixed sum, and that in the event of any dispute arising as to the adequacy or otherwise of such sum, the remuneration should be fixed by the Committee of Lloyd's. By another clause (11) (4) of the agreement it was provided that the Committee of Lloyd's might itself object to the sum named in the salvage agreement. The owners of the salving steamers instituted salvage actions in the Admiralty Court, whereon the defendants applied to have the actions stayed under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. The Court refused to stay the actions:—Held, that the discretion given by section 4 of the Arbitration Act had been rightly exercised, upon the ground that there is great doubt whether the master of a vessel has authority to bind his owners to arbitration. Held, also, by RIGBY, L.J., that the fact that the Committee of Lloyd's were to be the arbitrators, and that it also had the right to send the matter to arbitration, was a good ground for refusing to stay the actions. Quere, whether the master of a vessel has authority to bind the owners to submit to arbitration. The City of Calcutta, 79 L. T. 517; 8 Asp. M.C. 442—C.A.

Insurance—Reference of Dispute—Condition Precedent to Right to Sue.—The Railway Passengers Assurance Company's Act, 1864, provided by section 3 that any question arising on any contract of insurance should, if either party required it, be referred to arbitration; and by section 16 that, if there should be any question or difference as to the liability of the company, it should, if either the company or the persons claiming required it, and as a condition precedent to the enforcing of any claim to which the question or difference related, be referred to arbitration. The Railway Passengers Assurance (Consolidation) Act, 1892, repealed the Act of 1864, but provided by section 7 that contracts made with the company and in force at the date of the repeal should be valid and effectual to all intents as if the repealing Act had not been passed, and that arbitrations pending or existing at the date of such repeal should not be prejudicially affected by the passing of the Act. A policy purporting to be made under the Act of 1864 contained a clause providing that any question as to the liability of the company to pay the sum assured should, if the company required it, be referred to arbitration in the manner specified by that Act. The legal representative of a person who had insured his life with the defendant company having made a claim against the company, the company disputed liability and served a notice demanding arbitration. The claimant nominated an arbitrator, but an objection to this arbitrator was raised by the company. The claimant then brought an action upon the policy. The company took out a summons to stay proceedings in the action:—Held, that the rights of the company under the policy to require an arbitration in the manner specified by the Act of 1864 were preserved by the Act of 1892, and that, as the conduct of the company before action brought was such as to entitle them to say that under the policy arbitration was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right of action, section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, enabled the Court to grant the company's application for a stay of the action. Hodson v. Railway Passengers Assurance Co., 73 L. J. K.B. 1001; [1904] 2 K.B. 833; 91 L. T. 648—C.A.

Reference to Three Arbitrators—Stay of Action.—Where an agreement provides that matters in dispute shall be referred to three persons, one to be appointed by each of the parties and the third by the two so chosen, and one of the parties brings an action against the other party with reference to a matter in dispute under the agreement, the Court has power, under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, to stay the action. Smith and Service, In re (59 L. J. Q.B. 533; 25 Q.B. D. 545), explained. Manchester Ship Canal Co. v. Pearson, 69 L. J. Q.B. 852; [1900] 2 Q.B. 606; 83 L. T. 45; 48 W. R. 689—C.A.

"Step in Proceedings"—Attendance upon

Hearing of Summons for Directions.—Where upon the hearing of a summons for directions taken out under Order XXX. the defendant in an action appears and an order is made in his favour, as, for example, for discovery—this constitutes a “step in the proceedings” by the defendant, so as to preclude him from subsequently applying under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, to stay the action. Chappell v. North (60 L. J. Q.B. 554; [1891] 2 Q.B. 252) followed. County Theatres and Hotels, Lim. v. Knowles, 71 L. J. K.B. 351; [1902] 1 K.B. 480; 86 L. T. 132—C.A.

— Attending Summons for Directions.—A defendant who attends a summons for directions, upon which an order is made with his assent for the delivery of a defence, is to be deemed to have taken a “step in the proceedings” and to have debarred himself from applying for a stay of proceedings under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. County Theatres and Hotels, Lim. v. Knowles (71 L. J. K.B. 351; [1902] 1 K.B. 480) followed. Richardson v. Le Maitre, 72 L. J. Ch. 779; [1903] 2 Ch. 222; 88 L. T. 626—Swinfen Eady, J.

— Motion for Receiver—Filing Affidavits in Opposition.—The mere filing of affidavits in answer to affidavits filed in support of a motion for the appointment of a receiver in an action for dissolution of partnership is not taking “a step in the proceedings” within section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, so as to preclude the Court from referring all matters in dispute to arbitration. Zalinoff v. Hammond, 67 L. J. Ch. 370; [1898] 2 Ch. 92; 78 L. T. 456—Stirling, J.

(3) ARBITRATOR.

Powers of—Amendment of Pleadings.—Disputes having arisen between the plaintiffs and the defendants, it was agreed between them “that all points in dispute in reference to the contract for the sale and purchase of S. F.” should be referred to the arbitration of some practical man. Points of claim and defence and counterclaim with particulars were delivered, and re-delivered on being amended, between the parties:—Held, that these documents were in the nature of pleadings or particulars, and could be amended by the arbitrator in his discretion, and all points in dispute between the parties relating to the subject-matter could be so raised, although not in the first instance disclosed by such documents. Lloyd (Edward) v. Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co., 85 L. T. 162—P.

Negligence—Building Contract—Architect—Quasi-Arbitrator—Cause of Action.—A building owner employed an architect to measure up certain works to be done by a builder under a building contract. The building contract provided that the architect should give certificates upon which payments were to be made to the builder by the building owner. As regards, first, discrepancies between drawings and specifications; secondly, the quality of materials used and work done; thirdly, the appearance of defects within six months after completion of the works—all questions relating to these matters were left to the sole jurisdiction of the architect.

Subject to these provisions, in case the builder should be dissatisfied with any certificate given or withheld by the architect, or in case of any difference arising between the building owner or the architect on his behalf and the builder, as to any other matter arising under the building contract, the question was to be referred to a special referee. By clause 20 the certificate of the architect or award of the referee shewing the final balance was to be conclusive evidence of the works having been duly completed:—Held (per A. L. SMITH, M.R., and COLLINS, L.J.; ROMER, L.J., dissenting), that under clause 20 of this contract the architect was in the position of an arbitrator, and was not liable in an action for negligence in giving certificates for work done. Chambers v. Goldthorpe, 70 L. J. K.B. 482; [1901] 1 K.B. 624; 84 L. T. 444; 49 W. R. 401—C.A.

Disqualification—Interest—Member of Town Council.—By a clause of reference in a contract entered into by the town council of a burgh for the mason work of a building, the parties agreed to refer disputes which might arise under the contract to an arbiter named. The arbiter named was afterwards appointed Dean of Guild, and became ex officio a member of the town council:—Held, first, that he was thereby disqualified from acting as arbiter; secondly, that this disqualification might be pleaded by the town council; and thirdly, that it was not removed by his ceasing to hold the office of Dean of Guild. Edinburgh Magistrates v. Lownie, 5 F. 711—Ct. of Sess.

— Barrister—Named Arbitrator.—An agreement contained a clause providing that all disputes arising in respect of it should be referred to the arbitration of a certain barrister. In the course of the arbitration a charge of misconduct was made against a firm of solicitors, or their authorised representative, who were clients of the barrister:—Held, on motion to restrain the continuance of the proceedings before the named arbitrator, that, there being no charge of incompetence or unfitness or bias against the arbitrator, the motion could not succeed. Jackson v. Barry Railway ([1893] 1 Ch. 238) and Eckersley v. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board ([1894] 2 Q.B. 667) followed. Bright v. River Plate Construction Co., 70 L. J. Ch. 59; [1900] 2 Ch. 835; 82 L. T. 793; 49 W. R. 132; 64 J.P. 695—Cozens-Hardy, J.

— Engineer to one of Parties Named as Arbitrator—Letters by Engineer Expressing Opinion on Matters in Dispute.—By the contract for the construction of a pier the contractor and his employers agreed to refer any question arising out of the contract to the employers' engineer as arbitrator. After the pier had been completed, a question arose as to whether a sum for extra work was due to the contractor, and the engineer wrote letters to the employers (in answer to a request by them) giving a detailed opinion to the effect that the greater part of the sum in question was not due to the contractor:—Held, that the engineer had not disqualified himself from acting as arbitrator, there being nothing in his letters to shew that he would not, as arbitrator, regard the question in dispute with an open mind. Halliday v. Hamilton's Trustees, 5 F. 800—Ct. of Sess.

Fees—Statement of, in Awards.]—An arbitrator or umpire ought not to state his award in such a way as to deprive the parties of their right to challenge the amount charged by him for his services. Where therefore an umpire fixed by his award a lump sum as costs, including therein his own and the arbitrators' fees, the award was remitted back for him to state how much he awarded to himself and how much to the arbitrators. Gilbert & Wright, In re, 68 J. P. 143; 20 T. L. R. 164—D.

— Whether Extortionate—Certificate of Taxing Master.]—In the absence of evidence to shew that the fees charged by arbitrators or umpires are extortionate or unfair and unreasonable, the Court will not interfere with such charges. The certificate of the Taxing Master in the arbitration proceedings, disallowing a portion of the fees charged by the arbitrators and umpire, is not evidence against the arbitrator and umpire that the fees charged by them are excessive. Llandrindod Wells Water Co. v. Hawksley, 68 J. P. 242; 20 T. L. R. 241—C.A.

— Excessive Fees Charged by Arbitrator—Right of Party to Recover Excess Paid.]—If in arbitration proceedings a party has had to pay excessive fees to the arbitrator in order to take up his award, an action will lie at the suit of such party against the arbitrator to recover back the excess which has been improperly charged. Llandrindod Wells Water Co. v. Hawksley, 67 J. P. 439—Ridley, J.

— Jurisdiction of Court to Determine Remuneration—Fairness of Charges.]—A taxing officer, when determining the remuneration to be paid to a professional arbitrator under section 15, sub-section 3 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, is not entitled, if the evidence all goes to shew that in the opinion of persons in the same profession the charges made by the arbitrator are, for a person in his position in that profession, fair, to disregard that evidence and to reduce the remuneration to such an amount as is in his opinion fair. Mason v. Lovatt, 23 T. L. R. 486—C.A.

(4) AWARD.

Validity—Arbitrators "called on to act."]—A notice to arbitrators requiring them to appoint an umpire is a notice by which they are "called on to act" within the meaning of clause (c) of Schedule I. to the Arbitration Act, 1889, so as to bring into operation clause (d), and give jurisdiction to the umpire in the event of the arbitrators not making an award within three months after such notice. Baring-Gould and Sharpington Combined Pick and Shovel Syndicate, In re, 68 L. J. Ch. 429; [1899] 2 Ch. 80; 80 L. T. 739; 47 W. R. 564—C.A.

Presumption that Everything Rightly Performed.]—By an agreement, matter in dispute was to be submitted to arbitration on the "basis of Riga usance." An award regular upon the face of it was made by an arbitrator validly appointed, who did not have the agreement before him at the time of the arbitration and had never heard of Riga usance, and in making his award had no regard to Riga usance:—Held, that, the award being regular upon the face of it, it must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that everything was rightly and duly performed, and that the award was in accordance with Riga usance. Bland v. Russian Bank for Foreign Trade, 11 Com. Cas. 71—Bigham, J.

Claims Outside the Reference—Jurisdiction.]—If a lump sum be awarded by an arbitrator, and it is shewn that matters have been taken into account which the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to consider, the award is bad; but it is not necessarily bad because it fails to state in terms that the arbitrator has rejected matters which were not properly referable. In such a case the award can only be impeached by proof of actual excess of jurisdiction. Nor does the fact that the arbitrator took evidence on matters which turned out not to be within his jurisdiction vitiate the award, as such evidence may have been necessary to ascertain whether the matter was or was not within the jurisdiction. Falkingham v. Victorian Railway Commissioners, 69 L. J. P.C. 89; [1900] A.C. 452; 82 L. T. 506—P.C.

Award Ultra Vires—Arbitrator or Umpire—Functus Officio—Power of Court to Remit Matters Referred for Reconsideration.]—An arbitrator who has made an award is at once functus officio; and, if his award does not embrace the matters really in issue between the parties, he cannot, of his own motion, treat it as no award and make another. But in a case where the mistake is due to misapprehension of the terms of the submission to arbitration, the Court has, under section 10 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, general power and jurisdiction to remit the matters referred by the submission to the reconsideration of the arbitrator. Stringer and Riley's Arbitration, In re, 70 L. J. Q.B. 19; [1901] 1 Q.B. 105; 49 W. R. 111—D.

Extension of Time—Power of the Court.]—Section 180, sub-section 9 of the Public Health Act, 1875, provides that the time for making an award by arbitrators under that Act shall not in any case be extended beyond the period of two months from the date of the submission, and that the time for making an award by an umpire under that Act shall not in any case be extended beyond the period of two months from the date of the reference of the matters to him. Section 9 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, provides that the time for making an award may from time to time be enlarged by order of the Court or a Judge, whether the time for making the award has expired or not:—Held, that the Court has power under section 9 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, to enlarge the time for making an award beyond two months from the date of the submission, notwithstanding section 180 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Warburton v. Haslingden Local Board (48 L. J. C.P. 451) followed. Mackenzie, In re (55 L. J. Q.B. 309; 17 Q.B. D. 114), dissented from. Knowles v. Bolton Corporation, 69 L. J. Q.B. 481; [1900] 2 Q.B. 253; 82 L.T. 229; 48 W. R. 433—C.A.

Remitting Back Award—Mistake of Arbitrator—Omission to Award Costs.]—In an arbitration under the Light Railways Act, 1896, in which under the statute the costs were in the discretion of the arbitrator, the arbitrator made and published an award in which he said nothing as to costs. Upon an affidavit by the arbitrator that the reason why he had made no award as to costs was that he had been under the misapprehension that the arbitration was subject to the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, under which costs follow the event, and that if he had known that he had power to award costs he would have awarded them to the claimants.—Held, that as the mistake made by the arbitrator was merely one of omission, and he did not seek in any way to impeach the award that he had made, the matter ought to be remitted to him for his reconsideration. Barbers and Midland Railway, In re, 95 L. T. 20; 70 J. P. 445; 22 T. L. R. 616—C.A.

— Mistake in Law.—An award will not be remitted for the reconsideration of an arbitrator upon the sole ground that the arbitrator has made a mistake in law. Montgomery, Jones & Co. and Liebenthal, In re, 78 L. T. 406—C.A.

Award Condition Precedent to Action.—Where a fire policy made in Jersey is nevertheless an English contract, no action can be brought upon it until the amount has been settled by arbitration according to the condition contained therein. Scott v. Avery (25 L. J. Ex. 303; 5 H.L. C. 811) followed. Spurrier v. La Cloche, 71 L. J. P.C. 101; [1902] A.C. 446; 86 L. T. 631; 51 W. R. 1—P.C.

— The plaintiffs, who carried on business in Belfast, contracted with the defendants, timber merchants in Canada, for the purchase of a quantity of timber "warranted to be of fair average quality, of the sellers' usual shipment." The contract contained an arbitration clause as follows: "Should any difference arise under this contract, the buyers shall not reject the goods, if shipped, nor refuse payment; . . . but such dispute shall be referred to two arbitrators in the trade . . . having power to appoint an umpire, who shall decide whether any, or what, allowance shall be made; the decision of such arbitrators or their umpire shall be final and binding on buyers and sellers, and this submission shall and may be made a rule of H.M. High Court of Justice." There were three shipments of cargo, the two first being, as the plaintiffs alleged, below contract quality; and this was so found by the jury, to whom the question was left for the purpose of assessing contingent damages. An arbitration was held in respect of the two first shipments, which resulted in an invalid award. In an action on the award and for breach of warranty,—Held, on the construction of the contract, that a valid award was a condition precedent to enforcing liability under the warranty. Gregg v. Fraser, [1906] 2 Ir. R. 545—C.A.

Enforcing—Summons—Service on Foreigner out of Jurisdiction.—A summons to enforce an award under section 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, cannot be served upon a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction. Rasch v. Wulfert, 73 L. J. K.B. 20; [1904] 1 K.B. 118; 89 L. T. 493; 52 W. R. 145; 20 T. L. R. 70—C.A.

— Order Giving Leave to Enforce Right to Bring Action—Election.—A person who has obtained an order for leave to enforce an award under section 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, is not thereby prevented from bringing an action upon the award. China Steam Navigation Co. v. Van Laun, 22 T. L. R. 26—Bigham, J.

Agricultural Holdings Act.—See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

• Appeal—Award in Form of Special Case—Time.—See APPEAL.

(5) SPECIAL CASE.

Agreement not to Require Special Case—Validity.—Quere, whether an agreement, that the parties to an arbitration will not ask that a special Case shall be stated for the opinion of the Court, is valid. Montgomery, Jones & Co. and Liebenthal, In re, 78 L. T. 406—C.A.

Duty of Arbitrator.—An arbitrator cannot, after he has made his award, state a Case for the opinion of the Court under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and the power of the Court to order a Case to be stated under that section is limited in like manner. Tabernacle Permanent Building Society v. Knight (62 L. J. Q.B. 50; [1892] A.C. 298) on this point followed. Palmer and Hosken, In re, 67 L. J. Q.B. 1; [1898] 1 Q.B. 131; 77 L. T. 350; 46 W. R. 49—C.A.

— Misconduct of Arbitrator—Remission of Award.—Section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, impliedly confers on the parties to an arbitration the right to apply to the Court for an order directing the arbitrator to state at any stage of the proceedings, in the form of a Special Case for the opinion of the Court, a question of law arising in the course of the reference; and this right must be respected by arbitrators. If, therefore, a party to an arbitration bona fide requests the arbitrator to state a Case, or to delay making his award until the party can apply to the Court for an order directing a Case, and the arbitrator refuses to comply with either request, he is prima facie guilty of misconduct within section 11 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, such as would justify the Court in setting aside the award, or in remitting it to the arbitrator for further consideration under section 10. Ib.

Statement of Special Case after Award—Jurisdiction.—An arbitrator cannot be directed by the Court or a Judge to state a Special Case for the opinion of the Court under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 10, when no request or application to state a Case has been made before the award has been made and the arbitration concluded. Montgomery, Jones & Co. and Liebenthal, In re, 78 L. T. 406—C.A.

Order to State Special Case—Contract to Construct Railway—Clause Referring all Matters to Consulting Engineer.—By a contract for the construction of a railway for a lump sum it was provided that, "in the event of any dispute or question arising as to the intent and meaning of any part of the specification . . . or the interpretation, meaning, or effect of the clauses and conditions of the contract, or as to any other matter or thing whatever connected with or arising out of the contract or incidental thereto or not thereby provided for, such questions or disputes should be referred to the consulting engineer, whose decision should be conclusive and binding on both parties." The cost of construction was greatly increased by the necessity of blasting rock instead of excavating earth, and the contractor claimed a large sum beyond the contract price, alleging that the contract provided for excavation of earth only. This claim was referred to the consulting engineer as arbitrator:—Held, that, as a substantial and serious point of law arose upon the construction of the contract, the case was one in which the Court would, in the exercise of its discretion, order the arbitrator to state a special Case for the opinion of the Court under section 19 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Nuttall and Lynton and Barnstaple Railway, In re, 82 L. T. 17—C.A.

Reference by Local Act—Power of Arbitrator to State Case.—Under a provision in a local Act that "any dispute or difference arising between the corporation and any person or persons who are or may be interested in the provisions of this section as to the proper construction of such provisions or as to the carrying out of the matters dealt with in this section or in anywise in connection therewith shall be referred to" A. M. "or such other fit person as shall be mutually agreed upon, whose decision shall be final," the arbitrator has power to state his award in the form of a Special Case. Carpenter and Bristol Corporation, In re, 76 L. J. K.B. 1145; 97 L. T. 461; 71 J. P. 417; 5 L. G. R. 977; 23 T. L. R. 654—C.A.

(6) UMPIRE.

Jurisdiction of Arbitrators "called on to act."—A notice to arbitrators requiring them to appoint an umpire is not a notice by which they are "called on to act" within the meaning of clause (c) of Schedule I. to the Arbitration Act, 1889, so as to bring into operation clause (d), and give jurisdiction to the umpire in the event of the arbitrators not having made an award within three months after such notice. Baker v. Stephens (36 L. J. Q.B. 236; L. R. 2 Q.B. 523) applied. Baring-Gould v. Sharpington Pick and Shovel Syndicate, 67 L. J. Ch. 622; [1898] 2 Ch. 633; 79 L. T. 185; 47 W. R. 23—Stirling, J.

Fees of.—See ARBITRATOR, as above.

(7) COSTS.

Discretion of Arbitrator—Award Fees—Costs of Reference.—Costs left to the discretion of the arbitrator, but not dealt with by him, only follow the event when the matter is referred by the Court under section 14 of the Arbitration Act, and not when the action is stayed and arbitration is directed by the Court under the submission of the parties, for to such a reference section 15, sub-section 2, does not apply. Warburg v. McKerrow, 90 L. T. 644—Walton, J.

Of Renewing Lease.—Where a lease is renewable "at the cost of the lessee" on payment of a fine, such cost includes the costs of an arbitration properly entered upon for the purpose of determining the fine payable by the lessee. Fitzsimmons v. Lord Mostyn, 73 L. J. K.B. 72; [1904] A.C. 46—H.L. (E.)

Agreement to Pay Costs, Charges, and Expenses "to be taxed"—Taxation—Jurisdiction to Review.—By an agreement, confirmed by a private Act, a district council agreed to purchase the undertaking of a gas company at a price to be fixed by arbitration, and it was provided that the agreement should be "deemed a 'submission' within the meaning of the Arbitration Act, 1889." The council also agreed to pay "all the costs, charges, and expenses of the company preliminary and incidental to the negotiation for the sale and the said arbitration, the same to be taxed in case the parties differ." An award was made which did not deal with costs. The costs were taxed by a Master, who allowed costs upon a scale lower than the scale as between solicitor and client. A Judge at chambers ordered a review of taxation:—Held, that there was jurisdiction to review the taxation of the Master; and that the company was entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. Malvern Urban Council v. Malvern Link Gas Co., 83 L. T. 326—C.A.

Taxation of Costs—Light Railways.—See RAILWAY.

Official Referee—Order of Divisional Court Varying Findings—Leave to Appeal—"Right of Appeal to the High Court from any Court or person."—An application to a Divisional Court to vary the findings of an official referee is a case "where there is a right of appeal to the High Court from any Court or person" within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 5 of the Judicature Act, 1894, and the determination thereof by the Divisional Court is final, unless leave to appeal is given by that Court or by the Court of Appeal. *Daglish v. Costs—Order of Reference and Award Silent as to Costs.]—Where an action is referred to an arbitrator under section 14 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, by an order which is silent as to costs, and the arbitrator makes an award which does not deal with costs, the costs of the action, reference, and award follow the event, inasmuch as under section 15, sub-section 2 of the Act the award is equivalent to the verdict of a jury. *Carr v. Ouster of Jurisdiction of Courts—Private Act—Statutory Agreement—Corporation—Traders—Waiver.]—The jurisdiction of the Court may be completely ousted by an arbitration enactment contained in a private Act of Parliament or in an agreement confirmed by such an Act, not only by express language constituting arbitration the only tribunal, but by necessary implication, where the arbitration provision is for the public good and not for the benefit of individuals; and no deficiency of pleading and no waiver by litigants can give the Court jurisdiction in such a case. Caledonian Railway v. Greenock and Wemyss Bay Railway (L. R. 2 H.L. Sc. 347) explained and followed as a direct authority for the complete ouster of the jurisdiction of the Court in such a case, notwithstanding the observations of COTTON, L.J., and BOWEN, L.J., in London, Chatham, and Dover Railway v. South-Eastern Railway (58 L. J. Ch. 75; 40 Ch. D. 100). Crossfield v. Manchester Ship Canal Co., 73 L. J. Ch. 345; [1904] 2 Ch. 123; 90 L. T. 557; 52 W. R. 635; 68 J. P. 421; 20 T. L. R. 371—C.A.

The Manchester Ship Canal Act, 1885, s. 88, enacted that for the protection of the corporation and traders of Warrington certain provisions, "unless otherwise agreed on between the Corporation and the Company," should have effect. Then followed a number of sub-sections (inter alia) imposing on the Canal company the obligation of keeping dredged a portion of the river Mersey, and providing by sub-section 22 that if any difference should arise "between the Company and the Corporation," as to the true meaning of the section, or as to anything to be done under it, the same should be determined by an arbitrator. Section 202 also contained a general arbitration clause between the company and "any person." In 1896 an agreement between the company and corporation was confirmed by the Manchester Ship Canal Act, 1896. This agreement somewhat modified the company's statutory obligation as to dredging the river Mersey, and while that obligation as modified remained unfulfilled gave the traders a right of using the canal free of toll, and clause 10 contained an arbitration clause similar to that contained in sub-section 22. A difference arose as to the extent of the company's obligation to keep the river Mersey dredged under section 88 as modified by the agreement, and the traders, alleging the obligation to be unfulfilled, claimed the right of free navigation of the canal and paid tolls under protest. In an action by the corporation and certain traders, suing in both a representative and an individual capacity, for a declaration of rights, and (on the part of the traders in their individual capacity) for repayment of the tolls improperly demanded, and damages for breach of their statutory obligations by the company,—Held, that, so far as the action was brought by the corporation, the jurisdiction of the Court was completely ousted either by sub-section 22 of section 88, or by clause 10 of the agreement. Held, also, by VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., and STIRLING, L.J. (dissentiente COZENS-HARDY, L.J.), that, so far as the action was brought by the traders, the jurisdiction of the Court was equally ousted until the difference had been determined by arbitration, STIRLING, L.J., so deciding on the ground that the case was within section 202. Held, by COZENS-HARDY, L.J., that the action lay by the traders. Ib.

Jurisdiction—Private Acts—Statutory Agreement—Corporation—Traders.]—The corporation of Warrington is not, under the Manchester Ship Canal Acts, 1885 and 1896, entitled to bring an action against the Manchester Ship Canal, but is compelled to resort to arbitration as provided by the Acts for the adjustment of differences between the corporation and the company. Crossfield v. Manchester Ship Canal (No. 1), 73 L. J. Ch. 637; [1905] A.C. 421; 93 L. T. 141; 54 W. R. 172; 69 J. P. 441; 21 T. L. R. 689—H.L. (E.)

Held also, that the traders referred to in the Acts were not by the Acts excluded from access to the Courts. Ib.

2. GENERALLY.

Martial Law—Supersession of Civil Tribunals.]

—Where war actually prevails the ordinary Courts have no jurisdiction over the action of the military authorities, and the mere fact that some of the ordinary Courts are open is not sufficient to constitute a time of peace, and thereby to exclude the operation of martial law. Marais (D. F.) v. General Officer Commanding the Lines of Communication, 71 L. J. P.C. 42; [1902] A.C. 109; 85 L. T. 734; 50 W. R. 273—P.C.

Under the Petition of Right a state of peace is the necessary condition of the illegality of unconstitutional procedure. Ib.

— Special Leave to Appeal.—Special leave to appeal from an order refusing to interfere with the custody by the military authorities of a person arrested by military authority refused, it appearing that war had at the time and place of the arrest been and was still raging. Ib.

— Resident Magistrate Acting as Administrator of Martial Law—Record—Application to Review in Civil Court.—There is no jurisdiction in a civil Court to review a sentence or judgment of a Court of martial law. A martial law Court is not a Court of record, and the administrator, even though he happen to be also a civil magistrate, and describe himself in a memorandum as acting in the double capacity, must be taken to have acted solely in the administration of martial law. Att.-Gen. of the Cape of Good Hope v. Van Reenen, 73 L. J. P.C. 13; [1904] A.C. 114; 89 L. T. 591; 20 T. L. R. 90—P.C.

Effect of War on Contracts—Mere Imminence of War not Sufficient—Public Policy.—The law recognises a state of peace and a state of war, but knows nothing of an intermediate state which is neither one thing nor the other; and though the effect of war is to dissolve contracts and put an end to commercial relations between the subjects of the belligerent Powers, the actual existence and not the mere imminence of war at the time of the creation of the contract is necessary to bring about such a result. It is for the State and its rulers and not for private individuals to set up a standard and to determine questions of public policy. In these matters the individual must conform to the rule and guidance of the State. Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, 71 L. J. K.B. 857; [1902] A.C. 484; 87 L. T. 372; 51 W. R. 142; 7 Com. Cas. 268—H.L. (E.)

Defence Works—Land Compulsorily Taken—“Compensation”—Injurious Affection.—Where land is compulsorily acquired by the Government for defence purposes under the Defence Acts, the owner of the land taken is entitled to compensation in respect of any injurious affection of his adjoining lands. Reg. v. Abbott ([1897] 2 Ir. R. 362) and Ned's Point Battery, In re ([1903] 2 Ir. R. 192) followed. Blundell v. Ilegen, 74 L. J. K.B. 91; [1905] 1 K.B. 516; 92 L. T. 58; 53 W. R. 412; 21 T. L. R. 143—Ridley, J.

Defence Acts—Artillery Range and Camp—Compensation—Other Lands of Owner Injuriouly Affected.—Where lands are compulsorily taken, under the Defence Code, for use as a camp and artillery range, compensation may be allowed for depreciation in value of other lands of the same owner not taken, resulting from the natural and ordinary use of the lands taken as such camp and range. In estimating such compensation regard may be had to loss of privacy and amenity, and the vulgarisation of the neighbourhood, by the establishment of a camp, but not to loss or injury from apprehended trespass by soldiers or their friends to other lands of the same owner. Compensation may be allowed for injury, caused by the nature of the artillery range, to a fishery attached to the ownership of the lands not taken. Semble, compensation may be allowed for injury to an incorporeal hereditament, such as a several fishery. Ned's Point Battery, In re, [1903] 2 Ir. R. 192—K.B. D.

Soldiers' Pay—Service in South African War—Rate of Pay—Agreement with Colonial Government—Part Payment by Imperial Government.—Service in the army or in Colonial contingents incorporated with the army is service under the King, and the King is paymaster, whether the supplies are granted by the Imperial or a Colonial Legislature. Williams v. Howarth, 74 L. J. P.C. 115; [1905] A.C. 551; 93 L. T. 115; 21 T. L. R. 670—P.C.

The respondent served with the troops sent from New South Wales to South Africa under an agreement with the Government of the Colony by which he was to receive 10s. a day. Whilst he was on active service he received 4s. 6d. a day from the Imperial Government:—Held, that this payment was in part discharge of the 10s. a day under the contract. Ib.

Unlawful Possession of Regimental Necessaries—Personal Knowledge of Pawnbroker.—In a prosecution for a contravention of section 156, sub-section 2 of the Army Act, 1881, it is not necessary to prove personal knowledge on the part of the accused that the regimental necessaries described in the complaint were in his possession. Therefore, a pawnbroker who had three shops, in one of which certain regimental necessaries were pawned, was held liable, although he had no personal knowledge that the articles had been pawned or were in any of his premises. O'Brien v. Macgregor, 5 F. (Just. Cas.) 74—Ct. of Justy.

Rifle Range—Nuisance—Foreshore—Artillery and Rifle Ranges Act, 1885.—The firing on a rifle range near the sea leased by a certain corps of volunteers, and sanctioned by the Secretary of State for War, made the foreshore in the vicinity of the targets unsafe for persons passing along the foreshore. The public had from time immemorial used this part of the foreshore for recreation and as a means of passage. The consent of the Board of Trade under section 3 of the Artillery and Rifle Ranges Act, 1885, had not been obtained to any by-laws made by a Secretary of State restricting the use of the foreshore by the public in order that the range might be used as such:—Held, that a member of the public was entitled to interdict against the use of the rifle range. Fergusson v. Pollock, 3 F. 1140—Ct. of Sess.

Public Road—Military Lands Act, 1892.—A member of the public was held entitled to interdict against the use of a rifle range by volunteers in respect that the noise of the firing was a source of danger to horse traffic on a public road in the vicinity, and that the consent of the road authorities had not been obtained under section 16 of the Military Lands Act, 1892. Ib.

Gift of Houses for Use of Former Officers—Perpetuity.—Gift of leasehold houses for old officers of a regiment at a small rent held void for perpetuity. Income Tax Commissioners v. Pemsel (61 L. J. Volunteer Corps—Training or Exercising in Camp with Regular Forces—Period during which Training Continues—“Persons subject to Military Law as Soldiers”—Arrest of Volunteer for Alleged Larceny—Detention in Military Custody Elsewhere than in Camp—Legality of Order for Detention.—Upon the true construction of section 176 of the Army Act, 1881, members of volunteer forces of the United Kingdom who attend a training or exercise in camp with a portion of the regular forces, commence such training or exercise as soon as each member of such volunteer forces falls in and forms up with his comrades as a regiment under arms and under command in order to carry out such training or exercise, and the members of such volunteer regiment continue subject to military law as soldiers as long as the regiment remains under arms and under command—that is, until the regiment or particular company has reached its homeward destination and has been finally dismissed. Marks v. Frogley, 67 L. J. Q.B. 605; [1898] 1 Q.B. 888; 78 L. T. 607; 46 W. R. 548; 19 Cox C.C. 91—C.A.

An order given by an officer in command of a volunteer corps to arrest, within the actual boundaries of the camp, a member of such corps upon a charge of larceny alleged to have been committed whilst such camp is breaking up, and to escort him in military custody in a military train, then on the point of starting, for the conveyance of the corps to its home destination, and, on arrival at the railway station nearest his home, to escort him to the police station and hand him over to the civil authority, is an order which such officer can lawfully give under section 176 of the Army Act, 1881, and article 374 of the Regulations for the Volunteer forces, inasmuch as at the time when such order is given the person so arrested is subject to military law as a soldier. Ib.

Such arrest and ultimate detention in civil custody can also be justified under section 158 of the Army Act, 1881, and it is not necessary under that section that an offence should have been actually committed, for the section applies to a case where an offence is alleged to have been committed. Ib.

Volunteers—Supply of Goods to Corps—Personal Liability of Officer Commanding.—Where goods supplied to a volunteer regiment are ordered by or on behalf of the officer commanding, that officer is personally liable for their price. Samuel v. Wetherly, 76 L. J. K.B. 357; [1907] 1 K.B. 709; 96 L. T. 552; 23 T. L. R. 280—Walton, J. Affirmed in C.A. on a finding of fact, 77 L. J. K.B. 69; [1908] 1 K.B. 184; 98 L. T. 169; 24 T. L. R. 160.

Turnpike Road—Toll—Exemption—Carriage “Employed” in Her Majesty’s Military Service—Private Carriage of Officer Used by Him on Duty.—The private carriage of an officer of her Majesty’s regular forces, used by him in the discharge of his official duties, he not being in receipt of or entitled to any government allowance for such a carriage nor entitled to hire such a carriage at the cost of the Government, is not “employed” in her Majesty’s military service within the meaning of section 143 of the Army Act, 1881, and consequently, in passing along a turnpike road, is not exempted by that section from payment of a statutory toll payable on such road. Craig v. Nicholas, 69 L. J. Q.B. 608; [1900] 2 Q.B. 444; 82 L. T. 765; 49 W. R. 48; 64 J. P. 569; 19 Cox C.C. 526—D.

Paving and Sewerage Expenses—Premises Used as Headquarters of Volunteer Battalion—Liability of Legal Owner.—The commanding officer of a volunteer corps who acquires premises by virtue of the Volunteer Act, 1863, for the use of the corps is not liable under section 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as owner of the premises, to pay the apportioned part of the expense of sewerage and paving the street upon which the premises abut, inasmuch as the premises are owned upon behalf of the Crown, which is not bound by the provisions of the section. Hornsey Urban Council v. Hennell, 71 L. J. K.B. 479; [1902] 2 K.B. 73; 86 L. T. 423; 50 W. R. 521; 66 J. P. 613—D.

In order that a pecuniary burden may be imposed upon Crown property by statute, the Crown must be expressly named or it must appear by necessary implication that the Crown has agreed or is intended to be bound; and the insertion of a particular protecting clause is not of itself sufficient to shew that only the class of property included within it was intended to be exempt. Ib.

Making False Statement—Joining Royal Naval Reserve—“Naval service.”—The words “naval service” in section 16 of the Naval Enlistment Act, 1853, do not include service in the Royal Naval Reserve. A person, therefore, is not liable to be proceeded against under that section for making a false statement on joining the Royal Naval Reserve. Westhorpe v. Powley, 74 L. J. K.B. 150; [1905] 1 K.B. 286; 92 L. T. 57; 53 W. R. 366; 69 J. P. 77; 20 Cox C.C. 747; 21 T. L. R. 152—D.

to Supply Goods as Purchaser may Require for His Business—Agreement by Purchaser not to Buy Similar Goods from Others—Assignment of Purchaser's Business—Right of Assignee to Require Supply of Goods from Vendor.—The defendant contracted with K., a cake manufacturer, to supply him with all the eggs of a specified quality "that he shall require for manufacturing purposes for one year," K. undertaking not to purchase eggs from any other merchant during the year so long as the defendant was ready to supply them. During the year K. transferred his business to a company, whereupon the defendant claimed to be discharged from his contract, and refused to supply any more eggs either to K. or to the company. In an action brought by K. and the company, as co-plaintiffs, for breach of the contract,—Held, that the defendant's contract was with K. personally; that the benefit of it was not assignable; and that the defendant was discharged from his obligation. Tolhurst v. Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers (72 L. J. K.B. 834; [1903] A.C. 414) distinguished. Kemp v. Baerelman, 75 L. J. K.B. 873; [1906] 2 K.B. 604—C.A.

Vendor and Purchaser—Assignment by Vendor—Payment by Common Consent to Assignee—Failure of Consideration—Liability of Assignee.—Under a contract of sale money due to the vendor was by common consent paid by the purchaser to a third person to whom the vendor executed an assignment of the contract. Periodical payments were also made by the purchaser to the assignee to be applied for a specified purpose. There was a failure of consideration on the part of the vendor which would have entitled the purchaser to repayment from him:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to repayment from the assignee of the money paid by common consent or of the periodical payments in so far as they were in fact appropriated to the specified purpose. Mackusick v. Fleming, 73 L. J. Ch. 826; 90 L. T. 101; 20 T. L. R. 263—H.L. (E.)

Vendor and Purchaser—Money Paid by Purchaser to Assignee—Rescission—Failure of Consideration—Money Had and Received.—Payments made by a purchaser on account of moneys payable to the vendor under the contract, to a third person who is assignee of or interested in the vendor's contract can, on total failure of the consideration, be recovered by the purchaser in an action for money had and received to his use from such third person, though he was not a party to the contract. Aberaman Ironworks v. Wickens (L. R. 4 Ch. 101) distinguished and explained. Fleming v. Loe, 70 L. J. Ch. 805; [1901] 2 Ch. 594; 85 L. T. 480; 50 W. R. 55—Cozens-Hardy, J. Reversed on facts, 71 L. J. Ch. 687; [1902] 2 Ch. 359; 87 L. T. 213—C.A.

Personal Covenant—Notice—Tied House—Lessee's Covenant.—Semble, a covenant by the lessee of a beerhouse that he will during the tenancy purchase from the landlords and their successors in business all ale, beer, porter, &c., and will not at any time directly or indirectly sell on the premises any ale, beer, porter, &c., other than such as shall have been so bona fide purchased, is a personal contract binding on the lessee, and the benefit of it could have been assigned in equity before the Judicature Act, 1875, and the assignees could sue upon it if there had been an absolute assignment thereof to them in writing signed by the assignor, of which express notice in writing had been given to the lessee. Manchester Brewery Co. v. Coombs, 70 L. J. Ch. 814; [1901] 2 Ch. 608—Farwell, J.

Claim for Damages—"Debts"—"Effects"—"Contracts and engagements."—A person having a claim against the defendants for unliquidated damages for breach of contract became bankrupt, and his trustee in bankruptcy assigned to the plaintiff the bankrupt's business and goodwill, together with "the plant, stock-in-trade, book and other debts, securities, moneys, credits, effects, contracts and engagements to which the vendor as such trustee is entitled in connexion with the said respective business":—Held, that the assignment included the claim for damages. Ogdens v. Weinberg, 95 L. T. 567; 22 T. L. R. 729—H.L. (E.)

(b) ABSOLUTE ASSIGNMENT, OR BY WAY OF SECURITY.

Debt—Trust in Favour of Assignor—Assignee Taking no Beneficial Interest—Purpose of Assignee to Make Debtor Bankrupt—Maintenance—Public Policy.—The plaintiff, being satisfied that it was for the best interests of a company, of which he was a shareholder and director, that the defendant, a co-director of the company, should be removed from the board, obtained from creditors of the defendant an absolute assignment in writing of the debts due to them from the defendant, with the object of making the defendant a bankrupt, and so removing him from the board. The assignment was made in consideration of a covenant by the plaintiff that in case he should be able to recover the amount of the debts he would immediately pay over to the assignors the respective amounts, or so much thereof as he might be able to recover, after payment of all costs necessarily incurred by him. Notice in writing of the assignment was given to the defendant:—Held, that, upon the authority of Comfort v. Betts (60 L. J. Q.B. 656; [1891] 1 Q.B. 737), the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action upon the assignment; and (by MATHEW, L.J., and COZENS-HARDY, L.J.) that, as the plaintiff was simply asserting a legal right consequential upon the possession of property which had been validly assigned to him, his action was not open to the objection of maintenance, or otherwise such that upon the grounds of public policy the Court ought to refuse its assistance. Fitzroy v. Cave, 74 L. J. K.B. 829; [1905] 2 K.B. 364; 93 L. T. 499; 54 W. R. 17; 21 T. L. R. 612—C.A.

Moneys under Building Contract—Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 6.—The plaintiff, a builder, who had entered into a building contract with the defendants, executed an assignment in the following terms in favour of his bankers:

"In consideration of your continuing a banking account with me . . . and by way of continuing security to you for all moneys due or to become due to you from me . . . I hereby assign to you all moneys due or to become due to me from [the defendants] under or by virtue [of the said building contract]. And I hereby empower you on my behalf and in my name to settle and adjust all accounts in connection with the works and matters aforesaid, to give effectual receipts for the moneys hereby assigned . . . also if necessary to sue for or take such other steps as you may think necessary for enforcing payment of the moneys hereby assigned. . . . And I hereby undertake at your request and my cost to do and execute all such further acts deeds and things as you may reasonably require for giving full effect to the security hereby created":—Held, that this was an "absolute assignment" within section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that, therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue the defendants in respect of a balance alleged to be due to him under the building contract. Hughes v. Pump House Hotel Co. (No. 1), 71 L. J. K.B. 630; [1902] 2 K.B. 190; 86 L. T. 794; 50 W. R. 660—C.A.

Notice—Letter Directing Payment to a Creditor—Acknowledgment by Creditor.—K. & Co., who owed money to the plaintiffs, sold goods to the defendants. On January 6 K. & Co. wrote to the plaintiffs inclosing a printed document, which they requested the plaintiffs to forward to the defendants for their signature. This document consisted of two detachable parts: one part was signed by K. & Co., and was addressed to the defendants, and requested them to sign the attached letter and to forward the same to the plaintiffs; the other part (the attached letter) was addressed to the plaintiffs, and was in these terms: "Herewith we beg to confirm that we shall remit, subject to the approval of the goods, the amount of invoices—viz. 369*l.* and 3,263*l.*, for 75 packages of raw rubber, received to-day from K. & Co., when due, direct to your good selves for account of K. & Co." The plaintiffs, on January 7, forwarded this printed document to the defendants, and it was signed on their behalf and returned to the plaintiffs. The defendants failed to pay the sum of 3,263*l.* to the plaintiffs, who brought an action to recover it:—Held, that K. & Co.'s letter of January 6, together with the printed document inclosed, amounted to an absolute assignment within section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that there was written notice to the defendants within that section. Brandt v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 8 Com. Cas. 174—Walton, J.

Power to Assignee to Sue.—A document, purporting to be an assignment of a debt or legal chose in action as security for the repayment of a loan, and empowering the assignee to sue either in his own name or in that of the assignor, —Held, not to be an absolute assignment within section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Mercantile Bank of London v. Evans, 68 L. J. Q.B. 921; [1899] 2 Q.B. 613; 81 L. T. 376—C.A.

Written Request to Debtor to Sign Promise to Pay Debt to Third Person.—A firm of merchants, having sold goods, sent to a firm of bankers, in accordance with an arrangement which they had with them, a document, with a counterpart attached thereto, which they requested them to forward to the purchasers of the goods. The bankers forwarded to the purchasers the document, the first part of which was a request signed by the merchants to the purchasers to sign the attached letter and forward it to the bankers. The counterpart was addressed to the bankers, and was, so far as material, "We beg to confirm that we shall remit" . . . the amount of invoices . . . "direct to your good selves, for account of" the merchants. The counterpart was signed and sent to the bankers by a person in the employ of the purchasers who had no authority so to act. In an action by the bankers against the purchasers to recover the amount of the invoices,—Held, that the document was not an absolute assignment of the debt by the merchants to the bankers within the meaning of section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that the bankers were not entitled to recover the amount from the purchasers. Brandt v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 73 L. J. K.B. 247; [1904] 1 K.B. 387; 90 L. T. 106; 52 W. R. 501; 9 Com. Cas. 149; 20 T. L. R. 195—C.A.

— Unascertained Part of Debt—Validity of Assignment.—Under section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, there cannot be a valid assignment of an unascertained part of a debt. Jones v. Humphreys, 71 L. J. K.B. 23; [1902] 1 K.B. 10; 85 L. T. 488; 50 W. R. 191—D.

— Valid Equitable Assignment—"Absolute Assignment."—The contractors for the erection of certain buildings under a contract made between them and the defendant, the building owner, wrote the plaintiffs the following letter: "In consideration of money advanced from time to time we hereby charge the sum of 1,080*l.*, being the agreed price for the sale of 60*l.* per annum ground-rent which will become due to us from" the defendant on the completion of the buildings in question, "as security for the advances, and we hereby assign our interest in the above-mentioned sum until the money with added interest be repaid to you":—Held, that the document did not constitute an "absolute assignment" within section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, but only a conditional assignment, inasmuch as, although it was a valid equitable assignment, yet it was by way of security only and without power to give a valid discharge to the debtor; and consequently the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue upon it. Brice v. Bannister (47 L. J. Q.B. 722; 3 Q.B. D. 569) discussed. Durham v. Robertson, 67 L. J. Q.B. 484; [1898] 1 Q.B. 765; 78 L. T. 438—C.A.

Mortgage—Successive Transfers—Absolute Assignment—Death of Second Transferee—Notice of Assignment by Executor.—A solicitor, having advanced money to the defendants, who were his clients, took from them in the name of a nominee a mortgage containing in the body of the deed an acknowledgment of the receipt by the defendants of a sum of 9,200*l.* alleged to have been advanced by the nominee, and a covenant to repay that sum. Having received from another client money to invest on mortgage, the solicitor requested the nominee to transfer the mortgage to that client. The nominee refused to transfer to the client, but subsequently transferred to the solicitor himself by a deed which recited that the principal sum of 9,200*l.* was still due and owing on the security of the mortgage deed. The solicitor then executed a transfer to the client. Neither the solicitor himself nor the transferee gave the defendants any notice of the assignments. On the death of the transferee, his executors, the plaintiffs, gave to the defendants, under section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, notice of the assignment to their testator. In an action by the plaintiffs on the covenant in the mortgage deed,—Held, that there was nothing to prevent them from giving, after the death of their testator, notice in writing under section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that they were entitled to sue in their own names. Bateman v. Hunt, 73 L. J. K.B. 782; [1904] 2 K.B. 530; 91 L. T. 331; 52 W. R. 609; 20 T. L. R. 628—C.A.

(c) EQUITABLE ASSIGNMENTS.

Debt—Notice to Debtor by Creditor and Assignee.—To constitute a good equitable assignment of a debt all that is necessary is that the debtor should be given to understand that the debt has been made over by the creditor to some third person, and if the debtor disregards such notice he does so at his peril. Brandt v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 74 L. J. K.B. 898; [1905] A.C. 454; 93 L. T. 495; 11 Com. Cas. 1; 21 T. L. R. 710—H.L. (E.)

The respondents purchased goods from merchants who were indebted to the appellants. The merchants informed the appellants of the purchase, and sent them a letter which they were to send to the respondents for their signature. The letter was an undertaking on the part of the respondents to remit the value of the goods to the appellants, and was received by the respondents:—Held, that there had been a valid equitable assignment of the debt to the appellants. Ib.

Banker's Deposit Receipt—Voluntary Gift—Death of Donor—Donee Executor of Donor.—The indorsement and delivery of a banker's deposit receipt (not transferable) is a complete gift where the donor appoints the donee his executor, although no notice is given to the bank by the donor. Griffin, In re; Griffin v. Griffin, 68 L. J. Ch. 220; [1899] 1 Ch. 408; 79 L. T. 442—Byrne, J.

Letter Assigning Proceeds of Sale of Goods—Notice to Creditor—Bankruptcy of Assignor—Revocation by Trustee in Bankruptcy—Validity of Assignment.—A firm, being indebted to the plaintiffs for the price of goods sold, shipped a quantity of copper ores to the defendants for sale, and wrote instructing them, after payment of a certain account out of the proceeds, to pay the balance to the plaintiffs. On the same day the firm wrote to the plaintiffs advising them of the shipment of the ores to the defendants, and stating that they had instructed them to pay such balance to the plaintiffs. The firm having become bankrupt, their trustee revoked the instructions contained in their letter to the defendants:—Held, that, notwithstanding such revocation, the letters constituted a good equitable assignment to the plaintiffs of the balance of the proceeds of the goods. Alexander v. Steinhardt, 72 L. J. K.B. 490; [1903] 2 K.B. 208; 8 Com. Cas. 209; 10 Manson, 258—Bigham, J.

Order Given by Debtor to His Solicitors to Collect his Debt and Pay Third Party—Subsequent Deed of Assignment for Creditors.—F., being the debtor of C., B. & Co. and the creditor of W. & Sons, instructed his solicitors, who were suing W. & Sons, to hold the proceeds at the disposal of C., B. & Co. Subsequently F. called his creditors together, and a deed of assignment was executed by C., B. & Co. with the other creditors. The solicitors received part of the money due from W. & Sons before the execution of the deed by C., B. & Co., and the remainder afterwards. The deed contained a clause that it was not to prejudice the rights of creditors in respect of securities held against any person but the debtor:—Held, that this was a good equitable assignment of the whole of the proceeds of the debt of W. & Sons, and that C., B. & Co. were entitled as against the trustee of the deed. Palmer v. Culverwell, 85 L. T. 758—Bruce, J.

Notice—Undertaking to Indorse and Hand over Cheque when Received.—A contract for the sale of flour contained the following:—"I also agree to indorse the cheques from the asylum and hand over to you as received by me in payment of the accounts"—Held, that this constituted an equitable assignment of the moneys from the cheques as and when received from the asylum. West v. Newing, 82 L. T. 260—Bucknill, J.

Document Ineffectually Purporting to be the Deed of a Firm—Execution by one Partner only—Equitable Assignment.—A document purporting to be a deed of assignment of a debt, falling due to a trading firm consisting of two partners, by the firm to one of their creditors was executed by one partner only:—Held, that although it could not be treated as the deed of the partner who did not execute it, nevertheless it was a good assignment; that the ineffectual effort to make it a deed by putting a seal to it, and getting one partner to deliver it as a deed of the firm, did not prevent it operating as an equitable assignment, since section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, rendered a deed unnecessary. Marchant v. Morton, Down & Co., 70 L. J. K.B. 820; [1901] 2 K.B. 829; 85 L. T. 169—Channell, J.

Debentures—Set-off—Floating Security—Appointment of Receiver.—Debentures issued by a company, which are a floating charge on its assets and property, do not take effect as an assignment of the debts owing to the company at the date of their issue, but at the date of the appointment of a receiver on behalf of the debenture-holders; and between those dates a right of set-off against debts owing to the company can be acquired by persons who have become creditors of the company in the ordinary course of business, although with knowledge of the issue of the debentures. Biggerstaff v. Rowatt's Wharf, 65 L. J. Ch. 536; [1896] 2 Ch. 93; 74 L. T. 473; 44 W. R. 536—C.A.

(d) PRIORITIES.

Notice—Chose in Action—Erroneous Statement of Date—Validity of Notice.—If a notice of assignment of a debt, given under section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, states that the assignment was made upon a specified date, upon which in fact no such assignment took place, the notice does not comply with the requirements of the section and is therefore invalid. Stanley v. English Fibres Industries, 68 L. J. Q.B. 839—Ridley, J.

Death of Trustees—Appointment of New Trustees—Subsequent Assignment—Priority.—Where notice of an assignment of an equitable interest is given to all the then existing trustees, and, after their death (or retirement) and the appointment of new trustees, a subsequent assignment is made and notice given to the new trustees who have received no notice of the first assignment, the right of the prior assignee prevails as against that of the second assignee. Timson v. Ramsbottom (2 Keen, 35) and Hall, In re; Nolan v. O'Brien (7 L. R. Ir. 180), distinguished. Wasdale, In re; Brittin v. Partidge, 68 L. J. Ch. 117; [1899] 1 Ch. 163; 79 L. T. 520; 47 W. R. 169—Stirling, J.

An assignee who has given notice to all the existing trustees is not bound to renew the notice on any change of trustees. Id.

Fund in Another's Hands—Rights of Assignee of Charge.—Where a person in possession of a fund has received notice of an assignment of his rights by one of several persons entitled to charges on the fund, and nevertheless wrongfully makes payment out of the fund to the assignor, the rights inter se of the several persons entitled to the charges to what remains of the fund cannot in any way be affected by such payments. • The mortgagee of a charge on a fund, or his assignee, when notice of the mortgage has been given to the holder of the fund, cannot be affected by transactions between the holder of the fund and the mortgagor unknown to the mortgagee. Liquidation Estates Purchase Co. v. Willoughby, 67 L. J. Ch. 251; [1898] A.C. 321; 78 L. T. 329—H.L. (E.)

Equitable Assignment—Reversionary Interest—Stop Order.—A Jewish lady, who was entitled to a reversionary interest in a fund in Court after the death of her mother, married a Moorish Jew in Morocco, and signed a marriage contract under which it was alleged that according to Jewish custom her children became entitled to the fund on her death, to the exclusion of the husband. The children obtained no stop order on the fund. The wife died before her mother; and after her death her husband as her administrator assigned the fund to assignees, who obtained a stop order on the fund in Court with notice of the marriage, but without notice of the title of the children. After the mother's death the assignees claimed the fund:—Held, that by obtaining a stop order on the fund from the lady's legal personal representative the assignees became entitled to the fund in priority to the children. Freshfield's Trust, In re (11 Ch. D. 198), considered and followed. Montefiore v. Guedalla (No. 1), 72 L. J. Ch. 442; [1903] 2 Ch. 26; 88 L. T. 496—C.A.

1. WHAT ATTACHABLE.

Rent—Apportionment Act, 1870, s. 2.—Notwithstanding the Apportionment Act, 1870, rent cannot, before it is payable, be attached under a garnishee order as a debt owing or accruing due. Barnett v. Eastman, 67 L. J. Q.B. 517—Day, J.

Money Standing at Companies Liquidation Account—Garnishee Order upon Inspector-General in Companies Liquidation.—Money standing at the Companies Liquidation Account at the Bank of England is not attachable under the garnishee procedure at the suit of a judgment creditor of a person entitled, as a shareholder in a company that has been wound up, to money at that account representing surplus assets of the company. There is no relation of debtor and creditor in respect of such money between any person and the judgment debtor. Spence v. Coleman, 70 L. J. K.B. 632; [1901] 2 K.B. 199; 84 L. T. 703; 49 W. R. 516—C.A.

Debts Owning or Accruing—Assignment of Choses in Action, Executed by Assignor only, Validated by Subsequent Execution by Assignee.—The fees of a public vaccination officer, under a contract specifying that he shall perform certain ministerial acts prior to becoming entitled to payment, and fees for registering births and deaths under the Registration Act, 1836, which prescribes verification of the account of the fees by the superintendent registrar, are debts accruing due so as to be attachable as soon as the work is performed, and although the time for payment may not have arrived. Edmunds v. Edmunds, 73 L. J. P. 97; [1904] P. 362; 91 L. T. 568—Gorell Barnes, J.

An assignment by a judgment debtor may be valid in garnishee proceedings against the claim of the judgment creditor, although at the date of the garnishee proceedings the assignment has not yet been executed by the assignee, provided that he afterwards assents to and executes the same, when its validity relates back to the date of its execution by the assignor. Ib.

Assignment of Choses in Action Void against Creditors—13 Eliz. c. 5—Effect of Assignment to Defeat Individual Creditor.—Since choses in action became attachable by sections 60 et seq. of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, an assignment of them may be void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, as tending to defeat, hinder, or delay creditors. If the effect, not necessarily the object, of the assignment is to defeat, hinder, or delay one particular creditor only, the assignment will be void under the statute. Ib.

Right of Garnishee to Make Payment after Notice of Garnishee Order Nisi—Obligation to Stop Payment of Cheque.—A garnishee is not on notice of a garnishee order nisi bound to stop payment of a cheque already given by him to the judgment debtor, but after notice of the order he cannot make payment to the judgment debtor of any moneys in his hands covered by the order, although exceeding the sum attachable. Ib.

Judgment against Foreigner Resident Abroad—Debt Due from Foreign Corporation—Lex Fori—Chose in Action Situate Abroad.—A garnishee order should not be made to attach a debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor where payment under the order will not be a valid discharge to the garnishee as against the judgment debtor of the amount paid under the order. Martin v. Nadel, 75 L. J. K.B. 620; [1906] 2 K.B. 26; 95 L. T. 16; 54 W. R. 525; 22 T. L. R. 561—C.A.

Therefore, where a foreign corporation having its head office abroad and a branch office in London owed a debt contracted abroad to a foreigner resident abroad who became a debtor on a judgment recovered against him in England, Held, that a garnishee order should not be made to attach the debt due from the foreign corporation to the judgment debtor; because that debt would still remain due and payable abroad notwithstanding payment in England under a garnishee order—Per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., on the ground that garnishee proceedings are a process of execution and part of the lex fori, and, as such, not recognised by the law of nations. Per STIRLING, L.J., on the ground that the debt was a chose in action situate abroad. Ib.

Gratuity to Employee in Public Service.—See Timothy v. Day, [1908] 2 Ir. R. 26—C.A.

2. EFFECT OF ORDER.

Secured Creditor—Service before Winding-up Petition.—The attachment of a debt due to a company by the service of a garnishee order nisi before the filing of a petition to wind up the company constitutes the garnisher a secured creditor, and gives him priority over the liquidator. National United Investment Corporation, In re, 70 L. J. Ch. 461; [1901] 1 Ch. 950; 84 L. T. 766—Wright, J.

Judgment Debtor a Company—Appointment of Receiver for Debenture-holders—Right of Judgment Creditor or Receiver to Debt.—A garnishee order does not amount to an assignment, either absolute or by way of security, of the garnished debt. Its effect is to direct the garnishee to pay, not the debt itself, but a sum equivalent to it, to the garnishor. Combined Weighing and Advertising Machine Co., In re (59 L. J. Ch. 26; 43 Ch. D. 99), followed. Watt, In re; Joselyne, ex parte (47 L. J. Bk. 91;

8 Ch. D. 327), explained. Geisse v. Taylor (74 L. J. K.B. 912; [1905] 2 K.B. 658) approved. Norton v. Yates (75 L. J. K.B. 252; [1906] 1 K.B. 112; 54 W. R. 183—Warrington, J.

But the debt remains the property of the judgment debtor, and the right of the garnishor is subject to the rights and equities existing over it when the garnishee order is obtained. Badeley v. Consolidated Bank (57 L. J. Ch. 463; 38 Ch. D. 238) and London Pressed Hinge Co., In re; Campbell v. Company (74 L. J. Ch. 321; [1905] 1 Ch. 576), followed. Ib.

Therefore, where a company had issued debentures giving a floating security over all its property, a receiver, who had been appointed in a debenture-holders' action two days after a judgment creditor of the company had served a garnishee order nisi attaching a debt due to the company, was held entitled, as against the garnishor, to payment of moneys which had been paid into Court by the garnishee, under an order, to abide further order. Robson v. Smith (64 L. J. Ch. 457; [1895] 2 Ch. 118) distinguished. Ib.

A garnishee order attaching a debt due to a company is not within a condition endorsed on debentures (which create a floating security) that "notwithstanding the charge hereby created the company shall be at liberty in the course of its business to deal with all or any part" of the property charged. Davey v. Williamson & Sons (67 L. J. Q.B. 699; [1898] 2 Q.B. 194) followed. Ib.

Garnishee Order—Judgment Debtor a Company—Appointment of Receiver for Debenture-holder—Right of Garnishor or Debenture-holder to Debt.—Neither a garnishee order nisi nor a garnishee order absolute operates to transfer the garnished debt to the garnishor; the debt remains the property of the judgment debtor, and the right of the garnishor is subject to the rights and equities existing over it when the garnishor obtains the order nisi. Therefore, where a company had issued a debenture giving a floating security over all its property, the debenture-holder, who, under the powers given by his debenture, appointed a receiver of the company's assets some days after a judgment creditor of the company had served a garnishee order absolute requiring the garnishee to pay to him a debt due to the company, was held entitled as against the garnishor to payment of the money which had been attached and which had been brought into Court by the garnishee to abide the trial of an interpleader issue. Combined Weighing and Advertising Machine Co., In re (59 L. J. Ch. 26; 43 Ch. D. 99), and Norton v. Yates (75 L. J. K.B. 252; [1906] 1 K.B. 112) applied. Robson v. Smith (64 L. J. Ch. 457; [1895] 2 Ch. 118) held inapplicable. Cairney v. Back, 75 L. J. K.B. 1014; [1906] 2 K.B. 746; 96 L. T. 111; 14 Manson, 58; 22 T. L. R. 776—Walton, J.

Balance in Hands of Garnishee—Right of Assignee of Judgment Debt to Balance as against Creditor in Subsequent Garnishee Summons.—A garnishee summons was served upon the garnishee, who was indebted to the judgment debtor in a sum exceeding that claimed by the summons. Thereafter the judgment debtor assigned to another of his creditors part of the sum due to him from the garnishee, and of this assignment due notice was given to the latter. Subsequently a second garnishee summons was served upon the garnishee by a third creditor of the judgment debtor. Thereupon the garnishee paid into Court a sum to satisfy the amount claimed by the first garnishee summons, and the balance he paid into Court to satisfy, so far as it would go, the amount claimed by the second garnishee summons:—Held, that in so appropriating the fund in his hands and ignoring the rights of the assignee the garnishee acted wrongly, and was therefore liable to the assignee for the balance left after satisfying the amount claimed by the first garnishee summons. Yates v. Terry, 71 L. J. K.B. 282; [1902] 1 K.B. 527; 86 L. T. 133; 50 W. R. 293—C.A.

Garnishee Order Nisi—Payment by Garnishee to Judgment Creditor—Bankruptcy of Judgment Debtor—Relation Back of Trustee's Title.—A debtor to a bankrupt who has paid his debt to a judgment creditor of the bankrupt upon the service of a garnishee order nisi made after the act of bankruptcy upon which the adjudication was made, must pay it again to the trustee. Webster, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 380; [1907] 1 K.B. 623; 96 L. T. 332; 14 Manson, 20; 23 T. L. R. 275—D.

3. SETTING ASIDE ORDER.

Setting Aside Garnishee Order Absolute—Mistake.—The Court will, in order to prevent a miscarriage of justice, set aside a garnishee order absolute on proof of a mistake of fact under which the order was obtained. Marshall v. James, 74 L. J. Ch. 279; [1905] 1 Ch. 432; 92 L. T. 681; 54 W. R. 363—Joyce, J.

Where a judgment creditor, upon a mistaken allegation that debts were owed by third parties to his debtor personally, obtained a garnishee order absolute against those third parties, and it was subsequently proved that the debts were owing not to the debtor, but to the firm in which the debtor was a partner, the garnishee order was set aside on the application of the debtor's partner. Moore v. Peachey (66 L. T. 198) followed. Ib.

1. WHEN ORDERED.

Breach of Undertaking to Execute Indenture.—Where defendants committed a breach of their undertaking forthwith to execute an indenture.—Held, that there ought either to be service in accordance with Order XLI. rule 5 of the Rules of Court, 1883, or a four-day order. An order therefore was made that the defendants should on or before December 5 or subsequently within four days of the service of the order, execute the deed tendered to them by the plaintiff. Halford v. Hardy, 81 L. T. 721—Kekewich, J.

Trustee—Non-Receipt of Money—Commission from Purchaser and on Insurance Premiums.—Under the will of B., deceased, persons entitled to possession of the B. estates might sell the heirlooms, but were to replace them out of the proceeds of sale by articles of a similar character. F. was co-trustee with C., the tenant for life of the B. estates, and C. with the consent of F. sold the heirlooms, and received the purchase-money, but did not purchase other articles in their place. The purchaser paid F. 200*l.* in connection with the sale. Before F. (who was a solicitor) was appointed a trustee he received 200*l.* from an insurance company as commission on policies effected through him on C.'s life as security for trust money lent to C. On the death of C. the B. estates passed to A., who commenced an action for the administration of the estate of C., and an order was made directing F. to pay the plaintiff the 200*l.* received in connection with the sale of the heirlooms, and also the 200*l.* received from the insurance company. F. failed to comply with that order, and A. applied for leave to issue a writ of attachment against him:—Held, that the payment of the 200*l.* received as commission from the insurance company ought not to be enforced by attachment as the matter was not within the exception in section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869; but that attachment ought to issue in respect of the 200*l.* paid by the purchaser of the heirlooms. Berwick, In re; Berwick v. Lane, 81 L. T. 797—C.A.

2. PRACTICE.

Personal Service—Presence in Court.—The fact that a person is actually in Court when an order is made against him to do some act, or the fact that he is otherwise aware of the order, is no reason for dispensing with personal service as required by Order XLI. rule 5, for the purpose of founding a motion for attachment or sequestration in a case where the person is not evading such service. Dictum of Cotton, L.J., in Hyde v. Hyde (57 L. J. P. 89; 13 P. D. 166) disapproved. Truck, In re; Murch v. Loosemore, 75 L. J. Ch. 497; [1906] 1 Ch. 692; 94 L. T. 597; 22 T. L. R. 425—C.A.

Four-day Order—Insertion of, by Registrar.—In drawing up an order directing a person to do an act within a limited time the Registrar may insert as a matter of course, and without any special instructions, the words "or subsequently within four days after service of the order." Townend v. Townend (40 L. J. N.C. 788, 853; W. N. (1905), 158, 178; 93 L. T. 680, 682) explained. Ib.

Order of Court to Attend for Examination—Disobedience to Order—Personal Service of Order—Evasion of Service.—Personal service of an order of the Court is not a condition precedent to the making of an order for the issue of a writ of attachment against a person who has disobeyed the order of the Court, where such person has knowledge that the order has been made and is evading service thereof. The rule laid down by Cotton, L.J., in Hyde v. Hyde (57 L. J. P. 89; 13 P. D. 166), as to the practice in the case of a writ of sequestration applied to a writ of attachment for disobedience to an order of the Court. Kestler v. Tettmar, 74 L. J. K.B. 1; [1905] 1 K.B. 39; 92 L. T. 36; 53 W. R. 230; 21 T. L. R. 24—C.A.

Motion—Contempt—Service of Order—Two Executors—Service on One.—An order was made against two co-executors that they should "within four days after service of this order" lodge in Court a sum of money appearing to be due from them. The order was duly served upon one of them, but not upon the other, his address being undiscoverable. The order having been disobeyed,—Held, on a motion for the issue of a writ of attachment against the executor who had received service of the order, that it was not necessary to have previously served the order on the absent executor. The words "after service" in the order meant "after service" upon the person against whom it was sought to enforce the order. Ellis, In re; Hardcastle v. Ellis, 95 L. T. 80; 54 W. R. 526—Buckley, J.

Garnishee Order—Right to Bring Action for Money Due.—Under Order XLII. rule 24, orders as well as judgments can be enforced by action; therefore a judgment creditor, who has obtained a garnishee order absolute directing garnishees to pay to him a debt due by them to the judgment debtor, can, if unable to obtain payment by execution, bring an action against them for the money due. Pritchett v. English and Colonial Syndicate, 68 L. J. Q.B. 801; [1899] 2 Q.B. 428; 81 L. T. 206; 47 W. R. 577—C.A.

Enforcing Order against Corporation—Attachment of Director—Service of Order.—An order on a corporation for an affidavit as to the purchase of shares will not be enforced, under Order XLII. rule 31, by the issue of a writ of attachment against its director, until he has been personally served with the order sought to be enforced. McKewen v. Joint Stock Institute, 68 L. J. Ch. 390; [1899] 1 Ch. 671; 80 L. T. 641; 6 Manson, 338—North, J.

Failure to Obey Peremptory Mandamus—Intention.—A writ of attachment will issue for failure to obey a peremptory mandamus even when such failure is in noway intended to be disrespectful to the Court. Reg. v. Leicester Guardians, 81 L. T. 559—D.

Foreign Order—Enrolment—Disobedience—Service in England—Jurisdiction.—Motion for leave to issue a writ of attachment. An order was made by one of the Land Judges of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Ireland upon the respondent A. H. S. to lodge in Court on oath all documents in his custody, power, or procurement relating to certain property in Ireland ordered to be sold (or account for the same on oath) within ten days after service of the said order upon him. By an order made March 26, 1901, the Irish order was ordered to be enrolled in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice in England. On April 11, 1901, a copy of the order of March 26, 1901, was personally served on A. H. S. in London:—Held, that as the order to lodge the deeds in Court had not been served on A. H. S. in Ireland, and no leave had been obtained to serve that order on A. H. S. out of the jurisdiction, there had been no disobedience, and the motion for leave to issue a writ of attachment must be refused. Syngé, In re, 85 L. T. 736—C.A.

Release from Custody—Judicial Separation—Order to Pay or Secure Wife's Costs—Wife's Costs of Proceedings for Attachment.—Where a husband who has been attached and imprisoned for contempt of Court in failing to obey an order of the Court to pay or secure a sum of money for his wife's costs in a suit brought by her for judicial separation, has afterwards obeyed the order; he is entitled to be released from custody. The Court will order him to pay all his wife's costs incurred with respect to the motions for attachment and release, but will not make the payment of such costs a condition precedent to his release. Jackson v. Mauby (45 L. J. Ch. 53; 1 Ch. D. 86) followed. Ayres v. Ayres, 71 L. J. P. 18; 85 L. T. 648—Gorell Barnes, J.

AUCTIONEER.

Auctioneer Selling by Mistake Property without Authority—Liability to Purchaser.—An auctioneer warrants his authority to sell, and if he sells without authority, although by innocent mistake, he is liable in damages to the purchaser for loss of bargain. The rule applied where a horse was sold by mistake and the purchaser informed of the mistake on the same day (LORD YOUNG dissenting). Anderson v. Croall, 6 F. 153—Ct. of Sess.

Personal Liability—Sale Subject to Reserve Price—Acceptance of Bid Less than Reserve Price—Action by Bidder—Breach of Duty—Breach of Warranty of Authority.—At an auction, where by the conditions of sale each lot was to be offered subject to a reserve price, the plaintiff bid for a lot a sum which was less than the reserve price. The auctioneer, thinking by mistake that the reserve price had been reached, knocked down the lot to the plaintiff. He immediately discovered his mistake and withdrew the lot, and refused, though requested by the plaintiff, to make and sign a memorandum of contract of sale:—Held, that, inasmuch as both the bid and the acceptance of the bid at the auction were conditional on the reserve price being reached or exceeded, the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain an action against the auctioneer either for breach of duty or for breach of warranty of authority. McManus v. Fortescue, 76 L. J. K.B. 393; [1907] 2 K.B. 1; 96 L. T. 444; 23 T. L. R. 292—C.A. And see SALE OF GOODS.

BAILMENT.

Loss—Negligence—Onus of Proof.—Where goods are given into the sole custody of a person and accepted by him as bailee, and they are lost while in his custody, the onus lies upon him to shew circumstances negating negligence on his part. Phipps v. New Claridge's Hotel, Lim., 22 T. L. R. 49—Bray, J.

Gratuitous Bailee—Burden of Proof—Detinue.—The plaintiff left certain engraving plates in the custody of the defendants, under circumstances which imposed upon them the duty of taking as much care of them as a reasonable man would take in the case of his own goods. While in the defendants' custody the plates were taken away by some one and lost. There was no evidence to show how they were taken away, but the defendants proved that the plates were kept in a proper place, and under the charge of proper persons, and that the arrangements for their safe keeping were reasonably sufficient:—Held, that the defendants had proved that they had used such care in the custody of the plates as a reasonable man would use in the case of his own property, and that therefore they were not liable. Powell v. Graves (2 T. L. R. 663) discussed. Bullen v. Swan Electric Engraving Co., 23 T. L. R. 258—C.A.

Carriage Lent to Bailee—Damage to Carriage by Servant of Bailee not in Course of his Employment—Liability of Bailee for Damage.]—The plaintiff, a coachbuilder, lent the defendant a dogcart whilst he repaired the defendant's carriage. The bailee's servant, not acting in the course of his employment, negligently injured the lent dogcart by driving it into a tramcar:—Held, that the bailor could recover damages from the bailee for the injury done to his dogcart. Coupe Co. v. Maddick (60 L. J. Q.B. 676; [1891] 2 Q.B. 413) followed. Saunderson v. Collins, 89 L. T. 42; 51 W. R. 558—D.

Gratuitous Loan of Chattel—For Beneficial Use by Borrower—Injury to Borrower owing to Defect in Chattel—Liability of Lender—Gross Negligence—Knowledge of Lender of Defect.]—Where a chattel is lent gratuitously for beneficial use by the borrower, it is the duty of the lender to communicate to the borrower any defect in it with reference to the use for which the loan is made, of which the lender is aware, and if he wilfully or by gross negligence omits to do so he is liable for injury resulting from such defect to the borrower while using the chattel. Blackmore v. Bristol and Exeter Railway (27 L. J. Q.B. 167; 8 E. & B. 1035) and MacCarthy v. Young (30 L. J. Ex. 227; 6 H. & N. 329) approved. Coughlin v. Gillison, 68 L. J. Q.B. 147; [1899] 1 Q.B. 145; 79 L. T. 627; 47 W. R. 113—C.A.

Liability of Bailee to Bailor for Tortious Act of Servant Outside the Scope of his Employment.]—The bailee of a chattel for hire is not, in the absence of want of due care on his part, liable to the bailor for damage caused to the chattel by the tortious act of the bailee's servant whilst acting outside the scope of his employment. Coupe Co. v. Maddick (60 L. J. Q.B. 676; [1891] 2 Q.B. 413) considered and distinguished. Sanderson v. Collins, 73 L. J. K.B. 358; [1904] 1 K.B. 628; 90 L. T. 243; 52 W. R. 354; 20 T. L. R. 249—C.A.

Injury to Chattel Bailed by Negligence of Stranger—Bailee not Liable over to Bailor—Action by Bailee—Measure of Damages.]—In an action against a stranger for loss of goods caused by his negligence, the bailee in possession of the goods can recover their value, although he would have had a good answer to an action by the bailor for damages for the loss of the goods. Claridge v. South Staffordshire Tramway Co. (61 L. J. Q.B. 503; [1892] 1 Q.B. 422), overruled. The Winkfield, 71 L. J. P. 21; [1902] P. 42; 85 L. T. 668; 50 W. R. 246; 9 Asp. M.C. 259—C.A.

Hiring for a Year—Right to Continue—Three Months' Notice.]—By an agreement the plaintiffs agreed to let and one E. agreed to hire two carriage horses by the year from a certain date at 105l. per annum, payment to be made quarterly. It was also provided: "After the expiration of the first year the hiring can be terminated by either party giving one quarter's written notice from a quarter day":—Held, that the hiring was for one year certain, with a right to keep the horses after the end of the year, and then to terminate the contract by a quarter's notice. Tilling, Lim. v. James, 94 L. T. 823; 22 T. L. R. 599—D.

Owner's Risk Clause—Act Intentionally Done—No Knowledge that Damage would Result—Liability.]—Cheese was received by the defendants "to be stored at owner's risk," and the defendants were not to be responsible for damage or loss caused by certain specified matters or "from any other cause whatever." The cheese was kept at too low a temperature, and the jury found there was want of skill:—Held, that there was nothing to do away with the owner's risk clause, for although the act was intentionally done, that did not amount to wilful misconduct, and so the defendants were not liable. Cordey v. Cardiff Pure Ice Co., 88 L. T. 192—C.A.

1. ACCOUNT.

Appropriation — Interest — Principal.]—The rule that payments on account are to be appropriated to interest before principal does not apply where, in the case of bankers' accounts, the interest has, upon making up the account half-yearly, been converted into capital. Parr's Banking Co. v. Yates, 67 L. J. Q.B. 861; [1898] 2 Q.B. 460; 47 W. R. 42—C.A.

Separate Account—Trust—Notice.]—Where a customer of a bank receives trust moneys for investment and opens a separate account into which such moneys are paid, and it is not shewn that the bank had notice of the trust, the bank is at liberty to treat such moneys as belonging to the customer and to appropriate them against his overdrawn account. Union Bank of Australia v. Murray-Aynsley, 67 L. J. P.C. 123; [1898] A.C. 693—P.C.

Right of Set-off—Customer having Control of Two Accounts—Transfer from One Account to Another.]—In the absence of notice of fraud a banker is entitled to set off what is due to a customer on one account against what is due from him on another, although the former may in fact belong to other persons. Bank of New South Wales v. Goulburn Valley Butter Factory, 71 L. J. P.C. 112; [1902] A.C. 543; 87 L. T. 88; 51 W. R. 867—P.C.

A trader carried on his own business in conjunction with that of a company of which he was managing director, and by himself or his nominees held all the shares. The company's account and the trader's account were in the same bank, and blank cheques were given to the bank manager in respect of each account to be filled in with amounts necessary for the purpose of adjustment of the two accounts. Blank cheques of the company were improperly filled in by the trader with amounts which were credited to his account:—Held, that in the absence of notice on the part of the bank of the state of accounts between the trader and the company, the bank was not liable to refund the money. Ib.

Right to Set off one Account of Company against another—Voluntary Winding-up.—A bank agreed with the directors of a company which had an overdrawn account to close that account, and open a No. 2 account. This was done for the purpose of winding up the business of the company, which was in difficulties, and the bank was so informed. Moneys were lodged to the No. 2 account and cheques drawn against it. The company afterwards went into voluntary liquidation. The bank declined to allow the liquidator to draw against the No. 2 account, and claimed to set off the credit balance on that account against the debit balance of the No. 1 account:—Held, that there was a special arrangement which prevented the bank exercising its ordinary right of setting off one account of a customer against another. Johnson & Co., In re, [1902] 1 Ir. R. 439—M.R.

Broker—Several Accounts—Fraudulent Deposit of Securities—General Indebtedness—Debit to Loan Account—Credit to Current Account—Equities between Persons Claiming under Customer.—A firm of brokers kept two accounts with their bankers, a current account and a loan account. The brokers wrongfully deposited bonds of their clients to secure their general indebtedness to the bank, and also paid to the credit of their current account moneys of other clients which they had received to pay for investments. The brokers having been declared defaulters, the bank opened a new liquidation account, to which they transferred 1,362*l.* then standing to the credit of the current account and the amount standing to the debit of the loan account, which largely exceeded the 1,362*l.* The bank never, in fact, appropriated the 1,362*l.* to meet the debit, but satisfied it by sale of a sufficient part of the deposited bonds:—Held, that, as against the clients entitled to follow the 1,362*l.*, the owners of the deposited bonds, in calculating the amount for which the bonds were a security, were entitled to have the 1,362*l.* first applied in reduction of the debit. Mutton v. Peat, 69 L. J. Ch. 484; [1900] 2 Ch. 79; 82 L. T. 440; 48 W. R. 486—C.A.

Mortgage—Current Account—Closing of Account—Power of Sale.—Where a mortgage to secure an account current with a bank contains a power of sale, to arise on the closing of the account, the account is closed by a letter from the mortgagor to the bank stating that he has agreed to assign all his assets to a trustee for creditors. The fact that an account is in debit does not prevent its being closed by the customer. *Berry v. Halifax Commercial Banking Co., 70 L. J. Ch. 85; [1901] 1 Ch. 188; 83 L. T. 665; 49 W. 2. BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

Delivery to Bank to be Discounted—Whether Property of Bank or Customer—Bill Receivable—Whether a Book Debt.—Under an agreement for purchase of shares in a company the purchase price was to be ascertained by taking into account book debts due to the company. A bill of exchange had been received by the company in the ordinary course of business, and had been indorsed and handed to the company's bankers for the purpose of being discounted, but it had not been discounted:—Held, on the authority of Stevens, In re; Stevens v. Keily (W. N. 1888, pp. 110, 116), that the bill was a book debt, and, following Giles v. Perkins (9 East, 12), and distinguishing Schofield, Ex parte; Firth, In re (12 Ch. D. 337), that it had not become the property of the bank, but remained the property of the company. It must therefore be taken into account, in ascertaining the purchase price, as a book debt due to the company. Dawson v. Isle, 75 L. J. Ch. 338; [1906] 1 Ch. 633; 95 L. T. 385; 54 W. R. 452—Warrington, J.

Breach of Contract—Draft Accompanied by Shipping Documents—Frozen Meat Trade—Usual Form of Policy.—The plaintiff carried on business in London as an importer of frozen meat. The defendant bank, at the plaintiff's request, undertook to negotiate, at the bank's option, drafts drawn by the shippers on the plaintiff in respect of consignments of frozen meat, the drafts to be accompanied by shipping documents—that is, bills of lading, invoice, and policy of insurance. The bank negotiated a draft attached to which was a policy containing a clause "To pay a total loss by total loss of vessel only." The usual form of policy in the frozen meat trade is a policy covering all risks. The plaintiff in the usual course of business accepted the draft before he had examined the documents. A partial loss of the consignment took place, which by reason of the clause in the policy the plaintiff could not recover from the underwriters:—Held, that the bank had committed a breach of its contract with the plaintiff in negotiating a draft which was not accompanied by a policy of insurance in the proper form, and that the bank was liable to make good the loss to the plaintiff. Borthwick v. Bank of New Zealand, 6 Com. Cas. 1—Mathew, J. And see BILL OF EXCHANGE.

3. CHEQUES.

Payment under Mistake of Fact—Certification of Cheque—Estoppel—Notice of Dishonour.—A customer of the respondent bank drew a cheque which the bank certified with its stamp. The effect of the certifying was to shew that it was drawn on sufficient funds. The customer fraudulently altered the cheque into one for a larger amount, and opened an account with the appellant bank, on which he drew. The cheque so altered passed through the clearing-house, and being certified was honoured by the respondents. The latter, discovering the fraud on the following day, at once gave notice to the appellants. In an action by the respondents to recover from the appellants the difference between the original and the altered cheque,—

Held, that the respondents were entitled to recover, as there was no negligence on the respondents' part to induce the appellants to treat the cheque as good; and as there were no indorsers to whom notice of dishonour had to be given and the appellants had not been prejudiced by want of notice, there was no liability on the respondents in consequence of want of notice to the appellants on the day on which the cheque was presented. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Bank of Hamilton, 72 L. J. P.C. 1; [1903] A.C. 49; 87 L. T. 457; 51 W. R. 289—P.C.

Payment of Forged Cheque—Negligence of Customer—Estoppel.—Three directors of a limited company, of whom one was the chairman, appointed the son of the chairman as secretary. Some years before, to the knowledge of the chairman, the son had forged his name, but since then, down to the time of his appointment, he had lived apparently a blameless life. With the directors' consent the secretary had charge of all the books of the company, including the cheque-book and pass-book, and, by means of an elaborate system of fraud, not only succeeded in forging a director's name to cheques which were duly honoured by the bank, but for a long period escaped detection. In an action against the bank to recover the amount of the forged cheques honoured and paid,—Held, that the limited company was not estopped by negligence from recovering the amount of such forged cheques from the bank. Leves Sanitary Steam Laundry Co. v. Barclay & Co., 95 L. T. 444; 11 Com. Cas. 255; 22 T. L. R. 737—Kennedy, J.

Alteration of Cheque—Extent of Banker's Liability—Negligence.—The customer of a bank who so draws a cheque that a forger is able to insert words and figures increasing the amount is not liable to the bank for the loss sustained in paying the increased amount. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Marshall, 75 L. J. P.C. 76; [1906] A.C. 559; 95 L. T. 310; 22 T. L. R. 746—P.C.

Three executors signed cheques on their bankers. The cheques were drawn by one of them in such a way that he was able by the insertion of words and figures to increase the amounts for which the cheques were originally drawn:—Held, that the bankers were only entitled to charge the executors for the amounts for which the cheques were originally drawn, and not for the sums as increased by the forgery. Ib.

The principles held in Scholfield v. Londesborough (Earl) (65 L. J. Q.B. 593; [1896] A. C. 514) to be applicable as between the acceptor and a subsequent holder of a bill of exchange apply equally as between a customer of a bank and the bank. Ib.

Cheque Certified before Delivery as Represented by Assets of the Drawer—Effect of Entry in Pass-Book.—A cheque certified before delivery is subject, as regards its subsequent negotiation, to all the rules applicable to uncertified cheques. Gaden v. Newfoundland Savings Bank, 68 L. J. P.C. 57; [1899] A.C. 281; 80 L. T. 329—P.C.

The entry in a pass-book of such a cheque is not conclusive proof of acceptance as cash by the bank issuing the pass-book, and does not exclude evidence of the real nature of the transaction so recorded. Ib.

The appellant drew a cheque on a bank, which certified on the face of the cheque that the drawer had assets to meet it. The appellant immediately deposited the cheque with the respondents, who issued to her a pass-book, and credited her therein with the amount of the cheque. If the cheque had been presented by the respondents on the same day it would have been paid. But in the ordinary course of business the appellants paid the cheque to their bank, and before it was presented the bank on which the cheque was drawn became insolvent:—Held, that the cheque was accepted by the respondents as the agents of the appellant, and not with the intention of acquiring title to it or gratuitously guaranteeing its payment, and that thus the loss fell on the appellant. Ib.

Contract to Honour Outstanding Cheques—Consideration moving from Agent—Evidence of Special Damage.—The deposit of a "store warrant" for sheep with a bank by an agent of a customer is sufficient consideration for a promise to honour outstanding cheques within the rule laid down in Currie v. Misa (L. R. 10 Ex. 153), and an action will lie for breach of contract in dishonouring such cheques. It is no answer to such an action to say that the consideration did not move from the plaintiff, but from an agent in his behalf. But held, that evidence of special damage by the dishonour of the cheques was not admissible. Fleming v. Bank of New Zealand, 69 L. J. P.C. 120; [1900] A.C. 577; 83 L. T. 1—P.C.

4. TRUST MONEY.

Executor Paying Trust Money into Credit of his Own Account—Liability of Bank.—A lodged to the credit of his private account at a bank moneys which belonged to him and B as executors of C. The bank had notice that the moneys so lodged were trust-moneys, but had no notice that A intended to commit a breach of trust, and placed the moneys to the credit of A's account in the ordinary way. A afterwards became insolvent, and his account was overdrawn. B brought an action against the bank and A to have it declared that the bank were trustees of the moneys so lodged on behalf of B and A as executors of C:—Held, that the bank were not liable. Shields v. Bank of Ireland, [1901] 1 Ir. R. 222—M.R.

5. ADVANCES.

Credit against Production of Documents—Certificate of Analysis—Fraudulent Misrepresentation.—A bank was authorised to advance a sum against production of documents. The mandate was as follows: "Negotiate drafts of A. O. at sight on D. Bank (Berlin) London agency p. 800l. account B. S. (against) bill of lading, policy of insurance and certificate analysis from Dr. H. (for) 100 tons cobalt ore analysis not less than 5 per cent. protoxide shipped by steamer (to) Europe. Credit expires. . . ." A. O. intended to ship worthless ore, and in the bill of lading it was described as "P.M. 2680 bags containing 100 tons cobalt ore." A policy of insurance was also effected. A sample of sound ore was submitted for analysis, which analysis the bank refused to accept, as the certificate did not refer to the bill of lading goods. A. O. then marked the sample as the bill of lading quantity was described. The analyst gave a second certificate, which was as follows: "Sample of cobalt ore marked P.M. 2680 bags representing 100 tons received from you on the 12th July gave the following results: 4.14 per cent. cobalt, equal to 5.27 per cent. cobalt protoxide in the dry ore; 9.25 per cent. moisture." On producing the second certificate the bank paid A. O. 800l. Subsequently A. O. was convicted of obtaining that money by fraudulent misrepresentation.—Held, that the certificate on its face was regular and came within the meaning of the mandate, and there was no duty on the bank to see to the sampling. The bank was entitled to assume that the analyst had acted skilfully in making the analysis. Basse v. Bank of Australasia, 90 L. T. 618; 20 T. L. R. 431—Bigham, J.

Deposit of Deeds—Priority—Debentures—Restrictive Condition—Representation—Constructive Notice.—A banker in dealing with a customer is not fixed with notice of the contents of a document deposited with him as security by another customer. Valletort Sanitary Laundry Co., In re; Ward v. Valletort Sanitary Laundry Co., 72 L. J. Ch. 674; [1903] 2 Ch. 654; 89 L. T. 60—Swinfen Eady, J.

A deposit of title-deeds as a security is a representation that the depositor has power to make a valid deposit, without any express statement to that effect. A banker who takes as security a second debenture which states that it is to rank after first debentures already issued, will not thereby be affected with notice of the conditions contained in the first debentures so as to affect his position in regard to a former transaction with the same customer, although that transaction related to security for overdrafts on a current account and liability was incurred in respect thereof after the second debenture had been issued. Ib.

Right to Repayment of Loan—Deed of Assignment.—The respondents were jointly indebted to the appellant bank, and J. F., one of the partners in the respondents' firm, was also separately indebted to the bank. By deed they assigned to the bank certain moneys due to them "as to their said indebtedness," and J. F. assigned his interest "as to his said indebtedness":—Held, that it was not necessary that the value of J. F.'s interest in the partnership assets assigned should be ascertained before the bank could repay itself his separate debt out of such asset. National Bank of Australasia v. Falkingham, 71 L. J. P.C. 105; [1902] A.C. 585; 87 L. T. 90—P.C.

1. PERSONS LIABLE TO.

Married Woman—Separate Trading—Petition before Marriage—Receiving Order after Marriage.]

—A receiving order cannot be made against a married woman who is not trading separately from her husband, although the debt and act of bankruptcy are admitted, and the petition has come on for hearing and been adjourned before her marriage. Debtor, In re; Debtor, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 820; [1898] 2 Q.B. 576; 78 L. T. 824; 46 W. R. 675; 5 Manson, 122—C.A.

—Carrying on Trade Separately from Husband—Absenting Herself with Intent to Defeat Creditors.]

—Where a married woman has carried on trade separately from her husband, and there are remaining undischarged debts incurred by her for the purposes of that business, she is subject to the bankruptcy laws in respect of her separate estate under sub-section 5 of section 1 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, although she has ceased to carry on business. Dagnall, In re; Soan & Morley, ex parte (65 L. J. Q.B. 666; [1896] 2 Q.B. 407), approved. Worsley, In re; Lambert, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 93; [1901] 1 K.B. 309; 84 L. T. 100; 49 W. R. 182; 8 Manson, 8—C.A.

Where a business is bought out of the separate property of a married woman, and she accepts bills and incurs debts for the purposes thereof, the mere fact that the business is carried on in part of the house where the husband lives, and that he takes some part in the management, is not sufficient to warrant the conclusion that there was no carrying on of a separate business by the wife. Ib.

A married woman who was carrying on a business separately from her husband left her place of business and shut up her shop, leaving no address, and joined her husband where he was living in London. There were trade debts incurred by her remaining undischarged, and there was some evidence that she was attempting to evade service of legal process in London: —Held, that she was absenting herself with intent to defeat or delay her creditors within the meaning of sub-section 1 (d) of section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and the fact that she had gone to join her husband was not sufficient to negative that conclusion. Ib.

— Judgment against Firm.]—A married woman carrying on trade in the name of a firm separately from her husband cannot be made bankrupt for non-compliance with a bankruptcy notice founded on a judgment obtained against her in the name of the firm. Handford & Co., In re; Handford, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 386; [1899] 1 Q.B. 566; 80 L. T. 125; 47 W. R. 391; 6 Manson, 181—C.A.

— Judgment against—Debtor's Summons.]—Where a judgment has been obtained against a married woman in accordance with the form laid down in Scott v. Morley (57 L. J. Q.B. 43; 20 Q.B. D. 120) the judgment debtor cannot be adjudged a bankrupt on a debtor's summons issued on the judgment. Elliott, In re, [1900] 2 Ir. R. 439—Boyd, J.

Lunatic Debtor—Creditor's Petition—Committee in England—Curator Bonis in Scotland

—Locus Standi of Curator to Appear on Petition.]—Where a person has been found a lunatic in England, and a committee of his estate has been appointed, the committee is the proper person to act on behalf of the lunatic in bankruptcy proceedings against him in England; and a curator bonis to him previously appointed in Scotland on the ground of his inability through physical infirmity to attend to business matters has no locus standi to appear in the bankruptcy proceedings. R. S. A. (a debtor), In re, 70 L. J. K.B. 475; [1901] 2 K.B. 32; 84 L. T. 477; 8 Manson, 164—C.A.

A committee of a lunatic debtor ought not to consent to an adjudication against him without having first obtained the sanction of the lunacy jurisdiction. Ib.

Foreigner "ordinarily resident"—Hotel.]—A foreigner who, for purposes of litigation, has stayed in England at hotels during nine months of the year immediately preceding the date of the presentation of a bankruptcy petition, has "ordinarily resided" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 6, sub-s. 1. Bright, In re; Bright, ex parte, 51 W. R. 342—C.A.

2. ACT OF.

(a) ASSIGNMENT TO DEFEAT CREDITORS.

Sale of Business Effects to Company for Worthless Second Debentures—Hire-purchase Agreement.]

—W., who carried on an extensive business, had been financed by D. In April, 1900, he asked D. for a loan of 1,000L., and it was eventually arranged that D. should purchase part of the plant of his business for 1,000L., and W. should repurchase it under a hire-purchase agreement. In the following July a similar transaction took place under which W. received 2,000L. The hire-purchase agreements contained a licence to seize and sell. On February 6, 1901, W. assigned to the defendant company all his trade assets, including the chattels comprised in the two hire-purchase agreements, but retained book debts of the nominal value of 1,760L., which realised 700L. The consideration for the assignment was 3,700L. in second debentures and 100L. in cash. D. took first debentures of the nominal value of 3,000L. At the date of the assignment to the company W. owed 4,000L., excluding his debt to D. The company went into liquidation, and its assets were insufficient to satisfy the first debentures:—Held, first, that the assignment to the company was void as an act of bankruptcy; secondly, that the transactions resulting in the hire-purchase agreements were in reality loans, and were void under the Bills of Sale Acts owing to the power to seize and sell, and that the chattels comprised therein had not passed to D. by a title antecedent to the sale to the company. Wheatley's Trustee v. Wheatley, 85 L. T. 491—Wright, J.

Transfer of Business to Company—Consideration for Transfer—Shares and Debentures—Notice to Company—Fraudulent Assignment—Title of Trustee—Rights of Debenture-holders—Purchasers for Value.]—The debtor, a tobacconist, obtained stock to the value of about 10,000L. on credit, and forthwith, on December 22, 1902, transferred his business, stock-in-trade, contracts, goodwill, and business premises, which comprised the whole of his assets, to a limited company formed for the purpose of acquiring them. The property assigned by the debtor to the company included the benefit of a contract with M., another tobacconist, for the sale of his business to the debtor. The capital of the company was 25,000*l.*, divided into 25,000 shares of 1*l.* each. The board of five directors consisted of M., the debtor, and three nominees of the debtor. The purchase-price of the debtor's property was a small sum of cash, 23,139 fully paid shares, and one hundred 100*l.* debentures, secured by a floating charge on the assets of the company. The shares were allotted to the debtor, and were unrealisable. Thirty debentures were allotted to M. as consideration for the sale of his business, and the remaining debentures were allotted to the debtor or his nominees as follows: 18 to the debtor, who subsequently charged them in favour of the company; 30 to N. (the nominal vendor to the company and one of the debtor's dummy directors), in respect of alleged promotion money; 7 to B., and 15 to Z., in respect of alleged debts for corresponding amounts due to them from the debtor. No provision whatever was made for the discharge by the company of the debtor's trade liabilities, and the result of the transfer to the company was to divest him of all his assets and leave him nothing wherewith to satisfy trade debts amounting to about 13,000*l.* On February 20, 1903, a receiving order was made against the debtor, and on March 11, 1903, he was adjudicated bankrupt. After the date of the receiving order B. sold his debentures to P. B., and Z. sold his to H. L., for amounts below half their face value. Both P. B. and H. L. knew of the bankruptcy. On a motion by the trustee in bankruptcy for a declaration that the transfer to the company was fraudulent, and that he was entitled to the property free from any incumbrances,—Held, that the transfer by the debtor was fraudulent and an act of bankruptcy, and that the company had notice of and was party to the fraud and act of bankruptcy, and that as against the trustee the transfer was void. Slobodinsky, In re; Moore, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 883; [1903] 2 K.B. 517; 89 L. T. 190; 52 W. R. 156; 10 Manson, 341—Wright, J.

Held, further, that M. took his debentures without notice of the act of bankruptcy, and in good faith, and that the debtor's property recovered by the trustee was subject to a charge for any deficiency which M. might be unable to recover from the company's assets; that N. took his debentures after and with knowledge of the fraudulent transfer, and without valuable consideration, and consequently had no good charge upon the property recovered by the trustee; and that, as P. B. and H. L. bought from tainted persons after the date of the receiving order and with knowledge of the bankruptcy, they also had no good charge on the property. Ib.

Semble, that in a case where an assignment of a bankrupt's property is avoided as fraudulent under section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, it is right that subsequent bona fide purchasers or incumbrancers for value should now be protected in equity, notwithstanding the operation of section 43 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Yet under no circumstances could such purchaser or incumbrancer, even though bona fide, be protected on equitable grounds beyond the real value of what he had given as the consideration for his purchase or incumbrance. Ib.

Transfer of Whole of Assets—Arrangement for Payment of some Creditors Only—Relation Back of Trustee's Title.—In December, 1899, S., a publican, owed about 3000*l.* to trade creditors; his trade premises were mortgaged to W. & Co., his lessors, and he was insolvent. It was agreed that S. should surrender his lease, that W. & Co. should release the mortgage and should take over the stock-in-trade, being the whole of S.'s assets, for 2,800*l.*; this sum was the total amount of a list of his debts furnished by S. and stated to be a complete list; a cheque for 2,800*l.* was handed by W. & Co. to S., who, according to the arrangement, immediately indorsed and delivered it to the respondents, who proceeded to pay all the debts set out in the said list furnished by S. This list did not in fact contain all the creditors. The arrangement was entered into honestly and without any fraudulent motive. A receiving order having been made against S. within three months of this transaction, the trustee sought to recover the sum of 2,800*l.* from the respondents:—Held, that the transfer by S. was an act of bankruptcy as necessarily tending to defeat the creditors omitted from the list, and as substituting for the administration of the estate in bankruptcy a different mode of administration. Sharp, In re; Gundry, ex parte, 83 L. T. 416—Wright, J.

Held also, that section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, does not protect payments made, not in the ordinary course of business, but for the purpose of doing that which in law constitutes an act of bankruptcy, and that the present transaction was therefore not protected by that section. Ib.

Assignment by Partnership of Firm's Assets for Benefit of Trade Creditors.—A deed of assignment by a partnership firm of its partnership assets for the benefit of its trade creditors only is not an assignment of an individual partner's property for the benefit of "his creditors generally" within the meaning of section 4, sub-section 1 (a) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy which will support a bankruptcy petition against him. Phillips, In re; Phillips, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 604; [1900] 2 Q.B. 329; 82 L. T. 691; 49 W. R. 16; 7 Manson, 277—D.

But, quære, whether such an assignment is not an act of bankruptcy on his part as a fraudulent conveyance or transfer within sub-section 1 (b). Ib.

Assignment to Creditor of Chose in Action in Good Faith without Notice—Protected Transaction.—On December 1, 1904, a bankruptcy petition was presented against the debtors, and on December 5 they assigned by deed to a creditor as security for the debt a sum of money due to them. The assignment was made in good faith and the creditor had no notice of the petition. On December 10 the receiving order was made against the debtors:—Held, that the assignment was a protected transaction within section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and was good as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Badham, In re; Palmer, ex parte (10 Morrell, 252), distinguished. Dunkley, In re; Waller, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 963; [1905] 2 K.B. 683; 93 L. T. 248; 21 T. L. R. 707—Bigham, J.

Alleged Acquiescence by Petitioning Creditor—Order by Trustee under the Deed for Goods—Execution of Order on Receipt of Cash—Notice of Execution of Deed.—The debtors called a meeting of creditors at which the petitioning creditors were represented. Their representative refused to have anything to do with a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors. After he left the meeting the deed was executed. On the same day the trustee under the deed sent a small order to the petitioning creditors "as trustee of the estate," which was received on the following day. By return post an invoice was sent to the trustee saying that the goods were "ready awaiting remittance." In exchange for the invoice the trustee sent a cheque, and on the same day as the cheque was received the petitioning creditors received a specific notice of the execution of the deed, after which they dispatched the goods. Held—first, that the order did not necessarily convey to the petitioning creditors that a deed had been executed; and secondly, that the transaction was complete, although the goods had not been sent off before the specific notice was received, and that the petitioning creditors were not estopped from relying on the execution of the deed as an act of bankruptcy. Crow, In re; Collier, ex parte, 97 L. T. 140; 14 Manson, 279—D.

(b) EXECUTION.

Seizure and Holding of Goods for Twenty-one Days.—The act of bankruptcy committed by the debtor in such a case under section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, by the seizure of his goods and the holding of them by the sheriff for twenty-one days, does not, if no step is taken upon it, affect the position of the sheriff. Such an act of bankruptcy is constituted by the seizure and the holding for twenty-one days together, and any petition grounded on it must be presented within three months of the completion of that twenty-one days. If, therefore, the sheriff remains in possession for a period extending over twenty-one days, there is not a succession of acts of bankruptcy at the expiration of every period of twenty-one days, nor is there a continued act of bankruptcy extending over the whole period of the possession. Beeston, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 344; [1899] 1 Q.B. 626; 80 L. T. 66; 47 W. R. 475; 6 Manson, 27—C.A.

(c) BANKRUPTCY NOTICE.

Equitable Assignment of Judgment Debt—Right of Judgment Creditor.—A merely equitable assignment of the judgment debt by a judgment creditor does not deprive him of the right to issue a bankruptcy notice under section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Palmer, In re; Brims, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 316; [1898] 1 Q.B. 419; 77 L. T. 709; 46 W. R. 342; 5 Manson, 50—C.A.

Judgment Creditor Adjudicated Bankrupt—Right of Trustee in his Bankruptcy to Issue Bankruptcy Notice.—The trustee in the bankruptcy of a judgment creditor is not, although he has been made a party to the action in which the judgment was obtained, a "person who is for the time being entitled to enforce a final judgment" within the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 1, unless he has obtained leave to issue execution under Order XLII. rule 23, and therefore, till such leave, is not entitled to issue a bankruptcy notice in respect of the judgment debt. Clements, In re; Davis, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 58; [1901] 1 K.B. 260; 83 L. T. 464; 49 W. R. 176; 8 Manson, 27—D.

Address of Creditor in Bankruptcy Notice.—The address of the creditor in a bankruptcy notice should be of a place where he is to be found during the seven days within which the judgment debt is to be paid or secured, and this is so whether that address is of his residence or place of business. Occasional absence from such place, even for a whole day, will not render the bankruptcy notice inefficient unless the absence is such as to deprive the debtor of a reasonable opportunity of paying or securing the debt. It matters not that the address is the temporary home of the creditor, who happens to have no permanent home, or that his occasional absence occurs on the last of the seven days. On the other hand, if the creditor, after service of the notice, abandons his place of address, so that it ceases to be such a place as above described, the bankruptcy notice will cease to be efficient. Stogdon, In re; Leigh, ex parte (65 L. J. Q.B. 47; [1895] 2 Q.B. 534), considered. Beauchamp, In re; Beauchamp, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 311; [1904] 1 K.B. 572; 90 L. T. 594; 52 W. R. 345; 11 Manson, 5; 20 T. L. R. 269—C.A.

"Final judgment"—Order made on Petition for Revocation of a Patent.—An order made on a petition in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, revoking a patent, and ordering the respondent to pay the costs of the petition, under section 26 of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883, is not a "final judgment" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (g), and therefore a bankruptcy notice cannot be founded on such an order. Binstead, In re; Dale, ex parte (62 L. J. Q.B. 207; [1893] 1 Q.B. 199), and Bankruptcy Notice, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (64 L. J. Q.B. 429; [1895] 1 Q.B. 609), applied. Owen, In re; Peters, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 92; 83 L. Final Judgment in High Court—Judgment Summons in County Court—Order on Judgment Summons to Pay by Instalments—No Default.—A judgment summons was issued in the County Court on a final judgment in the High Court, and on October 17, 1903, a bankruptcy notice was served, which was not complied with. On November 2 an order to pay by instalments was made on the judgment summons. On November 3 a bankruptcy petition was presented by another creditor, founded on the non-compliance with the bankruptcy notice:—Held, that the petitioning creditor was entitled to a receiving order, the debtor having committed an act of bankruptcy before the making of the order on the judgment summons, which any creditor could take advantage of. Montgomery v. De Bulmes (67 L. J. Q.B. 768; [1898] 2 Q.B. 420) distinguished. Debtor, In re; Rock Red Brick Co., ex parte, 90 L. T. 64; 52 W. R. 302—D.

Submission to Arbitration—Order that Award be Enforced and Judgment Entered in Accordance therewith—Judgment based on Order—Jurisdiction.—Where an order is made under the Arbitration Act, 1889, that an award be enforced and that judgment be entered in accordance therewith, a judgment based on such order is not a “final judgment” in an action upon which a bankruptcy notice can be founded within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (g). Such a judgment is bad on the face of it for want of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 12, which provides for the enforcement by leave of the Court of an award on a submission in the same manner as a judgment to the same effect, gives no power to turn the award into a judgment. Bankruptcy Notice, In re (No. 1), 76 L. J. K.B. 171; [1907] 1 K.B. 478; 96 L. T. 131; 14 Manson, 1; 23 T. L. R. 214—C.A.

An application for a bankruptcy notice is not a method of enforcing the award within section 12—per FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J. Ib.

Joinder of Several Judgment Debts—Amount Recovered on Claim and Counterclaim—Additional Parties to Counterclaim.—An action was brought by A and B against C to recover 100l. for money lent. The statement of defence alleged that the loan was not a personal one, but the money was provided for the purpose of a building scheme, and C counterclaimed against A, B, D, and E for damages for fraudulent conspiracy. The action was settled on the terms of C consenting to judgment being entered for A and B for the 100l. and costs, and for A, B, D, and E for the costs of the counterclaim. A bankruptcy notice was afterwards served on C requiring him to pay A and B a certain sum, and to D and E a further sum, being the amounts claimed by them respectively as due on the judgment:—Held, that the bankruptcy notice was bad, as it included two judgment debts due to different persons. Low, In re (60 L. J. Q.B. 265; [1891] 1 Q.B. 147), followed. Bankruptcy Notice, In re (No. 2), 96 L. T. 133; 14 Manson, 133; 23 T. L. R. 169—C.A.

Judgment in Detinue—Non-compliance with Notice—Act of Bankruptcy—Petition—Return of Detained Chattel—Election to Abandon Property in the Chattel.—A plaintiff who has obtained a judgment in detinue is deemed to have abandoned his property in the detained chattel if he issues a bankruptcy notice on his judgment and founds a bankruptcy petition on the non-compliance therewith. The return of the chattel after the completion of the act of bankruptcy does not deprive him of his right to a receiving order. Debtor, In re; Creditor, ex parte, 97 L. Scotch Judgment Registered in England.—A creditor who has obtained a judgment in Scotland is not entitled to issue a bankruptcy notice to the debtor under section 4, sub-section

1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, in England, although the Scotch judgment has been registered in England under section 3 of the Judgments Extension Act, 1868. Watson, In re; Johnston, ex parte (62 L. Notice Requiring Payment of Judgment Debt not “in accordance with the terms of the judgment”—Notice Requiring Payment of Part only of Debt.—A bankruptcy notice under sub-section 1 (g) of section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, is bad if it requires payment of part only of the judgment debt, and does not make it clear that no more is claimed as due on the judgment, but leaves any balance that may be due to be subsequently ascertained and claimed. H. B., In re, 73 L. J. K.B. 1; [1904] 1 K.B. 94; 89 L. T. 592; 52 W. R. 178; 10 Manson, 361; 20 T. L. R. 32—C.A.

An agreement was entered into between the creditor and the debtor for the stay of certain litigation between them on the terms (inter alia) that the debtor should pay to the creditor 2,700l. by five instalments, and should consent to judgment being signed against him for that sum. Judgment was signed against the debtor for 2,700l. There was no provision in the agreement that the whole debt should become payable on default in payment of any of the instalments, and there was no provision for successive executions on the judgment. Default was made in payment of three instalments, and the creditor issued a bankruptcy notice claiming payment of the amount due in respect of the three overdue instalments, after giving credit for an amount attached under a garnishee order nisi, proceedings under which were still pending, the amount so arrived at being described as the debt due under the judgment:—Held, that the bankruptcy notice did not require payment in accordance with the terms of the judgment, but in accordance with the terms of the judgment as modified by a collateral agreement, and it did not comply with the provisions of sub-section 1 (g) of section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and was consequently bad. Feast, In re; Feast, ex parte (4 Morrell, 87), distinguished. Ib.

Notice Requiring Payment of Judgment Debt without Costs.—“In accordance with terms of the judgment.”—Where a creditor has obtained final judgment for a certain sum and costs to be taxed, a bankruptcy notice served on the debtor is not invalid because it is issued in respect of the sum for which judgment was obtained without mentioning the costs, inasmuch as a separate writ of execution can, under Order XLII. rule 18, be issued for the recovery of the sum apart from the costs. The bankruptcy notice is therefore “in accordance with the terms of the judgment” as required by section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. H. B., In re (73 L. J. K.B. 1; [1904] 1 K.B. 94), distinguished. G. J., In re, 74 L. J. K.B. 932; [1905] 2 K.B. 678; 93 L. T. 193; 12 Manson, 354; 21 T. L. R. 698—C.A.

Insertion of more than one Judgment Debt in Same Notice—Amendment of Notice.]—A bankruptcy notice was defective by reason of its being based upon two judgment debts:—Held, that the Court ought not to allow the notice to be amended. Decision of CAVE, J., in Collier, In re; Dan Rylands, ex parte (8 Morrell, 80, 83), followed and applied. O. C. S., In re, 73 L. J. K.B. 585; [1904] 2 K.B. 161; 91 L. T. 224; 52 W. Partnership—Writ against Firm after Dissolution—Bankruptcy Petition against late Partner.]—Judgment in default of appearance was recovered in an action against a firm commenced after dissolution of the firm in respect of a cause of action which accrued before the dissolution, the writ being served on the late partners individually. A bankruptcy notice, following the judgment, was issued against the firm, and served on each partner personally. The notice not being complied with, bankruptcy petitions were presented against the late partners individually:—Held, that under Order XLVIIIa, rule 1, the action was properly constituted against the firm, though dissolved; that under rule 8 (c) execution on the judgment might have issued, without leave, against the late partners individually; and that if the bankruptcy notice, by reason of its being addressed to the firm, was not good against the late partners individually, the irregularity was one which could be remedied under section 143 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, so that a receiving order could be made against a late partner founded on the notice. Wenham, In re; Battams, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 803; [1900] 2 Q.B. 698; 83 L. T. 94; 48 W. R. 627; 7 Manson, 309—C.A.

Held, by LORD ALVERSTONE, M.R., and RIGBY, L.J. (dubitante COLLINS, L.J.), that there was no irregularity in the proceedings. Ib.

Per LORD ALVERSTONE, M.R. — “Persons being partners” in section 115 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, means persons who have carried on business in partnership for the purpose of the liability sought to be enforced, and there is nothing in rule 262 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, 1890, which cuts down that meaning. Consequently, persons who were partners at the time of a partnership debt being incurred can be proceeded against under the Act as partners after the dissolution of the partnership. Ib.

Per RIGBY, L.J.—Order XLVIIIa only recognised the principle of law that partners cannot by a dissolution alter their relations in substance to their creditors, and, though not applicable qua rule in bankruptcy proceedings, the principle which underlay it could be applied, and there was no reason why the bankruptcy notice founded on the judgment which operated to charge the late partners separately should be invalid as regards them individually. Ib.

Per COLLINS, L.J.—The machinery provided by section 115 and rule 262 for proceedings in bankruptcy against partners appears to contemplate proceedings only against persons who are partners at the time of the proceedings. Ib.

Company in Liquidation—Set-off—Want of Mutuality.]—Where a company in liquidation has obtained a judgment for unpaid calls against a shareholder who has a claim against the company for a sum exceeding the judgment debt, which was not available as a set-off against the company's claim on account of want of mutuality according to the rule expressed in Sankey Brook Coal Co. v. Marsh (40 L. J. Ex. 125; L. R. 6 Ex. 185), and the company has issued a bankruptcy notice against the debtor in respect of the judgment debt under section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the debtor is not entitled to have the bankruptcy notice set aside, notwithstanding that after adjudication he would be able under section 38 of the Act to set off his claim upon the company against their judgment debt, so as to satisfy it. G. E. B., In re, 72 L. J. K.B. 712; [1903] 2 K.B. 340; 89 L. T. 245; 51 W. R. 675; 10 Manson, 243—C.A.

Writ of Fi. fa.—Sheriff Withdrawing without Return—No Stay of Execution.]—Where the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa. seizes only the goods of a stranger and then by the instructions of the judgment creditor withdraws from possession without making any return, this does not amount to a stay of execution so as to prevent the judgment creditor from serving a bankruptcy notice under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (g). Debtor, In re; Judgment Creditor, ex parte, 71 L. Security to Satisfaction of Creditor—Agreement that Judgment is to Remain in Full Force—Continuance of Security—Fresh Bankruptcy Notice.]—Where a bankruptcy notice has been complied with by the debtor giving security for the judgment debt to the satisfaction of the creditor, which security by its terms is not to be realised till a future day, the creditor cannot issue a fresh bankruptcy notice in respect of the same judgment debt during the pendency of the security, notwithstanding a term providing that the judgment is still to be in full force. Smith, In re; Durban, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 30; [1903] 1 K.B. 33; 87 L. T. 586; 51 W. R. 118; 9 Manson, 341—C.A.

Adjournment of Hearing—In what Cases Allowed.]—The hearing of a bankruptcy notice ought not to be adjourned unless the circumstances are such as would justify the Court in setting aside the notice on some one of the grounds mentioned in section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and rules 138 (2) and 139, and Form 8 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 and 1890. Cole, In re; Attenborough, ex parte, 67 L. Application to Set Aside Bankruptcy Notice—Petition in Bankruptcy—Costs—Set-off.]—It is not the practice in bankruptcy to set off costs which form part of the petitioning creditor's debt against a debt due from the petitioning creditor to the debtor, even though the latter happen to be in the nature of costs. S., In re; Peak Hill Goldfield, Lim., ex parte, 76 L. (d) NOTICE OF SUSPENSION.

Notice of Suspension of Payment.—A statement by a debtor at a meeting of his principal creditors that he could not meet his engagements, held (Lord MACNAGHTEN dissenting) not to be a notice, within the meaning of section 4, sub-section 1 (h) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, that the debtor had suspended or was about to suspend payment of his debts. Clough v. Samuel, 74 L. J. K.B. 918; [1905] A.C. 442; 93 L. T. 491; 54 W. R. 114; 21 T. L. R. 702; 12 Manson, 347—H.L. (E.). Affirming, 11 Manson, 229—C.A. See infra.

—The debtor, an outside broker, informed each of his Stock Exchange creditors that he would have difficulty in meeting his payments on pay day, and gave each of them permission to close his account earlier than he could otherwise have done. The debtor had other creditors, to whom no reference was made:—Held, that the debtor had not given notice of suspension amounting to an act of bankruptcy within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (h). The rule laid down in Crook v. Morley (61 L. J. Q.B. 97; [1891] A.C. 316) applied; and Scott, In re; Scott, ex parte (65 L. J. Q.B. 465; [1896] 1 Q.B. 619), and Hill's Trustee v. Rowlands (65 L. J. Q.B. 542; [1896] 2 Q.B. 124) approved. Reis, In re; Clough, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 929; [1904] 2 K.B. 769; 91 L. T. 592; 53 W. R. 122; 11 Manson, 229; 20 T. L. R. 547—C.A.

—Verbal Notice.—A verbal statement by a debtor to a creditor that the debtor could not pay anything, and that he has lost everything, is a good notice of suspension of payment of his debts by the debtor so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy within sub-section 1 (h) of section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883—per LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J. Miller, In re, 70 L. J. K.B. 1; [1901] 1 K.B. 51; 83 L. T. 545; 49 W. R. 65; 8 Manson, 1—C.A.

Advance to Debtor in View of Future Partnership—Agreement to Repay in Future Event.

—The petitioner advanced to the debtor a sum of 2,000*l.* with a view to entering into partnership with the debtor at or before a certain date, the money to be used as part of the capital of the debtor's business in the meantime, and to bear interest. It was agreed that if the debtor should use the money provided by him for the business otherwise than as working capital for his business, the petitioner should have the option of cancelling the agreement and drawing out the 2,000*l.*; and a similar provision was made for the event of the petitioner not entering into partnership with the debtor within the time fixed. Before that time had expired the debtor failed in his business. He informed the petitioner verbally that he could not pay anybody and had lost everything:—Held, that at that time the petitioner's remedy was in damages, and there was not any liquidated sum payable to him either immediately or at any certain future time; consequently there was no debt due to him on which to found a petition, and the statement made by the debtor was not an act of bankruptcy. Id.

(e) PROOF OF.

Evidence of Debtor—Books of Debtor.—Upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition the books of a debtor are admissible to prove the act of bankruptcy, and the debtor may himself be called for the same purpose. X. Y., In re; Haes, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 102; [1902] 1 K.B. 98; 85 L. T. 564; 50 W. R. 182; 9 Manson, 5—C.A.

3. THE PETITION.

(a) CREDITOR'S PETITION.

Attestation—Amendment.—A bankruptcy petition not properly attested under Bankruptcy Rule 146 ought, if possible, to be amended at the hearing. Debtor, In re; Creditor, ex parte, 86 L. T. 688—D.

Petitioning Debt—Stock Exchange—"Cessio bonorum"—Judgment Recovered by Stock Exchange Creditor—Right to take Proceedings in Bankruptcy.—The cessio bonorum constituted by the rules of the Stock Exchange does not prevent a Stock Exchange creditor, who has come in and received a dividend on his debt in the Stock Exchange liquidation, from serving a bankruptcy notice and making the debtor a bankrupt on a judgment recovered for the balance of the same debt. Ward, In re (51 L. J. Ch. 752; 20 Ch. D. 356), and Ward, In re (52 L. J. Ch. 78; 22 Ch. D. 132), followed. Whitmore v. Turquand (80 L. J. Ch. 345; 3 De G. F. & J. 107) distinguished. Tynte, In re (15 Ch. Judgment—Power of Court to go Behind.—The power of the Court in bankruptcy to go behind a judgment is a power to enquire into the consideration and not into the form of the judgment, and the judgment is conclusive unless the consideration can be questioned. Beauchamp, In re; Beauchamp, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 311; [1904] 1 K.B. 572; 90 L. T. 594; 52 W. R. 545; 11 Manson, 5; 20 T. L. R. 269—C.A.

—Receiver in Action in Chancery Division—Independent Cause of Action—Judgment Debt Assigned to Receiver.

—A receiver in an action in the Chancery Division is entitled to present a bankruptcy petition against a debtor to his estate, if the state of things is such that he has an independent cause of action against the debtor. Consequently, a receiver in a partnership action to whom a judgment debt due to the partnership has been assigned is a good petitioning creditor against the judgment debtor, although the money when recovered is recovered for the purpose of being dealt with in the action. Sacker, In re (58 L. J. Q.B. 4; 22 Q.B. D. 179), explained and distinguished. Macoun, In re, 73 L. J. K.B. 892; [1904] 2 K.B. 700; 91 L. T. 276; 53 W. R. 197; 11 Manson, 264—C.A.

Acceptance by Judgment Creditor of Bill.—See Debtor, In re; Debtor, ex parte, 77 L. J. K.B. 409; [1908] 1 K.B. 344—C.A.

Petition by Limited Company—Officer—Clerk Authorised under Seal to Take Proceedings in Bankruptcy.—Any person in the employment of a company incorporated under the Companies Acts, bona fide chosen by the company, and duly appointed under seal to take proceedings in bankruptcy on behalf of the company, becomes thereby sufficiently an officer of the company within section 148 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to take such proceedings, although he was not before his appointment in any ordinary sense an officer of the company. Consequently a petition in bankruptcy presented by a limited company and signed for the company by a clerk of the company duly authorised under the seal of the company, is a good petition. Tomkins (J. G.) & Co., In re, 70 L. J. K.B. 223; [1901] 1 K.B. 476; 84 L. T. 341; 49 W. R. 294; 8 Manson, 132—C.A.

Secured Creditor—Estimate of Security in Petition—How Far Creditor Bound by Estimate—Duty of Court as to Enquiring into Correctness of Estimate.]—Under sub-section 2 of section 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, where a petitioning creditor is a secured creditor, and he does not give up his security for the benefit of the creditors, it is his duty to give an estimate of the value of his security. He makes the estimate at his own risk, and if it is a real estimate and not a mere sham the Court is under no obligation to go into the question of the real value of his security. Button, In re; Voss, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 403; [1905] 1 K.B. 602; 92 L. T. 250; 53 W. R. 437; 12 Manson, 111—C.A.

The petitioning creditor is bound by the estimate which he gives of his security in his petition in the sense that, if he comes in to prove, he cannot take any benefit in the administration in bankruptcy except on the basis of the estimate which he has made, although he may not be bound in the sense that the trustee is entitled to redeem the security at that value in the event of the creditor, after obtaining an adjudication, taking no further step in the bankruptcy and holding his security. Taylor, Ex parte; Lacey, in re (13 Q.B. D. 128), and Vauntin, In re; Saffery, ex parte (68 L. J. Q.B. 971; [1899] 2 Q.B. 549), discussed. Id.

Stock Exchange—Default of Broker—Liquidation by Official Assignee of Stock Exchange—Receipt of Dividend by Creditor—Right of Creditor to Present Petition for Balance of Debt.]—Where the assets of a defaulting member of the Stock Exchange are distributed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, a member being a creditor who has received a dividend in such distribution is not thereby precluded from suing the defaulter for the balance of his debt or from presenting a petition in bankruptcy against him in respect of such balance. Mendelssohn v. Ratcliff, 73 L. J. K.B. 1027; [1904] A.C. 456; 91 L. T. 204; 53 W. R. 240; 10 Com. Cas. 14; 20 T. L. R. 670—H.L. (E.)

Petition to Avoid Judgment Summons—Abuse of Process.]—Judgment having been obtained against the debtor for 100l. damages for breach of promise of marriage with costs, a judgment summons was taken out against him under the Debtors Act, 1869. Before the hearing of the summons the debtor filed his own petition in bankruptcy and was adjudicated bankrupt. The judgment creditor was the sole creditor, and there were some assets. The creditor applied to set aside the adjudication as an abuse of the process of the Court:—Held, that the petition was not an abuse of the process of the Court, and the adjudication would not be set aside. Painter, ex parte (64 L. J. Q.B. 22; [1895] 1 Q.B. 85), followed. Archer, In re; Archer, ex parte, 20 T. L. R. 390—D.

Dismissal of Petition by Consent—Bill for Increased Amount to Petitioning Creditor—Fresh Petition Founded on New Debt—Extortion—Abuse of Process of Court.]—An arrangement between a petitioning creditor and the debtor, under which the creditor receives a bill for a larger amount than he could have recovered in the bankruptcy, and thereupon consents to the dismissal of the petition, is not invalid in the absence of actual extortion or undue pressure by the creditor; and the debt arising under such an arrangement would be a good debt to support a fresh petition in bankruptcy. Bebro, In re; Bebro, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 618; [1900] 2 Q.B. 316; 82 L. T. 773; 48 W. R. 561; 7 Manson, 234—C.A.

Per WEBSTER, M.R.—The better practice would be that the Court should not give leave for the withdrawal of a petition under sub-section 7 of section 7 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, without exercising its judgment as to whether the case is a proper one in which to allow withdrawal. Id.

Registrar's Judgment.]—The Registrar has no jurisdiction except to grant or to dismiss a creditor's petition for sequestration, and his decision does not constitute res judicata. Consequently, the reasons by which he was influenced are immaterial and inadmissible as evidence. Vitoria, Ex parte (63 L. J. Q.B. 161; [1894] 2 Q.B. 387), approved. King v. Henderson, 67 L. J. P.C. 134; [1898] A.C. 720; 79 L. T. 37; 47 W. R. 157; 5 Manson, 308—P.C.

Indirect Motive of Petitioning Creditor.]—Mere motive on the part of a petitioning creditor, however reprehensible, does not affect the validity of the proceedings or make them an abuse of the powers of the Court, unless it is shown that the remedy would be unsuitable, and would enable the person obtaining it fraudulently to defeat the rights of others. Wilbran, Ex parte (5 Madd. 1), approved. Lister v. Perryman (39 L. J. Ex. 177; 11 R. 4 H.L. 521) distinguished. Id.

(b) DEBTOR'S PETITION.

Contract for Sewage Works—Payment upon Certificate of Engineer—Power to Engineer to Direct Payment to Firms Supplying Machinery upon Contractors "unduly delaying payment" for the same.]—Under a contract for sewage works made by a contractor with an urban district council it was provided that the requisite machinery was to be supplied to the contractor by certain named firms, and also (by clause 54) that if the engineer should have "reasonable cause to believe that the contractor is unduly delaying proper payment" to the firms supplying the machinery he should have power, if he thought fit, to direct payment to them, and deduct it from the next certificate. The contractor was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt upon his own petition, and at the date of his bankruptcy a sum of 836l. 8s. 9d. was due to the various machinery firms. The engineer having made orders directing payment of this sum direct to these firms pursuant to clause 54,—Held, that the power given by the clause in question to the engineer was not annulled by the bankruptcy of the contractor, and was properly exercised, as the contractor, by presenting his own petition, was “unduly delaying proper payment” to the firms supplying the machinery, within the meaning of the clause. Wilkinson, In re; Fowler, ex parte, 74 L. 4. INTERIM RECEIVER.

Special Manager—Dismissal of Petition—Disbursements of Special Manager—Jurisdiction.—Where a Court has jurisdiction over the subject-matter in respect to which it makes an order, but has not, as is ultimately shewn, jurisdiction in the particular case owing to the position of the person concerned, the order, though erroneous, is not without jurisdiction altogether, and anything done under it before it is set aside is valid. A. B. & Co., In re (No. 2), 69 L. J. Q.B. 568; [1900] 2 Q.B. 429; 82 L. T. 544; 48 W. R. 485; 7 Manson, 268—C.A.

Where the Bankruptcy Court on the presentation of a petition against an alleged debtor appoints an interim receiver of his business, and the petition is afterwards dismissed on the ground that the alleged debtor is not a debtor within the meaning of section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the interim receiver is not a trespasser or wrongdoer; and he, and the special manager, if he appoints one, are entitled, in passing their accounts, to all just allowances for disbursements made and liabilities incurred while carrying on the business. Ib.

Per LINDLEY, M.R., and RIGBY, L.J.—Rules 172 and 173 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 to 1890, do not apply to special managers. They apply to interim receivers, but the Court would not disallow, in the accounts of an interim receiver, expenses properly incurred by him over and above the amount deposited for his expenses under those rules, and leave him to recover the excess from the persons at whose instance he was appointed. Ib.

Official Receiver as—Power to Appoint Special Manager of Business.—The power to appoint a special manager of the business of a debtor conferred on the official receiver by sub-section 1 of section 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, can be exercised by him while acting as interim receiver under sub-section 1 of section 10 of the Act. Bankruptcy Petition, In re, 69 L. J. Q.B. 222; 81 L. T. 798; 7 Manson, 132—C.A.

5. RECEIVING ORDER.

“Sufficient cause” for Declining to Make—Antecedent Proposed Fraud by Petitioning Creditor—Motive of Spite.—On July 23, 1900, S., being in difficulties, called a meeting of his creditors, at which it was resolved by them to accept a composition of 10s. in the pound. A few days subsequently G., a creditor who had not been present, called on S. and said that he would not assent to the composition unless S. gave him a promissory note for the balance of the debt due to him, and on August 1 he sent to S. a promissory note for half the amount of the debt, requesting S. to accept it. S. declined to accede to this suggestion. The proposed composition having fallen through, S., on August 4, executed a deed of assignment of all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors generally. On August 28 G. and another creditor, who was in no way connected with the proposed secret arrangement, presented a petition in bankruptcy against S., the debt of neither of them alone being 50*l.*:—Held, that there was “sufficient cause” for declining to make a receiving order within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 7, sub-s. (3). Shaw, In re; Gill, ex parte, 83 L. T. 754; 49 W. R. 264—C.A.

—On April 19, 1904, the debtor committed an act of bankruptcy by the execution of a deed of assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors. The petitioning creditors refused to assent to the deed, and threatened to present a bankruptcy petition unless they either recovered 60*l.* or bills for the difference between the amount to be paid under the deed and the amount of his debt. These bills they required to be indorsed by the debtor's father-in-law. As neither of the proposals were accepted, they presented a petition on which a receiving order was made:—Held, that there was “sufficient cause” for declining to make a receiving order within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 7, sub-s. 3. Debtor, In re; Debtor, ex parte (No. 2), 91 L. T. 664; 53 W. R. 223—D.

Antecedent Threat.—A debtor who had assigned the whole of his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, called a meeting of his creditors, who agreed to accept an offer by the debtor and his relatives to pay 10s. in the pound. Subsequently the debtor informed them that he could not arrange to carry out the composition of 10s., but that his relatives offered to purchase his estate for a sum sufficient to pay 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound. The majority of the creditors accepted this, but one creditor wrote demanding an immediate cash payment of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound and bills for 2*s.* 6*d.* indorsed by a relative of the debtor, and said that if this were not done he would present a bankruptcy petition. These terms were declined, and a bankruptcy petition was presented:—Held, upon the authority of Shaw, In re (83 L. T. 754), that, as the petitioning creditor had endeavoured to obtain a secret advantage over the other creditors, with a threat, if the debtor did not concede it, to present a bankruptcy petition, there was “sufficient cause” for declining to make a receiving order within section 7, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Goldberg, In re, 21 T. L. R. 139—C.A.

Adjournment—Discretion.—Upon the day appointed for the hearing of a bankruptcy petition the debtor made an offer to settle the debts and costs. The local solicitor, who appeared for the petitioning creditor, said that the offer was a reasonable one, but he would not accept it without communicating with his principals. Both sides asked for an adjournment to enable the solicitor to get instructions. The Registrar refused, and made a receiving order:—Held, that the Registrar had exercised his discretion wrongly in refusing to allow an adjournment, and that the receiving order must be rescinded. Farleigh, In re, 21 T. L. R. 198—D.

Power to make Receiving Order in Lieu of Committal Order—Judgment Summons—No Evidence of Means.—A Judge upon the hearing of a judgment summons has no jurisdiction, in the absence of evidence as to the debtor's means to pay the debt, to make a receiving order in lieu of a committal order. Reg. v. Sussex County Court Judge (59 L. T. 32) distinguished. Debtor, In re; Baker, ex parte, 91 L. T. 321; 53 W. R. 29—D.

—The Court has no jurisdiction to make a receiving order in bankruptcy under section 103, sub-section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, unless it has before it evidence as to means on which it might exercise its jurisdiction under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Reg. v. Sussex County Court Judge (59 L. T. 32) distinguished. Debtor, In re; Debtor, ex parte (No. 1), 74 L. J. K.B. 362; [1905] 1 K.B. 374; 91 L. T. 321; 53 W. R. 29; 12 Manson, 17—D.

Application for Committal—Debtor having Foreign Domicil—Non-residence in England.—Where, under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, application is made by a judgment creditor to a Court having bankruptcy jurisdiction for the committal of a judgment debtor, and the judgment debtor is present before the Court, the Court may, under section 103, sub-section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, make a receiving order against the debtor, although he is not domiciled in England, and has not within a year before the date of the application ordinarily resided or had a dwelling-house or place of business in England. Clark, In re; Clark, ex parte, 66 L. J. Q.B. 875; [1898] 1 Q. B. 20; 77 L. T. 417; 46 W. R. 103; 4 Manson, 231—C.A.

Stay of Advertisement—Assent of Creditors.—Where a receiving order has been made against a debtor, and he subsequently applies, under section 109 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for an order staying advertisements and all proceedings under the receiving order, the Court ought not, in the exercise of its discretion, to accede to the application simply because the petitioning creditor and the other creditors assent thereto, but, taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, must have regard to the larger and higher view to be taken of the matter—namely, the interests of the public of which the Board of Trade is the guardian. Debtor, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 84 L. T. 666—C.A.

Receiving Order Made on Judgment Summons—No Formal Order Drawn up—Staying Subsequent Action against Debtor.—Upon the hearing of a judgment summons under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, Cave, J., in lieu of an order of committal, made a receiving order against the debtor under section 103 (5) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. The Judge wrote upon the summons "Receiving Order," and signed this with his initials, but no formal order was ever drawn up and nothing further was done:—Held, that a receiving order had been made, within the meaning of section 9 (1) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, when the order was made by the Judge, and that thereafter a creditor could not bring an action against the debtor in respect of a debt provable in bankruptcy. Blount v. Whitely, 79 L. T. 635; 6 Manson, 48—C.A.

Rescission of Order—Undischarged Bankrupt—Repeated Bankruptcies—Committal Orders—Filing Own Petition—Abuse of Process of Court.—The Court will rescind a receiving order made against an undischarged bankrupt on his own petition, where it appears that he is in the habit of getting credit and then of systematically abusing the process of the Court by filing his own petition in order to avoid imprisonment under committal orders obtained against him by his creditors. Betts, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 511; [1901] 2 K.B. 39; 84 L. T. 427; 49 W. R. 447; 8 Manson, 227—D.

Rescission before Public Examination—Jurisdiction—Payment of Composition—Release of Debts.—Although by section 35 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, an adjudication of bankruptcy can only be annulled where a debtor ought not to have been adjudged bankrupt or where the debts of the bankrupt are paid in full, the Court has jurisdiction under section 104 to rescind a receiving order upon other grounds, even before the public examination of the debtor, and consequently without any scheme of arrangement under section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, but the jurisdiction will only be exercised in exceptional circumstances. Isod, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 111; [1898] 1 Q.B. 241; 77 L. T. 640; 46 W. R. 304; 4 Manson, 343—C.A.

A receiving order having been made against a retail trader on his own petition, his father paid the creditors a composition of 10s. in the pound, which was more than could have been realized in the bankruptcy, in consideration of which the creditors released their debts and withdrew their proofs. The debtor then applied for a rescission of the receiving order with the consent of the official receiver, who, after holding a preliminary investigation, came to the conclusion that there had been no delinquency on the part of the debtor, and did not desire a public examination. The Registrar rescinded the receiving order on the ground that the circumstances were exceptional:—Held (RIGBY, L.J., dissentiente), that the Registrar had jurisdiction to rescind the receiving order, and that in the circumstances his discretion had been rightly exercised. Ib.

Receiving Order against Trustee—Effect of Rescission.—Where a receiving order is made against a trustee in bankruptcy, in consequence of which he vacates his office of trustee under section 85 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, but the order is subsequently rescinded by the Court on the ground that it ought never to have been made, the trustee is thereupon restored to his original office subject to any new rights which may have arisen in the interval. Newman, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 961; [1899] 2 Q.B. 587; 81 L. T. 527; 48 W. R. 94; 6 Manson, 381—Wright, J.

Attachment for Non-payment of Rates—Punitive Order—Power to Release Debtor from Prison.]

—An order made by a magistrate under section 2 of the Distress for Rates Act, 1849, committing a person to prison for non-payment of rates, is a punitive order, and the Court in bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to give relief against it under sub-section 2 of section 10 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Middleton v. Chichester (40 L. J. Ch. 237, 239; L. R. 6 Ch. 152, 157) and Smith, In re; Hands v. Andrews (62 L. J. Ch. 386, 340; [1893] 2 Ch. 1, 17), followed. The observations of MELLISH, L.J., in Cobham v. Dalton (44 L. J. Ch. 702, 704; L. R. 10 Ch. 655, 657) are not to be regarded as good law. Edgcome, In re, 71 L. J. K.B. 722; [1902] 2 K.B. 403; 87 L. T. 108; 50 W. R. 678; 9 Manson, 227—C.A.

6. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

Power of County Court to stay Proceedings in High Court.]—The power given to the Bankruptcy Court under section 10, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to stay proceedings against a debtor, ought not to be exercised by the County Court where the High Court has with knowledge of bankruptcy proceedings allowed the matter to proceed. Quære, whether the power of the County Court under sub-section 2 is not limited to proceedings pending in it. Richardson, In re; Grime, ex parte, 86 L. T. 690—D.

7. SCHEME OF ARRANGEMENT.

Sanction of Court—Corrupt Bargain—Release of Debts.]—A number of unsecured creditors released their claims against the debtor's estate in order to enable 7s. 6d. in the pound to be paid under a scheme of arrangement on the rest of the unsecured debts. The debtor's brother, without the knowledge or sanction of the debtor, made a declaration of trust conferring a possible pecuniary benefit upon two of the creditors so releasing their claims; but on exception being taken to the scheme of arrangement on this ground, these two creditors gave up this benefit:—Held, that the declaration of trust so made was, under the circumstances, no reason for the Court refusing to sanction the scheme of arrangement. E. A. B., In re, 71 L. J. K.B. 356; [1902] 1 K.B. 457; 85 L. T. 773; 50 W. R. 229; 9 Manson, 105—C.A.

Debts Provable.]—The words "debts provable" in the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 3, sub-s. 9, mean debts provable at the time when the scheme of arrangement comes on for approval, and not debts provable at the date of the receiving order which have been since withdrawn. Ib.

Conduct of Debtor—Rash and Hazardous Speculations.]—The Court will not refuse to approve a scheme of arrangement on the ground of a debtor's misconduct, except in cases of a gross character. The mere fact that a debtor has contributed to his bankruptcy by rash and hazardous speculations within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 8, sub-s. 3 (f), is not sufficient reason for refusing to approve a scheme which complies with the conditions of section 3, sub-section 9. Ib.

Reasonably Security for Payment of not Less than 7s. 6d. in the Pound—Approval by Court—Building Speculation.]—The Court is bound to refuse its sanction to a scheme of arrangement in a case within section 3, sub-section 9 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, unless the scheme provides reasonable security for payment of not less than 7s. 6d. in the pound on all the unsecured debts provable against the debtor's estate, and will not consider a scheme under which the debtors, through their trustee, propose to carry on building speculations similar to those which led to their bankruptcy as providing such security, even though all the unsecured creditors are in favour of the scheme. Flew, In re; Flew, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 280; [1905] 1 K.B. 278; 92 L. T. 333; 53 W. R. 438; 12 Manson, 1; 21 T. L. R. 150—C.A.

Debts Released by Deeds delivered as Escrows pending Approval of Scheme by Court—Debts Provable—Voting.]—In the absence of fraud the security required by the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 3, sub-s. 9, need not extend to debts, releases for which have been executed and delivered as escrows, to take effect on the approval of the scheme by the Court; but the creditors who have executed such releases have no interest entitling them to vote upon the scheme. Baines, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 86 L. T. 691—D.

Annulment of Adjudication—Discretion of Court.]—The Court, upon approving a composition or scheme under section 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, after the debtor had been adjudged bankrupt, will not as a matter of course annul the bankruptcy. The Court has a discretion in such a case. Sullivan and Hughes, In re, 20 T. L. R. 393—D.

8. ADJUDICATION.

Rejection of Scheme by Creditors—Notice to Debtor.]—Though the Court has jurisdiction to adjudicate a debtor bankrupt after a resolution of the creditors to that effect under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 20, sub-s. 1, without any notice being given to the debtor, the proper practice, as well in the County Court as in the High Court, is that notice should be given to the debtor unless there is some special reason to the contrary. Ponsford, In re; Ponsford, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 913; [1904] 2 K.B. 704; 91 L. T. 510; 53 W. R. 120; 11 Manson, 342—C.A.

Immediate Adjudication.]—Where the Court refuses to approve a scheme an immediate adjudication of bankruptcy will only be made against the debtor under very exceptional circumstances. Flew, In re; Flew, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 280; [1905] 1 K.B. 278; 92 L. T. 333; 53 W. R. 438; 12 Manson, 1; 21 T. L. R. 150—C.A.

Foreigner Resident out of Jurisdiction of the Court—Conveyance of Property in England.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to make an adjudication in bankruptcy against a foreigner domiciled and resident abroad, though the petitioning creditor's debt was incurred by the foreigner in carrying on business through a manager in England, and though the alleged act of bankruptcy is one of the class of voluntary acts such as an assignment of property in trust for creditors. Pearson, In re; Pearson, ex parte (61 L. J. Q.B. 585; [1892] 2 Q.B. 263), followed. A. B. & Co., In re (No. 1), 69 L. J. Q.B. 375; [1900] 1 Q.B. 541; 82 L. T. 169; 48 W. R. 424; 7 Manson, 134—C.A.

9. ANNULMENT OF ADJUDICATION.

Debts Paid in Full—Releases by Creditors.]—Under sub-section 1 of section 35 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, one of the grounds on which an adjudication in bankruptcy may be annulled is where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the debts of the bankrupt are paid in full. This means that all the debts which have been rightly proved have been discharged by payment in full in money. Debts which have been merely released by the creditors voluntarily, or in consideration of a small money payment, are not paid in full within the meaning of the section. Keet, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 694; [1905] 2 K.B. 666; 93 L. T. 259; 54 W. R. 20; 12 Manson, 235; 21 T. L. R. 615—C.A.

Per STIRLING, L.J.—The discretionary power of the Court to make an order for annulment under section 35 ought not, in the absence of special circumstances, to be made in a case in which, if the bankrupt were applying for an order of discharge, the order would not be granted. Id.

Debtor's Petition—Committal Orders—Abuse of Process of Court—Annulment of Adjudication.]—Judgment creditors obtained an order against the debtor for payment of the judgment debt by monthly instalments of 4*l.*, in respect of which they also obtained committal orders. While the last committal order was in force the debtor was adjudicated bankrupt on his own petition. The debtor was personally earning about 300*l.* a year. There were no other creditors and no assets. On an application by the creditors to annul the adjudication, Held, that the adjudication was properly made, and could not be treated as an abuse of the process of the Court, since by reason of the adjudication the bankrupt's future earnings would under section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, be available for payment of the creditors' debt, except to the extent necessary for the support of the bankrupt and his family, according to the rule stated in Roberts, In re; Roberts, ex parte (69 L. J. Q.B. 19; [1900] 1 Q.B. 122). Hancock, In re; Hillearys, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 245; [1904] 1 K.B. 585; 90 L. T. 389; 52 W. R. 547; 11 Manson, 1—C.A.

Payment of Debts in Full—Discretionary Power—Debtor's Misconduct—Concealment of Assets—Postponement.]—The annulment of a debtor's adjudication under section 35 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, does not follow as a matter of course upon proof that all the debts have been paid in full. The power to annul adjudications given to the Court by that section is discretionary, and the Court will, by refusing, or at any rate postponing, the annulment, punish a debtor who has been guilty of grave offences against the law of bankruptcy. Taylor, In re;

Taylor, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 531; [1901] 1 K.B. 744; 84 L. T. 426; 49 W. R. 510; 8 Manson, 230—D.

Misconduct—Discharge—Scheme.]—On an application under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 23, by a bankrupt after his discharge for the approval of a composition providing for the payment of 10*s.* in the pound to the creditors, but conditional on the annulment of the bankruptcy, the Court will have regard to the interest of the public and commercial morality, and will refuse to approve the proposal if the bankrupt's conduct has been such that the bankruptcy ought not to be annulled. Beer, In re; Beer, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 366; [1903] 1 K.B. 628; 88 L. T. 334; 51 W. R. 422; 10 Manson, 136—C.A.

10. CONTRACT, EFFECT OF BANKRUPTCY ON.

Contract for Sewage Works—Payment upon Certificate of Engineer—Power to Engineer to Direct Payment to Firms Supplying Machinery upon Contractors "unduly delaying payment" for the same.]—Under a contract for sewage works made by a contractor with an urban district council it was provided that the requisite machinery was to be supplied to the contractor by certain named firms, and also (by clause 54) that if the engineer should have "reasonable cause to believe that the contractor is unduly delaying proper payment" to the firms supplying the machinery he should have power, if he thought fit, to direct payment to them, and deduct it from the next certificate. The contractor was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt upon his own petition, and at the date of his bankruptcy a sum of 836*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* was due to the various machinery firms. The engineer having made orders directing payment of this sum direct to these firms pursuant to clause 54, Held, that the power given by the clause in question to the engineer was not annulled by the bankruptcy of the contractor, and was properly exercised, as the contractor, by presenting his own petition, was "unduly delaying proper payment" to the firms supplying the machinery, within the meaning of the clause. Wilkinson, In re; Fowler, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 969; [1905] 2 K.B. 713; 54 W. R. 157.—Bigham, J.

Mortgage by Debtor—Act of Bankruptcy—Knowledge of Mortgagee—Redemption of Security—Relation Back of Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy—Liability of Mortgagee.]—A secured creditor who has notice of an act of bankruptcy by his debtor within three months is not entitled before the expiration of that period to receive payment of the debt from his debtor, and consequently the debtor cannot make a good tender to the creditor and Held, that he must give up his securities to the trustee for payment of the amount due. Lawrence, In re; Nichols, ex parte (71 L. J. K.B. 786; [1902] 2 K.B. 445), overruled in London & Co. v. Union on restg. [1906] Smiths Bank, 75 L. J. Ch. 71 new R. 812 (C.A. 444; 95 L. T. 333; 22 T. L. R. 117).

ex parte, April, 1906, du Stockbrokers were in; 81 L. T. Exchange, and an defaulters on the Stock Wright according to the r assignee was appointed. They had deposited the Stock Exchange for Non-pa the defendants certain securities to secure a loan. The official assignee tendered the amount due in respect of the loan and called on the defendants to hand over the securities. They refused on the ground that, having notice of an act of bankruptcy by the stockbrokers—namely, the assignment to the official assignee—within three months, they would not be safe in handing over the securities till the expiration of three months, for if bankruptcy proceedings were taken within that period the title of the trustee in bankruptcy would relate back. The stockbrokers and official assignee then sued for delivery up of the securities on payment of the amount due:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not require the defendants to give up the securities. Ib.

Per CURIAM.—If the official assignee were prepared to pay the money due on the securities and to undertake to hold them until bankruptcy proceedings were taken or the period of three months had expired, an order should be made empowering him so to do. If he were not, no immediate judgment should be given in the action, but it should be directed to stand over until it could be seen who was the person entitled to redeem. Ib.

11. THE TRUSTEE.

(a) POWERS AND DUTIES OF.

Application by Trustee for Directions—Compromise of Claims—Complicated Circumstances—Discretion of Court—Duty of Trustee to Determine Matter.—On an application to the Court by a trustee in bankruptcy, under subsection 3 of section 89 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for directions in relation to a particular matter arising under the bankruptcy, there is no obligation on the Court to give directions. Where the circumstances are complicated the trustee ought to deal with the matter himself, with the assistance of the committee of inspection, and ought not to apply to the Court to relieve him from the obligation of forming his own judgment in the matter placed upon him by the Bankruptcy Act. Pilling, In re; Salamman, ex parte, 75 L. J. K.B. 739; [1906] 2 K.B. 644; 95 L. T. 362; 13 Manson, 229—Bigham, J.

Permission to Trustee to Employ Solicitor.—Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 57, sub-s. 3, the permission of the committee of inspection for the employment of a solicitor by the trustee, to take proceedings or do business sanctioned by the committee, need not be in any particular form, but, although it may be so framed as to cover several proceedings or pieces of business, it must in some way or other specify them. Accordingly, a resolution of the committee that a solicitor be employed by the trustee "where necessary" is too vague to satisfy the section. Vavasour, In re, 69 L. J. Q.B. 685; [1900] 2 Q.B. 309; 82 L. T. 322; 48 W. R. 543; 7 Manson, 262—Wright, J.

Pledge of Share Certificates with Bankrupt—Disappearance of Pledgor—Power of Sale by Trustee in Bankruptcy—Directions as to Advertisement.—Where certain share certificates had been pledged with a firm which afterwards became bankrupt, and the pledgor had disappeared without repaying the loan, the trustee in bankruptcy was given permission to sell the shares after advertising for the pledgor as directed by the Court. Harrison, In re; Whinney, ex parte, 54 W. R. 203; 14 Manson, 132—Bigham, J.

Record Book kept by Trustee—Minutes of Meetings of Committee of Inspection—Right of Debtor to Inspect.—A debtor has no right to inspect the "record book" kept by the trustee in his bankruptcy in pursuance of section 80 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and rule 285 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, and the Court has no power to make any order giving him leave to do so. Solomons, In re; Solomons, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 1029; [1904] 2 K.B. 917; 91 L. T. 512; 53 W. R. 49; 11 Manson, 345; 21 T. L. R. 48—C.A.

Right to Books—Bankruptcy of Underwriter—Insurance—Underwriting—"Names."—Prior to his bankruptcy the debtor carried on business as an underwriter at Lloyd's on his own account and as agent for five other persons or "names." By agreement with each of the "names" it was provided that proper underwriting and account books should be provided and kept, and be always open to the inspection of the "name," and the "name" should pay to the debtor an annual sum as a remuneration for his services in conducting the business, for keeping and providing books and papers, and for providing an office and clerks, and other outgoings. The debtor kept ledgers in which was a separate column for the transactions done for each "name," and another for his own transactions in respect of the same matters. At the date of the bankruptcy the books were in the hands of a firm of accountants who, on instructions from the "names," declined to deliver them up to the trustee in the bankruptcy:—Held, that the inference from the agreements was that the debtor and the "names" were all interested in the books, and the debtor's agency having come to an end he had no greater right to the books than the "names," and his trustee had no right to the exclusive possession of them; but that the "names" must undertake to give the trustee such inspection of the books and facilities for making extracts from them as might be reasonably required. Burmand, In re; Wilson, ex parte, 73 L. Sequestration of Ecclesiastical Benefice—Offer of Sum for Withdrawal of Sequestration—Acceptance of Offer by Trustee.—A beneficed clergyman was adjudicated bankrupt, and a sequestrator of the profits of the benefice was appointed under section 52 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and the bishop of the diocese appointed a curate for the performance of the services of the church under the Sequestration Act, 1871, during the continuance of the sequestration. The stipend of the curate and a claim for dilapidations more than swallowed up the income from the benefice. An offer of 300*l.* was made to the official receiver on behalf of the debtor on condition that he would consent to the relaxation or withdrawal of the sequestration. This offer was supported by three creditors, but was opposed by the other creditor (there being only four creditors), whose proof largely exceeded the proofs of the other three. The Registrar authorised the official receiver to accept the offer:—Held, that the official receiver could agree to the relaxation or withdrawal of the sequestration in consideration of the payment of a sufficient sum, and that the Registrar had rightly exercised his discretion in authorising him to accept the offer. Barratt, In re, 22 T. L. R. 427—D.

Action against—Rescission of Contract to take Shares in Company—Bankrupt Director.]—A shareholder bringing an action for rescission of his contract to take shares against the company, cannot add as defendant to the action the trustee in bankruptcy of a director of the company against whom he claims damages for deceit under the Companies Act, 1867, s. 38, or under the Directors' Liability Act, 1890. Greenwood v. Humber & Co., 6 Manson, 42—Romer, J.

Proceedings against Trustee—Costs against Creditor—Right to Retain Sufficient out of the Dividend to Meet the Costs.]—Where the creditor of a bankrupt has costs given against him in proceedings brought by him against the trustee in bankruptcy, the trustee is entitled to retain sufficient out of the dividend due to the creditor on the amount he has proved for against the bankrupt's estate to meet those costs. Mayne, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 1086; [1907] 2 K.B. 899; 23 T. L. R. 758—Bigham, J.

Improper Retainer of Money by Trustee—Penal Interest—Estate or Treasury Entitled.]—The penal interest of 20L. per cent. imposed by section 74 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, on sums over 50L. retained by a trustee in bankruptcy in his hands for more than ten days, is in the nature of a debt due from the trustee to the bankrupt's estate, and should therefore be paid into the Bankruptcy Estates Account, and not to the Treasury. Accordingly a trustee is entitled to set off against such interest any sum which is due to him from the estate. Sims, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 849; [1907] 2 K.B. 36; 96 L. T. 713; 14 Manson, 169—Bigham, J.

Receiving Order against Trustee—Effect of Rescission.]—Where a receiving order is made against a trustee in bankruptcy, in consequence of which he vacates his office of trustee under section 85 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, but the order is subsequently rescinded by the Court on the ground that it ought never to have been made, the trustee is thereupon restored to his original office subject to any new rights which may have arisen in the interval. Newman, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 68 L. (b) REMUNERATION.

Remuneration of Trustee—Fund for Composition Provided by Father of Debtor.]—A trustee in bankruptcy is not entitled to the remuneration provided for by section 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, as amended by section 15 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, where the only assets are provided by a relative of the debtor to enable him to pay a composition to his creditors. Christie, In re; Christie, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 31; [1900] 1 Q.B. 5; 81 L. T. 528; 48 W. R. 94; 7 Manson, 1—Wright, J.

The words "the amount realised" in section 72 of the Act of 1883, apart from section 15 of the Act of 1890, mean "the amount realised by the trustee." Ib.

Semble, the words "distributed in dividend," in the same section, mean "distributed in dividend out of assets realised by the trustee." Ib.

Composition—Resolution of Creditors—Ultra Vires.]—A resolution passed by the creditors of a debtor that; the remuneration of the trustee of a composition scheme shall be a commission of "5 per cent. on all amounts brought to credit, and 5 per cent. on all amounts distributed," is not in accordance with the language of subsection 1 of section 72, and is therefore ultra vires. Ib.

(c) THE TRUSTEE'S SOLICITOR.

Lien for Costs—Recovery of Assets in Bankruptcy by.]—A solicitor to a trustee in bankruptcy has no lien for his costs upon property of the bankrupt recovered by him for the trustee as such solicitor. Wood, In re; Fanshawe, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 69; [1897] 1 Q.B. 314), considered. Humphreys, In re; Lloyd-George, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 412; [1898] 1 Q.B. 520; 78 L. T. 182; 46 W. R. 322; 5 Manson, 11—C.A.

Charging Order — Jurisdiction.]—Semble, where property is recovered or preserved in the course of proceedings in bankruptcy, the Judge in bankruptcy would have jurisdiction to make a charging order for costs. Opinion of VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J., to the contrary, in Wood, In re; Fanshawe, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 69; [1897] 1 Q.B. 314), doubted. Deakin, In re; Daniell, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 725; [1900] 2 Q.B. 489; 82 L. T. 776; 48 W. R. 678; 7 Manson, 302—C.A.

Property Recovered in Chancery Division—Absence of Client Creditor.]—A Court exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction has no power under section 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, to make a charging order on property recovered in a Chancery action because it is represented by a dividend in bankruptcy. Nor has the Court any power under section 102 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, in the absence of the creditor, to direct payment of the dividend to the creditor's solicitor on the ground that such dividend represents property recovered by him even on an indemnity. Cook, In re; Cripps, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 597; [1899] 1 Q.B. 863; 80 L. T. 495; 47 W. R. 524; 6 Manson, 185—D.

Costs—Sale by Trustee of Mortgaged Property—Proceeds of Sale—Duty of Taxing Officer.]—In a taxation of a solicitor's costs under rule 2 of the General Regulations in Part II. of the Appendix to the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, the Taxing Master in bankruptcy is not concerned to determine out of what fund the taxed costs are to be paid. His duty is to tax the bill in accordance with the General Order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and he should then direct by his allocatur that the amount of the bill as taxed is to be paid in accordance with the above-mentioned rule. It will be for the parties to determine out of what fund the costs are to be paid. Garner, In re; Pedley, ex parte, 75 L. J. K.B. 584; [1906] 2 K.B. 213; 95 L. T. 60; 54 W. R. 627; 13 Manson, 204; 22 T. L. R. 597—Bigham, J.

Semble.—Where mortgaged property is sold, the words "proceeds of sale" in the proviso of the above-mentioned rule means the net proceeds of sale after the charges on the property have been paid off. Ib.

— Taxation—Retainers to Counsel—Discretion of Master.—On the taxation in bankruptcy of the bill of costs of a solicitor to a trustee in bankruptcy, the Taxing Master has a discretion to allow retainers to counsel; but, as a general rule, such retainers will not be allowed. Nordmann, In re; Hasluck, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 996; 47 W. R. 151; 5 Manson, 327—Wright, J.

(d) RELEASE OF TRUSTEE.

Revocation of Order—"Suppression or concealment of material fact."—Section 82, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, enacts that an order of the Board of Trade releasing a trustee "shall discharge him from all liability in respect of any act done or default made by him in the administration of the affairs of the bankrupt, or otherwise in relation to his conduct as trustee, but any such order may be revoked on proof that it was obtained by fraud or by suppression or concealment of any material fact":—Held, that the words "by fraud or by suppression or concealment of any material fact" must be construed as meaning such suppression or concealment as has in it some element of fraud or wrongfulness. Harris, In re; Hasluck, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 769; [1899] 2 Q.B. 97; 80 L. T. 499; 47 W. R. 544; 6 Manson, 259—Wright, J.

12. PROPERTY.

(a) PROPERTY PASSING TO TRUSTEE.

Goods—Sale of—Completed Whole—Appropriation of Parts—Bankruptcy of Manufacturer—Rights of Trustee in Bankruptcy and of Purchaser.—The respondents, shipowners, entered into a contract with a firm of shipbuilders for the construction of a ship at a given price. The ship was to be built under the superintendence of the respondents, and the contract contained the following clause: "The vessel as she is constructed, and all her engines, boilers and machinery, and all materials from time to time intended for her or them, whether in the ship-building yard, workshop, river or elsewhere, shall immediately as the same proceeds become the property of the purchasers, and shall not be within the ownership, control or disposition of the builders, but the builders shall at all times have a lien thereon for their unpaid purchase money." Before the vessel was completed the shipbuilders became bankrupt. Materials for the ship, marked with the ship's number and the place in the ship which they were intended to occupy, were lying at the railway station for delivery:—Held, that as the contract was for a complete ship, and these materials had not been incorporated into the vessel, the property in them did not vest in the shipowner, but in the trustee of the sequestrated estate of the builders. Seath v. Moore (55 L. J. P.C. 54; 11 App. Cas. 350) followed. Reid v. Macbeth, 73 L. J. P.C. 57; [1904] A.C. 223; 90 L. T. 422; 20 T. L. R. 316—H.L. (Sc.)

— Trader's Business Carried on by Trustee for Creditors—Goods Seized in Execution—Trustee's Rights.—A trader with the consent of his creditors assigned his trading estate to a trustee to carry on the business, to pay a certain dividend in the pound to the creditors out of the profits, and to stand possessed of any further profits for the trader himself. The assignee carried on the business in accordance with the trust, but became bankrupt, and a trustee in bankruptcy was appointed. A creditor who had given credit to the assignee whilst carrying on the business obtained judgment against him, and goods which belonged to the trader's estate were seized to satisfy the judgment. The trustee in the assignee's bankruptcy claimed the goods, and the sheriff interpleaded:—Held, that the trustee in the bankruptcy had an equitable lien or right of indemnity in respect of the goods which was sufficient to entitle him to them, as against the execution creditor. Held, also, that the onus of proving that the prima facie equitable lien or right of indemnity had ceased to exist by reason of some default on the part of the assignee lay on those who alleged that such right might have ceased to exist. Jennings v. Mather, 70 L. J. K.B. 1032; [1902] 1 K.B. 1; 85 L. T. 396; 50 W. R. 52; 8 Manson, 329—C.A.

Land—Land in Middlesex—"Conveyance"—Registration—Vendor and Purchaser.—An order of adjudication in bankruptcy coupled with an order that the debtor's estate be administered under section 121 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, whereby the official receiver becomes the trustee in the bankruptcy, does not amount to a "conveyance" to the official receiver within the meaning of the Middlesex Registry Act, and there is therefore nothing of which a memorial can be registered under the Act. The title of the official receiver to land in Middlesex belonging to the bankrupt will consequently not be postponed to that of a subsequent mortgagee from the bankrupt himself, whose mortgage has been duly registered. Calcott and Elvin's Contract, In re, 67 L. J. Ch. 553; [1898] 2 Ch. 460; 78 L. T. 826; 46 W. R. 673; 5 Manson, 208—C.A.

— Building Agreement—Chattels Brought on Premises Deemed "annexed to freehold"—Freeholder—Mortgage of Building Agreement—Power to Re-enter if Mortgagor "become bankrupt."—An agreement between a freeholder and a builder provided that all materials and plant brought on to the land should be deemed to be annexed to the freehold. The builder assigned the benefit of this agreement to a mortgagee to secure advances, and under this deed the mortgagee was entitled to take possession if the builder should "become bankrupt." On August 17, 1901, a receiving order was made against the builder, and on the same day the mortgagee took possession. Up to that time there had been no default by the builder under the agreement or the mortgage. On August 30, 1901, the builder was adjudicated bankrupt:—Held, that the provision in the mortgage-deed must be construed strictly, and that the mortgagee had no right to take possession until the builder had been adjudicated bankrupt. The building materials upon the land at the date of the receiving order were therefore the property of the trustee in bankruptcy as goods in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent of the freeholder, the true owner. Ginger, In re; London and Universal Bank, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 777; [1897] 2 Q.B. 461), followed. Weibking, In re; Ward, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 389; [1902] 1 K.B. 713; 86 L. T. 455; 50 W. R. 460; 9 Manson, 131—Wright, J. And see WORK AND LABOUR.

Trading under Assumed Name—Mortgage of Freehold Property—Second Bankruptcy—Rights of Trustees and Mortgagees—Vesting Order.]

—An undischarged bankrupt started business under an assumed name, acquired freehold property, and mortgaged it in that name. A second receiving order was made, the assets being the equity of redemption of the property and personal property, which realised 113*l.* Subsequently the identity of the bankrupt was discovered. On motion it was ordered that the mortgaged property should vest in the mortgagees upon the Registrar being satisfied that all the debts in the first bankruptcy, with all costs and expenses, had been paid in full; the 113*l.* to be applied towards payment of the debts. Adie, In re; Rushforth, ex parte, 84 L. T. 508—Wright, J.

Chose in Action—Equitable Deposit—Notice—Priority.]—A husband deposited a policy of life assurance with his wife for valuable consideration. The wife gave no notice of the deposit to the insurance society. The husband subsequently became bankrupt, and the official receiver gave notice of the receiving order to the insurance society and claimed the surrender value of the policy:—Held, that the trustee obtained no right to the policy by his priority of notice. Wallis, In re; Jenks, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 465; [1902] 1 K.B. 719; 86 L. T. 237; 50 W. R. 430; 9 Manson, 136—Wright, J.

—Mortgage—Life Policies—Payment of Premiums by Third Party—Bankruptcy of Mortgagor—Policy Moneys—Duty of Trustee as Officer of Court—Repayment of Premiums by Trustee.]—The decisions of the COURT OF APPEAL in James, Ex parte; Condon, in re (43 L. J. Bk. 107; L. R. 9 Ch. 609), and Rivett-Carnac, In re; Simmonds, ex parte (55 L. J. Q.B. 74; 16 Q.B. D. 308), lay down a broad and general principle—namely, that in the administration of a bankrupt's estate the trustee, as an officer of the Court, will be ordered to do what the Court considers to be morally right and honest, even in a case in which no claim can be sustained against him at law or in equity. Where, therefore, to the knowledge of the trustee the wife of the bankrupt continued, out of her own moneys, to pay the premiums on certain policies upon the bankrupt's life, the Court on the bankrupt's death ordered the trustee to repay out of the policy moneys the amount so paid by the wife independently of the question whether she was or was not entitled to any equitable lien. Tyler, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 541; [1907] 1 K.B. 865; 97 L. T. 30; 14 Manson, 73; 23 T. L. R. 328—C.A.

Money Paid into Court under Order XIV. for Leave to Defend Action—Bankruptcy of Defendant before Trial.]—Money paid into Court under the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Order XIV., for leave to defend, must be treated as money paid in to abide the event, and is a security to the plaintiff for the sum for which he may obtain judgment at the trial; and if the defendant becomes bankrupt before the trial, the money must remain in Court until "the event" is decided by the trial of the action, if that is to be tried, or by adjudication upon a proof by the plaintiff in the bankruptcy. Ford, In re; MacLister, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 690; [1900] 2 Q.B. 211; 82 L. T. 625; 48 W. R. 688; 7 Manson, 281—Wright, J.

Payment by Third Person on Behalf of Bankrupt—Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Benefit to Estate—Ignorance of Law—Right of Trustee.]

—The doctrine in James, Ex parte; Condon, in re (43 L. J. Bk. 107; L. R. 9 Ch. 609), approved by this Court in Tyler, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (76 L. J. K.B. 541), does not apply to a case where, without any act of commission or omission on the part of the trustee, a person pays money on behalf of the bankrupt, after notice of facts constituting an available act of bankruptcy, though in ignorance of the effect of the bankruptcy law. Where, therefore, after such notice, certain mortgagees, in ignorance of the effect of the bankruptcy law, paid out of their own moneys a composition of 4*s.* in the pound to the majority of the bankrupt's creditors, in discharge of their debts, and, bankruptcy supervening, realised their security, which left a surplus in their hands slightly less than the amount which they had paid in respect of the composition, the Court refused to allow the mortgagees to retain such surplus, and ordered them to pay it to the trustee as part of the bankrupt's estate. Hall, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 546; [1907] 1 K.B. 875; 97 L. T. 33; 14 Manson, 82; 23 T. L. R. 327—C.A.

Trust—Money Paid to Banker for Remittance to a Third Person—Right to Follow.]—The bankrupts were bankers carrying on business in London and India. Two sums of money were paid to them in London to be remitted through their Bombay branch to a third person about to proceed to India. Neither the person who paid the money nor the person to whom it was to be remitted were customers of the bankrupts. The receiving order was made before the arrival at Bombay of the person to whom the money was to be remitted:—Held—first, that no trust was constituted, and that the person who paid the money had no right to be paid in full in priority to the other creditors; and secondly, that the ordinary relationship of debtor and creditor was established between the bankrupt and the person to whom the money was to have been remitted. Watson & Co., In re; Lloyd, ex parte, 91 L. T. 665—Bigham, J.

Power of Appointment—Appointment of Fund by Bankrupt's Will—Debts Incurred Subsequently to Receiving Order.]—Under a settlement the testator had a general power of appointment by will. In 1892 he made his will, whereby he appointed the fund to the plaintiff and appointed him executor. In 1900 a receiving order was made against the testator, and on October 1, 1900, he was adjudicated bankrupt. In 1904 he died without having obtained his discharge, and also indebted to various persons for debts incurred since the date of the receiving order:—Held, that the appointed fund was not part of the bankrupt's property divisible amongst the creditors in bankruptcy; that the trustee in bankruptcy was not entitled to receive the fund; and that the fund should be paid to the plaintiff as executor for the benefit of the subsequent creditors. Guedalla, In re; Lee v. Guedalla's Trustee, 75 L. J. Ch. 52; [1905] 2 Ch. 331; 94 L. T. 94; 54 W. R. 77; 12 Manson, 392—Warrington, J.

Limited Power—Right of Trustee to Release—"Power in Respect of Property."]—The right of the donee of a power of appointment to release that power, whether inherent or given him by section 52, sub-section 1 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, is not a "power in or over or in respect of property" within the meaning of section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and cannot accordingly be exercised by virtue of that section by his trustee in bankruptcy. Rose, In re; Hasluck v. Rose, 73 L. J. Ch. 726; [1904] 2 Ch. 348; 91 L. T. 254—Farwell, J. Order discharged by consent, 74 L. J. Ch. 22; [1905] 1 Ch. 94; 91 L. T. 821; 11 Manson, 347—C.A.

Property of Prisoner pending Extradition—Retention of Property by Police.]—When a fugitive offender, arrested in England on an extradition warrant for offences committed in a foreign State, becomes bankrupt in England pending the hearing of the charge, the property found on him at the date of his arrest vests in his trustee in bankruptcy, subject to this—that it may on his committal be ordered to be delivered up with him to be used as evidence of the crime at the trial; and in such a case the Secretary of State, in making the extradition order, should stipulate that, when the criminal proceedings in the foreign State are concluded, the property shall be restored to the jurisdiction of the English Bankruptcy Court. Borovsky, In re; Salaman, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 992; [1902] 2 K.B. 312; 87 L. T. 184; 51 W. R. 48; 9 Manson, 346—Wright, J.

In such a case the competent authority in the first instance to decide what property found on the prisoner will serve as proof of the crime is the Court which hears the charge and makes the committal order. Ib.

Pension—Arrears of Alimony—Arrangement between Wife and Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—Where a husband—a retired Government official, who had failed to comply with an order for payment of alimony—had become bankrupt, the Court under section 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, on the application of the trustee in bankruptcy, directed payment of 100*l.* a year to the trustee out of the debtor's pension (347*l.*) to be applied—under an agreement between the trustee and the wife—as to 50*l.* a year for the benefit of the wife, and as to 50*l.* for the general creditors in the bankruptcy—the wife undertaking by the agreement not to enforce the order for alimony. Young, In re; Haydon, ex parte, 5 Manson, 85—C.A.

Defaulting Broker on Stock Exchange—Official Assignee—Liabilities Outside the Stock Exchange—Title of Trustee.]—W., a broker on the London Stock Exchange, was declared a defaulter on the Exchange, and in accordance with the rules of the Exchange the official assignee of the Exchange closed all W.'s transactions on that day (which happened to be "ticket" day), and received and paid the debts due to and from W. and distributed them in the Stock Exchange liquidation. W. had liabilities outside the Stock Exchange. The official assignee when he collected the moneys knew of the act of bankruptcy. The official assignee had received among other sums 1,262*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* due to W. from jobbers on the Exchange, and 117*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* from W.'s outside clients. The official assignee refused to hand these amounts over to the trustee in W.'s bankruptcy, but was willing to hand over 650*l.*, the amount of the surplus remaining in his hands:—Held, that the trustee was not entitled to so much of the 1,262*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* as represented the artificial "making-up" price on the "ticket" day, but that he was entitled to the balance together with the sum of 117*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* Woodd, In re; King, ex parte, 82 L. T. 504—Wright, J.

Causes of Action—Contract of Employment made before Bankruptcy—Dismissal after Commencement of Bankruptcy—Right of Undischarged Bankrupt to Sue—Non-intervention of Trustee.]—An undischarged bankrupt, employed under a contract of service—for example, as a traveller—made before the bankruptcy, is entitled, if the trustee in the bankruptcy has not intervened, to maintain an action against his employers for a wrongful dismissal occurring after the commencement of the bankruptcy. Bailey v. Thurston, 72 L. J. K.B. 36; [1903] 1 K.B. 137; 88 L. T. 43; 51 W. R. 162; 10 Manson, 1—C.A.

Lease—Assignment—Covenant to Indemnify Lessee—Bankruptcy of Assignee—Assignment of Chose in Action by Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—The right to sue on a covenant for indemnity in an assignment of leaseholds is an asset which the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignor can assign. Perkins, In re; Poyser v. Beyfus, 67 L. J. Ch. 454; [1898] 2 Ch. 182; 78 L. T. 666; 46 W. R. 595; 5 Manson, 193—C.A.

Where a lessee has assigned the lease and taken a covenant of indemnity from the assignee, and the assignee has similarly assigned it to a third party, the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignee has power to compromise the lessee's claim against the bankrupt's estate on the covenant, upon the terms that the lessee shall have all the trustee's rights against the third party, but shall withdraw his proof against the bankrupt's estate and release that estate from all his claims under the bankrupt's covenant; and the release will be held not to exonerate the third party. Ib.

Action for Trespass—Personal Annoyance—Bankruptcy of Plaintiff—Divisibility.]—Where an action is brought by a plaintiff (who afterwards becomes bankrupt) claiming damages for trespass to premises and goods in which the only substantial damage claimed is for the personal annoyance caused to the plaintiff, such cause of action does not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy, and the action can be continued by the plaintiff notwithstanding the bankruptcy. Rose v. Buckett, 70 L. J. K.B. 736; [1901] 2 K.B. 449; 84 L. T. 670; 50 W. R. 8; 8 Manson, 259—C.A.

(b) AFTER-ACQUIRED PROPERTY.

Death of Bankrupt Undischarged.—Distribution of After-acquired Property among Next-of-kin—No Notice of Bankruptcy—No Intervention by Trustee—Right of Trustee to Recover Property.—The principles laid down in Herbert v. Sayer (13 L. J. Q.B. 209; 5 Q.B. 965) and Cohen v. Mitchell (59 L. J. Q.B. 409; 25 Q.B. D. 262) with regard to the validity against the trustee of transactions by a bankrupt with persons dealing with him in respect of property acquired by him since his bankruptcy until the trustee intervenes, apply only to transactions for value. Bennett, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 134; [1907] 1 K.B. 149; 95 L. T. 887; 14 Manson, 6; 23 T. L. R. 99—Bigham, J.

The bankrupt is an agent of the trustee to deal with after-acquired property, not to give it away. He cannot defeat the operation of section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, by giving away after-acquired property; nor can his next-of-kin retain against the trustee shares in such property, even though received by them in good faith without notice of the bankruptcy on their part or that of the administrator. Ball, In re ([1899] 2 Ir. R. 313), distinguished. Ib.

Equitable Chose in Action—Assignment by Bankrupt—Bona Fides—Rights of Trustee.—When a bankrupt who has not obtained his discharge enters into transactions in respect of property consisting of an equitable chose in action accrued to him after his bankruptcy, such transactions are, until the trustee in bankruptcy intervenes, valid as against the trustee if made bona fide by the person dealing with the bankrupt, and they may be held to be bona fide although the person dealing with the bankrupt knew of the bankruptcy and knew that the trustee in bankruptcy was not aware of the accrual of the property. On this point the Australian bankruptcy law is the same as the English. Cohen v. Mitchell (59 L. J. Q.B. 409; 25 Q.B. D. 262) followed. Hunt v. Fripp, 67 L. J. Ch. 377; [1898] 1 Ch. 675; 77 L. T. 516; 46 W. R. 125; 5 Manson, 105—Byrne, J.

Assignment of Chose in Action—Title of Trustee—Priority—Notice.—By virtue of section 50, sub-section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the trustee in the bankruptcy becomes the general assignee of the bankrupt's choses in action, other than "personal earnings," as and whenever they arise, subject only to rights acquired by a bona fide assignee for value, whether with or without notice of the bankruptcy before the trustee intervenes. If that particular assignee has not perfected his title by notice to the holder of the fund—where such notice is required—or by a stop order, the trustee as general assignee can by intervening and claiming the fund from the bankrupt and giving notice to the holder of the fund, or by stop order if the fund is in Court, perfect his title first, to the exclusion of the particular assignee. Mercer v. Vans Colina, 67 L. J. Q.B. 424; 78 L. T. 21; 4 Manson, 363—Wright, J.

Where, therefore, an undischarged bankrupt had assigned his share of his interest in a commission on the sale of a public-house, earned by him since the date of the bankruptcy, and his trustee had given notice of his claim before the assignee,—Held, that the trustee had thereby acquired priority over the assignee. Ib.

"Personal earnings."—The commission so earned by the bankrupt was not "personal earnings" as distinguished from income earned by him in his trade or profession, notwithstanding that the bankrupt at the time had no office or clerk, but merely passed his time in endeavouring to negotiate such sales. Ib.

Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy to After-acquired Real Property of Bankrupt—Bona fide Purchaser for Value.—The principle laid down in Cohen v. Mitchell (59 L. J. Q.B. 409; 25 Q.B. D. 262)—that is, that until the trustee in bankruptcy intervenes all transactions by a bankrupt after his bankruptcy with any person dealing with him bona fide and for value in respect of his after-acquired property, and whether with or without knowledge of the bankruptcy, are valid as against the trustee—does not apply to real estate. London and County Contracts, Lim. v. Tallack, 51 W. R. 408—Kekewich, J.

Assignment of Costs—Chose in Action—Trustee—Priority—Notice.—Where an undischarged bankrupt who is a solicitor assigns for value the amount of his taxed costs due to him, his trustee, by giving notice of his claim to the person by whom such costs are payable before the assignee, acquires priority over such assignee. Mercer v. Vans Colina (67 L. J. Q.B. 424) followed. Beall, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 462; [1899] 1 Q.B. 688; 80 L. T. 267; 6 Manson, 163—Wright, J.

After-acquired Equitable Real Estate—Equitable Mortgage—Intervention by Trustee in Bankruptcy.—An undischarged bankrupt cannot, even before the intervention of his trustee in bankruptcy, deal with real estate acquired after his bankruptcy, so as to give the person with whom he deals, even though a bona fide purchaser for value without knowledge of the bankruptcy, a good title as against the trustee. Preston's Trustee v. Cooke, 75 L. J. Ch. 757; [1906] 9 Ch. 661; 13 Manson, 337—Neville, J.

In this respect it makes no difference whether the interest of the bankrupt in the after-acquired real estate be equitable or legal. Decision of CHITTY, J., in the case of legal real estate in New Land Development Association and Gray's Contract, In re (61 L. J. Ch. 323; sub nom. New Land Development Association and Gray, In re, [1892] 2 Ch. 138), followed in the case of equitable real estate. Ib.

Money Deposited with Stakeholder to Abide Result of Billiard Match.—A bankrupt and one D. entered into an agreement to play a billiard match for 100*l.* a side, and deposited 100*l.* each with stakeholders to abide the result of the match. The bankrupt won the match, and the 200*l.* was claimed both by him and by his trustee in bankruptcy. D. made no claim to the stakes or any part thereof:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to the 100*l.* deposited by the bankrupt. Held, also, that under the circumstances D., or the stakeholders with his assent, must be taken to have paid his deposit to the bankrupt or his assigns, and that the trustee was entitled to this deposit also. Shoolbred v. Roberts, 69 L. J. Q.B. 800; [1900] 2 Q.B. 497; 83 L. T. 37; 7 Manson, 388—C.A.

Undischarged Bankrupt Carrying on Business—Knowledge of the Trustee—Second Adjudication—Profits of Business—Right of Trustee in Second Bankruptcy.—Where an undischarged bankrupt carries on business with the knowledge of the trustee for the time being, and subsequently while still undischarged is again adjudicated a bankrupt, the present trustee in the first bankruptcy (though not aware of the trading) is not entitled to the proceeds of the business carried on with the knowledge of his predecessor, against the trustee in the second bankruptcy. Troughton v. Gitley (Amb. 629) and Tucker v. Hernaman (4 De G. M. & G. 395) followed. Burr, In re; Pannell, ex parte, 84 L. T. 327—Wright, J.

The fund in dispute having been acquired under circumstances which themselves necessitated investigation, the costs of both trustees ordered to be paid thereout. Ib.

Legacy—No Intervention of Trustee.—An undischarged bankrupt can give a valid receipt for a legacy to which he becomes entitled after his adjudication and before the trustee in bankruptcy has intervened, where the executor paying such legacy does so bona fide and without knowledge of the bankruptcy. The trustee cannot therefore compel the executor to pay over again the amount of such legacy to him. Ball, In re, [1899] 2 Ir. R. 313—C.A.

Property Acquired by Bankrupt before Discharge—Personal Earnings—Right of Trustee to—Maintenance of Bankrupt and His Family.—Whatever property a bankrupt acquires before his discharge belongs to his trustee, except only what is necessary for the support of himself and his wife and family. He may sue for and recover his earnings if his trustee does not interfere, but what he recovers he recovers, except to the extent mentioned, for the benefit of his creditors. Chippendall v. Tomlinson (4 Dougl. 318; 1 Cooke's Bk. Laws (8th ed.), p. 428) explained and distinguished. Roberts, In re; Roberts, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 19; [1900] 1 Q.B. 122; 81 L. T. 467; 48 W. R. 132; 7 Manson, 5—C.A.

Bonus Paid under Agreement.—Whether a bonus paid to a professional billiard player under an agreement in consideration of his playing with balls made by a certain firm—but which agreement does not impose any obligation on him to play, or otherwise exert himself—can be considered as personal earnings in the event of the bankruptcy of the billiard player, quære. Ib.

(c) RELATION BACK OF TRUSTEE'S TITLE.

Money Advanced by Bankrupt's Solicitors to Obtain Dismissal of Petition against Client—Charge on Bankrupt's Property to Secure Advance.—Where after a petition in bankruptcy had been presented the debtor's solicitors offered the petitioning creditor's solicitor 300*l.* on condition that the petition was dismissed, they stating that the debtor had no money and that they should have to find the money and the creditor's solicitor had accepted the 300*l.* believing that it was not the debtor's money, and the petition was consequently dismissed, but the debtor was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt on a later petition, when it appeared that the bankrupt's solicitors had themselves advanced the 300*l.* to the creditor's solicitor and had taken a charge on the bankrupt's property contemporaneously with the advance of the 300*l.* to secure the same, it was held that as the 300*l.* had been advanced for the express purpose of obtaining the dismissal of the petition, and had never come into the hands of the bankrupt, it did not form part of his general assets, and could not be recovered by his trustee from the creditor. Rogers, In re; Holland and Hannen, ex parte (8 Morrell, 243), followed. Drucker, In re; Basden, ex parte (No. 1), 71 L. J. K.B. 686; [1902] 2 K.B. 237; 86 L. T. 785; 9 Manson, 237—C.A. Affirming 50 W. R. 543—Wright, J.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Act of Bankruptcy—Payment of Debt to Assignee—Bankruptcy Petition—Right of Trustee to Payment of Debt—Receipt of Balance from Assignee—Election—Following Debt into Hands of Trustee.—Where a debtor pays to an assignee under a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors generally a debt thereby assigned, and subsequently a petition in bankruptcy is presented and a receiving order made upon the act of bankruptcy committed in the execution of the deed, the trustee in bankruptcy may claim repayment from the debtor of the debt so paid to the assignee, unless the debtor can show that the money paid by him, or some part thereof, has come into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy. Davis v. Petrie, 75 L. J. K.B. 992; [1906] 2 K.B. 786; 95 L. T. 239; 22 T. L. R. 771—C.A.

Payment by Bankrupt Before Receiving Order, but After Act of Bankruptcy—Payment of Lost Bets—Right of Trustee to Recover from Payee.—B. made bets upon a racecourse with the defendant, a bookmaker, and lost 500*l.*, which he then paid. B. had previously committed an act of bankruptcy, upon which a receiving order was subsequently made against him. The defendant received payment of the 500*l.* bona fide and without notice of the act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the payment of the 500*l.* was not protected by section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and that the plaintiff, as trustee in bankruptcy, was entitled to recover the 500*l.* from the defendant. Ward v. Fry, 85 L. T. 394; 50 W. R. 72—C.A.

Mortgage by Debtor—Act of Bankruptcy—Knowledge of Mortgagee—Redemption of Security—Relation Back of Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy—Liability of Mortgagee.—A secured creditor who has notice of an act of bankruptcy by his debtor within three months is not entitled before the expiration of that period to receive payment of the debt from his debtor, and consequently the debtor cannot make a good tender to the creditor and require him to give up his securities to the debtor on payment of the amount due. Lawford and Lawrence, In re; Nichols, ex parte (71 L. J. K.B. 786; [1902] 2 K.B. 445), overruled. Ponsford, Baker & Co. v. Union of London and Smiths Bank, 75 L. J. Ch. 724; [1906] 2 Ch. 444; 95 L. T. 333; 13 Manson, 321; 22 T. L. R. 812—C.A.

Stockbrokers were in April, 1906, declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, and an official assignee was appointed according to the rules of the Stock Exchange. They had deposited with the defendants certain securities to secure a loan. The official assignee tendered the amount due in respect of the loan and called on the defendants to hand over the securities. They refused on the ground that, having notice of an act of bankruptcy by the stockbrokers—namely, the assignment to the official assignee—within three months, they would not be safe in handing over the securities till the expiration of three months, for if bankruptcy proceedings were taken within that period the title of the trustee in bankruptcy would relate back. The stockbrokers and official assignee then sued for delivery up of the securities on payment of the amount due:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not require the defendants to give up the securities. Ib.

Per CURIAM.—If the official assignee were prepared to pay the money due on the securities and to undertake to hold them until bankruptcy proceedings were taken or the period of three months had expired, an order should be made empowering him so to do. If he were not, no immediate judgment should be given in the action, but it should be directed to stand over until it could be seen who was the person entitled to redeem. Ib.

Pledge by Debtor—Loan to Debtor—Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Payment of Loan—Delivery of Goods Pledged.—On September 14 and 27, 1900, respectively, L. pledged chattels to W. and received loans against them. On October 6 he committed an act of bankruptcy. On October 26 W., with notice of the act of bankruptcy, being repaid the loan of September 14, re-delivered the chattels pledged against it. On January 9, 1901, a receiving order was made on the act of bankruptcy, and L. was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt. On January 11 W., being repaid the loan of September 27, re-delivered the rest of the chattels:—Held, that, though the title of the trustee in L.'s bankruptcy related back to October 6, he took subject to the pledge, and could not recover from W. the value of the chattels less the amount of the loans. Lawford and Lawrence, In re; Nichols, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 786; [1902] 2 K.B. 445; 86 L. T. 693; 50 W. R. 592; 9 Manson, 254—Wright, J.

Verbal Contract with Solicitor to Act in the Bankruptcy—Payment of Lump Sum—Repayment.—A solicitor received from a client a lump sum under a verbal contract to act for him in his bankruptcy proceedings:—Held, that the amount so paid must be repaid to the trustee, less costs incurred to the date of the receiving order. Mander, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 86 L. T. 234—Wright, J.

(d) DISCOVERY OF DEBTOR'S PROPERTY.

Delivery—Order against Agent.—The Court has no jurisdiction under section 27 (5) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to make an order for the delivery of the goods of the bankrupt in the possession of a person as agent for another. Quere, whether such order could be made if the principal were made a respondent to the application. Davis, In re; Goodman, ex parte, 5 Manson, 329—D.

Enforcing Attendance of Witness for Private Examination.—Personal service of a summons for the examination of a witness under section 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, is not necessary; it may be sent by registered post. The "reasonable sum" which is to be tendered to the witness is conduct money, and is to be measured by the distance the witness has to travel, and it must be sent with the summons in cash or postal orders. The form of warrant to be altered so as to enable an officer who arrests a witness in order to bring him up for examination to detain him in prison for such a reasonable period as may be necessary to ensure his attendance at the examination. Weinberg, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 96 L. T. 790; 14 Manson, 277—Bigham, J.

Examination of Witness Abroad—"Any other place out of England"—Jurisdiction.—The words "any other place out of England" in section 27, sub-section 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, providing that "the Court may, if it think fit, order that any person who if in England would be liable to be brought before it under this section shall be examined in Scotland or Ireland, or in any other place out of England," must be construed as limited to a place within the British dominions. The sub-section gives the Court no power to order a person to be examined in Switzerland, for example, even though such person is a naturalised British subject. Drucker, In re; Basden, ex parte (No. 2), 71 L. J. K.B. 688; [1902] 2 K.B. 210; 86 L. T. 692; 50 W. R. 592; 9 Manson, 241—Wright, J.

Form of Order.—An order for examination under the section cannot be made in an optional form—for example, that the person should be examined "if he think fit to submit." Ib.

Examination of Bankrupt.—Either party is entitled to elicit from a bankrupt any previous account he has given of a matter, without regard to who calls him. Cunningham, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 80 L. T. 503; 6 Manson, 199—Wright, J.

(e) SURPLUS ASSETS.

Charge—Contract to Purchase Real Estate—Assignment—Mortgagee's Lien—Second Bankruptcy—Rights of Second Trustee.—Although a bankrupt cannot interfere with the administration of his estate by his trustee, he nevertheless has a right during the pendency of the bankruptcy to the surplus assets, and can dispose of them by deed or will, even before they are ascertained, and charges validly created by the bankrupt upon such surplus assets will be good as against his trustee in a subsequent bankruptcy which occurs before he has obtained his discharge under his first bankruptcy. Bird v. Philpott, 69 L. J. Ch. 487; [1900] 1 Ch. 822; 82 L. T. 110; 7 Manson, 251—Farwell J.

Where a man takes up and retains an undischarged bankrupt's contract to purchase real estate, and subsequently pays both the deposit and the balance of the purchase-money, receiving and retaining on completion the conveyance to the bankrupt of the land, he will be entitled as against the bankrupt's trustee to a charge upon the land to the extent of the money so paid. Meux v. Smith (10 L. J. Ch. 225; 11 Sim. 410) applied. Id.

13. REPUTED OWNERSHIP.

Bill of Sale—Registration—"Consent and permission of true owner."—Goods comprised in a bill of sale may be in the order and disposition of the grantor "by the consent and permission of the true owner," within the reputed ownership clause (section 44, sub-s. iii.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, although the consent of the grantee—as the true owner—was involuntary by reason of his being prohibited from seizing the goods prior to the bankruptcy by section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882. Ginger, In re; London and Universal Bank, ex parte, 66 L. J. Q.B. 777; [1897] 2 Q.B. 461; 76 L. T. 808; 46 W. R. 144; 4 Manson, 149—D.

— "Consent and permission of true owner."—Where a person is in possession of certain chattels of which he has executed a bill of sale, and is subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt before making any default in payment of the sum thereby secured, such chattels are to be deemed to be in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner within the reputed ownership clause of the Bankruptcy Act. Ginger, In re; London and Universal Bank, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 777; [1897] 2 Q.B. 461), followed. Hayes, In re, [1899] 2 Ir. R. 206—Boyd, J.

— Grantor Licensed Victualler—Mortgages in Possession of Premises—Goods in Possession of Debtor in His Trade or Business.—A debtor was lessee of three public-houses; the licence of one was in his name, that of the other two in the names of nominees of his. He granted a bill of sale over trade utensils and equipment in and upon the three public-houses. At the commencement of the bankruptcy the mortgagees of the houses had entered and had appointed managers, who were carrying on the business, but they allowed the debtor to reside at the house of which he held the licence. The goods in the bill of sale remained on the pre-misses; there was no default under the bill of sale:—Held, that the goods at all three houses were at the commencement of the bankruptcy in the possession of the bankrupt in his trade or business within section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, and that they passed to the trustee as part of the bankrupt's property divisible amongst his creditors. Elliott, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 84 L. T. 325—Wright, J.

"In his trade or business"—Reputed Ownership—Stands for Display of Goods used by Bankrupt with Consent of True Owner.—Section 44 (iii.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, applies to goods the reputed property of a bankrupt, if they be in the possession, order, or disposition of the bankrupt in his trade or business by the consent and permission of the true owner; although they neither originally belonged to the bankrupt, nor could they have lawfully been pledged or sold by him, nor were they in his disposition in the sense that they were such things as he sold in his trade. Accordingly, stands or models for the display of mantles used by a mantle dealer in her business with the consent and knowledge of the true owner will upon an adjudication of bankruptcy pass to the trustee. Sharman v. Mason, 69 L. J. Q.B. 3; [1899] 2 Q.B. 679; 81 L. T. 485; 48 W. R. 142; 7 Manson, 19—D.

Articles Displayed by Bankrupts in Show-cases with Consent of True Owners—Principal and Agent.—Before goods of another person can be taken to pay the debts of a bankrupt, by reason of the reputed ownership of the bankrupt, it is essential that the true owner of the goods should have consented to a state of things from which he must have known, if he had considered the matter, that the inference of ownership by the bankrupt must arise. Watson & Co., In re; Atkin, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 854; [1904] 2 K.B. 753; 11 Manson, 256; 20 T. L. R. 727—C.A.

W. & Co., who had carried on business as bankers and agents, had been in the habit of introducing their customers to wholesale firms for the purchase of various articles, and amongst them to A. & Co. W. & Co. received from A. & Co. certain silver and electro-plated articles as samples, with a consignment note giving particulars of the articles and their prices, and the correspondence between the parties shewed that they were only received by W. & Co. as samples, and were to be put into their show-cases as such, and were to remain at the risk of A. & Co., and there was nothing to authorise W. & Co. to take upon themselves the order and disposition of the goods. W. & Co. also dealt in goods of the same kind on their own account, but the samples of A. & Co. were generally dealt with by them in a different way from the way in which they dealt with their own goods. The samples of A. & Co. were in the possession of W. & Co. at the date of their bankruptcy:—Held, that A. & Co. had not acquiesced in the bankrupts so dealing with the goods as to allow them to hold themselves out as the owners of the goods, or to induce customers to presume such ownership; and the articles were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts under such circumstances that they were the reputed owners thereof within the meaning of sub-section 2 (iii.) of section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Sharman v. Mason (69 L. J. Q.B. 3; [1899] 2 Q.B. 679) explained. Id.

Building Agreement—Lien of Building Owner on Builder's Plant and Materials on Premises—Forfeiture by Builder after Bankruptcy—Reputed Owner.]—A building contract between a firm of builders and a school board provided (by clause 10) that all plant and materials brought on to the ground by the builders for the purposes of the building should be considered to be the property of the board, and should not be removed by the builders or any other person without the licence of the architect, but that the board should not be answerable for any loss or damage which might happen to them; and (by clause 20) that if the builders should delay the performance of their contract, the board might give the builders notice to proceed with the work, and that, in the event of their not doing so within seven days, the plant and materials should be forfeited to the board. The builders having become bankrupt, the board subsequently to the commencement of the bankruptcy gave to the builders and to their trustee notice under clause 20 to proceed with the work, and, upon non-compliance with the notice, the board claimed that the plant and materials upon the premises were forfeited:—Held, that clause 10 of the contract did not vest the ownership of the goods in the board, and that they were therefore not in the order and disposition of the debtors by the consent of the "true owner" within the meaning of section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and did not pass to the trustee as being in their reputed ownership. Further, that the board's right to issue the notice under clause 20 was unaffected by the bankruptcy, and that the forfeiture determined the title of the trustee, although the goods were the property of the debtors at the commencement of the bankruptcy. Wallworth, In re; Shuttlesworth v. Hernaman (26 L. J. Bk. 61; 1 De G. & J. 322), distinguished. Keen, In re; Collins, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 487; [1902] 1 K.B. 555; 86 L. T. 235; 50 W. R. 334; 9 Manson, 145—D.

True Owner—Dissolution of Partnership—Equitable Assignment of Debt—Bankruptcy of Continuing Partner.]—C. and S. traded in partnership, and in the course of business lent money to R. In 1894 the partnership was dissolved by deed, whereby the assets of the partnership were assigned to C., who agreed to pay over to S. one fifth part of any money which he might receive from R. in respect of R.'s debt to the firm. In 1898 C. became bankrupt. S. gave no notice to R. of his interest in the debt due from R. to the firm under his agreement with C. In 1900 the trustee in C.'s bankruptcy received from R. 150*l.* in settlement of R.'s debt. S. now claimed to recover one-fifth of this sum from the trustee:—Held, that the agreement between C. and S. amounted to a valid equitable assignment to S., but that S. was the "true owner" of the share assigned to him, which, however, was in the order or disposition of the bankrupt with his consent, within section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and that he therefore could not recover from the trustee. Crouch, In re; Smith, ex parte, 83 L. T. 746—Wright, J.

Shares—Deposit by Owner with Bank—Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Subsequent Adjudication—Order and Disposition.]—Where an owner of shares in certain companies deposited the scrip with a bank to secure an advance, without any memorandum in writing or duly executed transfer, and the bank, before adjudication, served notice of such assignment on the companies, with knowledge, however, of an act of bankruptcy committed by the owner:—Held, that where the certificates contained a proviso that they must be produced on registration of the transfer, such shares were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt; but that where the certificates contained no such proviso the shares were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, the notice of transfer not having been served upon the companies by the bank before becoming aware of the act of bankruptcy. Butler, In re, [1900] 2 Ir. R. 153—Boyd, J.

Agreement to Assign Bills when Completed—Assignment of Debt by Bankrupt—Notice of the Assignment—Order and Disposition.]—D. carried on business as a coal exporter. In January, 1900, he sold a cargo of coal to a company carrying on business at Athens. D. shipped the coal to the purchasers and forwarded them bills of exchange for the price, to be accepted by them and returned. D., being in want of funds to meet cheques falling due, on February 3 arranged with the N. E. Bank that they should pay these cheques on their being presented, and he agreed in writing that these payments should be against the bills to be accepted, and he thereby "undertook to hand to the N. E. Bank the above-mentioned bills immediately on receipt." On March 3, the bills not having arrived, D. gave to the N. E. Bank a letter addressed by him to the company in Athens, requesting them to "hand the bills on demand to the N. E. Bank." This letter the bank on March 3 forwarded to the company, enclosed in one from themselves, to the following effect: "We shall be glad if you will post direct to us the four bills in accordance with the enclosed instructions." D. committed an act of bankruptcy on March 3, before giving the letter to the bank, but the bank had no notice of an act of bankruptcy till March 6. A receiving order was subsequently made against D., and his trustee in bankruptcy moved for a declaration that he was entitled to the proceeds of the bills as being property in the order and disposition of the bankrupt within section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883:—Held, that, even if the document of February 3 only amounted to an assignment of the debt and not of the bills, yet the letters of March 3 constituted a sufficient notice of the assignment to prevent the operation of section 44. Dixon, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 83 L. T. 433—Wright, J.

Debts Due or Accruing Due to Bankrupt in Course of Business—Bill Drawn by Bankrupt on Debtor and Indorsed to Holder for Value—Bill not Accepted or Presented for Acceptance—No Notice of Assignment.]—The bankrupts prior to the commission of an act of bankruptcy deposited with their bankers as security for advances bills of exchange drawn by them upon debtors, from whom debts were growing due to them in the course of their business. At the date of the act of bankruptcy the bills of exchange had not been accepted by or presented for acceptance to the debtors, nor had notice been given to them of the assignment by the bankrupts to the bankers of the debts due by them:—Held, that at the date of the act of bankruptcy the debts were due or growing due to the bankrupts in the course of their business, and were in the possession, order, and disposition of the bankrupts with the consent of the true owners, so as to vest in the trustee in bankruptcy under section 44 (iii.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Goetz, Jonas & Co., In re; Trustee, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 577; [1898] 1 Q.B. 787; 78 L. T. 399; 46 W. R. 469; 5 Manson, 76—C.A.

Custom of Trade.—In order that a custom in the bankrupt's trade that he should have in his possession goods belonging to other persons may exclude the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act as to reputed ownership, the custom must be known to traders generally, and not merely to persons engaged in the particular trade. Ib.

14. DISCLAIMER BY TRUSTEE.

Onerous Property—Time.—“First appointment of a trustee.”—Under sub-section 1 of section 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, as amended by section 13 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, the trustee of the bankrupt's estate may disclaim onerous property within twelve months “after the first appointment of a trustee.” This refers to an appointment of a trustee under section 21 of the Act of 1883, either by the creditors under sub-section 1 or by the Board of Trade under sub-section 6, and does not refer to the official receiver becoming trustee under sub-section 1 of section 54, on the debtor being adjudged bankrupt, until a trustee is appointed. The period of twelve months therefore runs from the date of the certificate of the first appointment of a trustee, and not from the date of the order of adjudication. Cohen, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 864; [1905] 2 K.B. 704; 93 L. T. 659; 54 W. R. 83; 12 Manson, 358; 21 T. L. R. 725—C.A.

The official receiver, whilst acting as trustee under section 54, may exercise the power of disclaimer without being subject to the limitation of time provided in the case of a trustee; but he may be called upon under sub-section 4 of section 55, by a person interested in the property in question, to decide whether he will disclaim or not. Ib.

Leaseholds—Vendor and Purchaser—Specific Performance against Trustee.—A trustee in bankruptcy cannot disclaim a bankrupt vendor's contract for the sale of leaseholds without disclaiming the lease. Specific performance of such a contract will be ordered against the trustee notwithstanding an attempted disclaimer. Holloway v. York (25 W. R. 627) applies only to the case of a bankrupt purchaser. Pearce v. Bastable's Trustee, 70 L. J. Ch. 446; [1901] 2 Ch. 122; 84 L. T. 525; 8 Manson, 287—Cozens-Hardy, J.

—Guarantee of Rent—Rent Accruing after Disclaimer—Liability of Guarantor.—Where the trustee in bankruptcy of a lessee for a term of years disclaims the lease under section 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and no underlease or assignment has been made, a guarantor of the payment of such “rent as may be from time to time in arrear” under the lease is not liable under the guarantee for rent accruing due after the date of the disclaimer. Stacey v. Hill, 70 L. J. K.B. 435; [1901] 1 K.B. 660; 84 L. T. 410; 49 W. R. 390; 8 Manson, 169—C.A.

—Bankrupt Assignee of Lease—Mortgage by Sub-demise—Original Lessee Solvent—Application by Lessor—Vesting Order—Exclusion.—Where the assignee of a lease becomes bankrupt and his trustee disclaims the lease, the original lessor can, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 55, sub-s. 6, apply for an order excluding a sub-lessee of the bankrupt from all interest in the property unless he elects to take a vesting order, notwithstanding that the original lessee remains liable on the covenants in the lease, and has not been served with notice of the application. Cock, In re; Shilson, ex parte (57 L. J. Q.B. 169; 20 Q.B. D. 343); Finley, In re; Clothworkers' Co., ex parte (57 L. J. Q.B. 626; 21 Q.B. D. 475); and Morgan, In re; Morgan, ex parte (58 L. J. Q.B. 295; 22 Q.B. D. 592), followed and applied. Baker, In re; Lupton, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 856; [1901] 2 K.B. 628; 85 L. T. 33; 49 W. R. 691; 8 Manson, 279—C.A.

Mortgage by Sub-demise—Disclaimer—Vesting Order.—On March 1, 1904, the Coopers' Co. granted to Carter & Ellis seven leases of seven houses for, in each case, ninety-nine years from September 29, 1903, at a low ground-rent. Any assignment of a lease was to be registered with the clerk of the lessor company, but, apart from that, there was no restriction on the right of the lessees to assign. On March 1, 1904, the lessees mortgaged the property comprised in the several leases to Savill Brothers, by way of sub-demise, to secure £864l. 11s. 1d. and interest. On March 24, 1904, a petition in bankruptcy against Carter & Ellis was filed, and on April 19 they were adjudicated bankrupts. The trustee in the bankruptcy disclaimed all interest in the leases. The mortgagees declined to accept an order vesting the property in them, and making them subject to the same liabilities as the bankrupts were subject to under the leases at the time of the filing of the petition. The houses were new houses, and the rents had been paid, and the covenants of the leases duly performed:—Held, that this was a case in which the discretionary power given to the Court by section 13 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, ought to be exercised, and an order made vesting the property in the mortgagees, and making them subject only to the same liabilities and obligations as if the lease had been assigned to them at the date when the bankruptcy petition was filed. Carter & Ellis, In re, 74 L. J. K.B. 442; [1905] 1 K.B. 735; 92 L. T. 523; 53 W. R. 433; 12 Manson, 118; 21 T. L. R. 334—C.A.

The official receiver, whilst acting as trustee under section 54, may exercise the power of disclaimer without being subject to the limitation of time provided in the case of a trustee; but he may be called upon under sub-section 4 of section 55, by a person interested in the property in question, to decide whether he will disclaim or not. Ib.

Vesting Order—Judicial Discretion.]—A Court of bankruptcy is entitled to exercise a judicial discretion, and does not merely act ministerially, in dealing with applications for vesting orders under the provisions of section 55, sub-section 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Lea v. Thursby, 73 L. J. Ch. 518; [1904] 2 Ch. 57; 90 L. T. 667; 11 Manson, 151; 20 T. L. R. 470—Swinfen Eady, J.

Disclaimer of Lease—Mortgage by Sub-demise—Merger—County Court—Jurisdiction.]—The lessee of certain freeholds mortgaged his term to the plaintiff by way of sub-demise to secure certain advances. He subsequently acquired the fee-simple of the premises, and ultimately sold it to the defendant. Afterwards the lessee became bankrupt, and his trustee duly disclaimed the lease under the provisions of section 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. The defendant thereupon moved the County Court in the bankruptcy, under the provisions of sub-section 6 of section 55, for an order that the mortgagee should take a vesting order of the lease; or that, on the failure of the mortgagee to take such vesting order, the mortgagee should be excluded from all security upon the lease, and that the lease should thereupon be vested in the defendant freed from all incumbrances. The mortgagee declined to accept a vesting order, on the ground that the lease had merged in the fee-simple on the conveyance of the fee-simple to the lessee, and that it was not, accordingly, any longer subsisting, and could not therefore be the subject of a vesting order. The Registrar decided on the particular facts of the case that the lease was still subsisting, and he made an order excluding the mortgagee from all interest in the said lease, and vesting it in the defendant freed from all incumbrances. The mortgagee had not appealed from this order. The mortgagee claimed in the present action that he was entitled to the incumbrance upon the lease created by his mortgage by way of sub-demise:—Held, that the County Court possessed jurisdiction, under section 102, sub-section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to adjudicate upon the question of merger; that, the County Court having already so adjudicated, the question was now res judicata, and could not be re-opened; and that the mortgagee had accordingly lost his security. Held, also, on the particular facts of the case, that there had been no merger. Ib.

Assignment of Lease for Benefit of Creditors—Act of Bankruptcy by Lessee—Rent Accruing Due before Adjudication—Disclaimer of Lease by Trustee in Bankruptcy—Liability of Assignee for Rent.]—The lessee of certain houses of which the plaintiffs were lessors assigned the leases thereof, together with other property, to the defendant in trust for the benefit of her creditors, by a deed, which was an act of bankruptcy on her part. After the assignment a quarter's rent accrued due under the leases and the lessors obtained judgment against the defendant for this rent. Before the bankruptcy of the lessee a second quarter's rent accrued due, in respect of which the lessors issued a writ against the defendant. Before the action came on for trial the lessee was adjudicated bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy disclaimed the leases:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the rent, inasmuch as the bankruptcy which followed on the act of bankruptcy had not the effect of releasing the liability for the rent as between the lessors and the defendant existing at the time when the writ was issued. Stein v. Pope, 71 L. J. K.B. 322; [1902] 1 K.B. 595; 86 L. T. 283; 50 W. R. 374; 9 Manson, 125—C.A.

Contract for Sale of Leasehold Property before Bankruptcy—Disclaimer of Contract by Trustee—Vendor and Purchaser.]—The trustee in bankruptcy of a vendor of leasehold property has no power under section 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to disclaim the contract for sale and retain the leasehold property as part of the bankrupt's estate. Bastable, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 784; [1901] 2 K.B. 518; 84 L. T. 825; 49 W. R. 561; 8 Manson, 239—C.A.

Disclaimer of Lease by Assignees of Bankrupt—Apportionment of Rent.]—Upon the disclaimer by the assignees of a bankrupt of his interest in a lease, the lessor is entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for an apportioned part of the rent which has accrued due between the last quarter day and the date of adjudication. Leeks, In re, [1902] 2 Ir. 15. EXECUTIONS.

Completion—Title of Trustee.]—An execution is not completed by payment direct to an execution creditor. Pollock, In re; Wilson, ex parte, 87 L. T. 238—D.

Sequestration—Secured Creditor.]—Payment of money into Court to the separate account of sequestrators does not amount to completion of execution by the creditor at whose instance the writ of sequestration issued. Hastings, In re; Brown, ex parte (61 L. J. Q.B. 654; 9 Morrell, 234), approved. Pollard, In re; Pollard, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 509; [1903] 2 K.B. 41; 88 L. T. 652; 51 W. R. 483; 10 Manson, 152—C.A.

Observations by ROMER, L.J., on the nature and effect of sequestration. Ib.

Payment to Creditor—Withdrawal by Sheriff—Bankruptcy of Debtor—Completion of Execution—Title of Trustee.]—On July 22, 1903, the sheriff levied on the goods of the debtor at the Alexandra and Adelphi Hotels. On July 27 he withdrew, on the instructions of the judgment creditor, from the Alexandra Hotel on part payment. On July 28 the debtor sold to the execution creditor goods at the Alexandra Hotel which had been seized, and on July 29 he also sold to the execution creditor goods at the same place which had not been seized. On the same day an arrangement was made by which the debtor received credit for the amount in the hands of the sheriff and for the goods sold, and he paid the balance direct to the execution creditor. The sheriff withdrew, and on August 12 he paid over the amount in his hands to the execution creditor, having received no notice of a bankruptcy petition. On August 20 a receiving order was made against the debtor on his own petition:—Held, that the trustee in bankruptcy had no title against the execution creditor to the money or the goods. Pollock, In re; Wilson, ex parte (87 L. T. 238), distinguished. Ford, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (69 L. J. Q.B. 74; [1900] 1 Q.B. 264), applied. Jenkins, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 90 L. T. 65; 20 T. L. R. 187—D.

Part Payment to Creditor of Judgment Debt—Withdrawal of Sheriff with Authority to Re-enter—Receiving Order against Debtor—Title of Trustee.—Execution was levied on the goods of a judgment debtor, who thereupon paid a portion of the debt to the execution creditor; and the sheriff, by arrangement between the parties, withdrew from possession with an authority from the execution debtor to re-enter. Before payment of the balance of the judgment debt or re-entry by the sheriff in default, a receiving order was made against the debtor:—Held, that the trustee in bankruptcy was entitled under section 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to the money paid on account to the execution creditor. Ford, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 74; [1900] 1 Q.B. 264; 81 L. T. 648; 48 W. R. 173; 7 Manson, 14—D.

Sum Exceeding 20*l.*—Sale by Sheriff—Retainer of Proceeds—Notice of Bankruptcy Petition—Death of Judgment Debtor—Administration Order.—Under an execution for a sum exceeding 20*l.* the sheriff seized and sold the goods of the judgment debtor. Before the expiration of the fourteen days limited by section 11, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, the sheriff received notice of a bankruptcy petition presented against the debtor. The debtor shortly afterwards died. After the expiration of the fourteen days the sheriff received notice of a petition for an administration order under section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, upon which an order was ultimately made:—Held, that under the circumstances the money in the hands of the sheriff was not part of the deceased debtor's estate, but belonged to the execution creditor. Watkins v. Barnard, 66 L. J. Q.B. 771; [1897] 2 Q.B. 521; 46 W. R. 156; 4 Manson, 221—Vaughan Williams, J. See Hasluck v. Clark, post.

Sheriff—Notice of Receiving Order and Request for Delivery of Goods before Sale—“Costs of execution”—“Poundage.”—Where a receiving order is made against a judgment debtor after seizure but before sale by the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa., and the sheriff receives from the official receiver, under section 11, sub-section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, notice of the receiving order having been made against the debtor, and a request to deliver the goods and any money seized or received in part satisfaction of the execution to the official receiver, the sale is stopped at the instance of the official receiver, and such of the sheriff's fees as have been earned up to that time must be paid out of the debtor's estate; but the sheriff is not entitled to any fees for poundage, as no money is obtained by anything that he has done. Woolford (Trustee of) v. Levy (61 L. J. Q.B. 546; [1892] 1 Q.B. 772), applied. Thomas, In re; Middlesex (Sheriff), ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 245; [1899] 1 Q.B. 460; 80 L. T. 62; 47 W. R. 259; 6 Manson, 1—C.A.

—Notice to Sheriff—Service after Two o'clock on Saturday.—Rule 90 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, which provides that service of notices and other proceedings shall be effected before the hour of two in the afternoon on Saturdays, does not apply to service upon the sheriff, who has taken goods in execution for a sum exceeding 20*l.*, of a notice that a receiving order has been made against the debtor; and therefore, where the fourteen days limited by section 11, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, during which the sheriff is required to hold the proceeds of an execution for a sum exceeding 20*l.* in his hands, expire on a Saturday, notice of a receiving order may be served upon the sheriff after two in the afternoon on that day, so as to entitle the official receiver to the proceeds of the execution as against the execution creditor. Jole v. Betteridge 67 L. J. Q.B. 215; [1898] 1 Q.B. 256; 77 L. T. 548; 46 W. R. 161; 5 Manson, 1—C.A.

—Tools and Implements of Debtor's Trade Excepted—Non-intervention of Official Receiver.—Where the goods of a debtor have been taken in execution by the sheriff, and before the sale notice is served on him that a receiving order has been made against the debtor, but the official receiver does not intervene under section 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, the sheriff is bound to proceed with the sale. In such a case section 8 of the Small Debts Act, 1845, applies, and the sheriff is only required to reserve to the debtor the tools and implements of his trade not exceeding in the whole the value of 5*l.*, notwithstanding the provisions of section 44 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, by which such value is limited to 20*l.* Dawson, In re; Dawson, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 668; [1899] 2 Q.B. 54; 80 L. T. 498; 47 W. R. 524; 6 Manson, 200—Wright, J.

Landlord's Claim for Rent—Promise to Pay—Receiving Order—No Notice to Official Receiver.—A sheriff, who had levied on goods under a writ of fi. facias, received notice of the landlord's claim for rent. Before sale he promised to pay the rent, and a portion of the goods were sold with the assent of the landlord. On the following day a bankruptcy petition was presented against the debtor of which the sheriff had notice. After the making of a receiving order, of which the sheriff also had notice, the sale was completed on account of the official receiver. The official receiver had no notice of the claim for rent:—Held, that the sheriff must account to the official receiver for the whole net proceeds of the sale without deducting the landlord's rent. The sheriff might have protected himself and the landlord by giving notice, as in Cocker v. Musgrove (9 Q.B. 223), but having obtained the leave of the official receiver to complete the execution of his account, without giving any intimation of the landlord's claim, he could only sell on the terms on which he obtained the official receiver's leave to sell—that is, on the account of the official receiver. Driver, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 80 L. T. 840—D.

Sale by Sheriff—Bankruptcy of Debtor—Landlord's Claim for Rent—Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy to Proceeds of Sale.—Under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding 20*l.*, the sheriff having notice of an available act of bankruptcy sold the goods, and within fourteen days received notice of a bankruptcy petition. The sheriff afterwards received notice of the landlord's claim for a quarter's rent. A receiving order was made, and the debtor adjudicated bankrupt. The sheriff then paid the landlord his quarter's rent out of the proceeds of the execution, and paid the balance to the trustee:—Held, that the sheriff was right in deducting the amount of the landlord's rent out of the proceeds of the execution, and was only accountable to the trustee for the balance. Mackenzie, In re; Herefordshire (Sheriff), ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 1003; [1899] 2 Q.B. 566; 81 L. T. 214—C.A.

The right of a landlord under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1709, s. 1, as explained by decisions, is not interfered with by the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 11, sub-s. 2. McCarthy, In re (7 L. R. Ir. 473), followed. Ib.

"Costs of execution"—Possession Retained by Sheriff by Consent of Creditor and Debtor—Act of Bankruptcy—Possession—Money after Twenty-one Days.—On March 13, 1902, a sheriff levied execution on the goods of a debtor, and, by the direction of the judgment creditor, and with the consent of the debtor, remained in possession for seventy-eight days. On May 16, 1902, a receiving order was made against the debtor, notice of which was given to the sheriff, but he was not required by the official receiver to withdraw from possession until May 29, 1902:—Held, that, as against the trustee in bankruptcy, the sheriff was not entitled to the costs of possession beyond the period of twenty-one days, when an act of bankruptcy was completed under section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, and such additional costs were not "costs of the execution" within section 11 of the Act, and did not operate as a charge upon the goods. The remedy of the sheriff, if any, was against the execution creditor. English and Ayling, In re, 72 L. J. K.B. 248; [1903] 1 K.B. 680; 88 L. T. 127; 10 Manson, 34—Wright, J.

— Possession - Money—Possession Retained by Sheriff without Selling at Request of Debtor with Assent of Execution Creditor—Unreasonable Time.—Where a sheriff seizes goods of a judgment debtor, and at the request of the debtor and with the assent of the execution creditor remains in possession for some time without selling, he will be entitled to possession-money down to the time of his selling or delivering up possession to the official receiver in the bankruptcy of the debtor, as the case may be, as costs of the execution under section 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, unless, in the case of a bankruptcy, the trustee could impeach the arrangement on some ground that the debtor could not. Hurley, In re (10 Morr. 120), applied. Beeston, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 68 L. 16. FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS.

Transfer of Bankrupt's Business to Limited Company—Fraudulent Conveyance.—A trader being in difficulties, transferred his assets to a company, in the bona fide hope of thereby benefiting his creditors. His assets were estimated at 2,000*l.* and his debts at 1,000*l.* The consideration for the transfer was an undertaking by the company to pay his debts and the allotment of ninety-four shares and debentures of the nominal value of 1,000*l.* The debentures could not be enforced until interest was two months overdue—that is, eight months from their issue—or until execution was put in against the company:—Held, that this transfer did not necessarily tend to defeat or delay creditors, was not a fraudulent conveyance within section 4, sub-section 1 (b) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1893, and should not be set aside as void against the trustee in bankruptcy. Harris, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 14 Manson, 127; 50 W. R. 460—D.

— Setting Aside—Business of Company Controlled by Vendor—Winding-up of Company—Right of Trustee in Bankruptcy.—The bankrupt, with the intention of defeating and delaying his creditors, sold his business to a limited company. The consideration for the sale was the issue of 2,000 fully paid l. shares to his nominee, and the taking over by the company of the debts of the business. The bankrupt was chairman, sole director, and secretary of the company, and the other members held only one share each. On the same day that a receiving order was made against the bankrupt the company passed a resolution to go into voluntary liquidation, and a liquidator was appointed. The company had paid off some of the debts in existence when it took over the business, and had incurred fresh liabilities:—Held, that the doctrine of agency acted on in Carey, In re; Jeffreys, ex parte ([1895] 2 Q.B. 624), is not since Salomon v. Salomon ([1897] A.C. 22) law to its full extent, and that in the present case the difficulties were so great as to prevent the order being made. Semble, that there may be cases in which such relief can be given. Hirth, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 79 L. T. 391—Wright, J.

Insolvent Trader—Sale of Business to Company for his own Benefit—Winding up of Company—Rights of Trustee in Bankruptcy.—A trader, being in financial difficulties, sold his business to a limited liability company. The subscribers to the memorandum of association of the company were either his relatives or employees. No cash was paid by the company for the business, and no shares were issued to the public, and all the shares that were issued were issued as fully paid up. The trader was appointed the managing director of the company. Some months afterwards a receiving order was made against the trader, and the same day the company passed resolutions for a voluntary winding-up:—Held, that the business and assets of the company formed part of the property of the bankrupt divisible among his creditors, subject to a first charge thereon in favour of the bona fide creditors of the company. Carey, In re; Jeffreys, ex parte, [1895] 2 Q.B. 624; 73 L. Fraudulent Conveyance—Insolvent Trader—Void or Voidable—Sale of Business to Limited Company—Voluntary Winding-up of Company—Bankruptcy of Trader—Relation Back—Right of Trustee in Bankruptcy to Set Aside Conveyance.—A fraudulent conveyance by a debtor to which the title of the trustee in his bankruptcy, founded on another act of bankruptcy, relates back, may, where the fraudulent conveyance was made to a company and not ratified by the company till some days afterwards, be set aside on the application of the trustee, although it was voidable only and not void, and the company has gone into voluntary liquidation before the receiving order was made. Hirth, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 287; [1899] 1 Q.B. 612; 80 L. T. 63; 47 W. R. 243; 6 Manson, 10—C.A.

Fraudulent Transfer of Property by Debtor—Transfer set Aside—Personal Liability of Transferees.—When a sale by a bankrupt to a company is set aside on the ground of fraud, the directors, in the absence of mala fides, are only liable to account for the bankrupt's property remaining in their hands. They cannot be called to personally account for all the proceeds of the business that have passed through their hands. Ely, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 82 L. T. 501—D. Affirmed, 48 W. R. 693—C.A.

Substantial Assignment of Whole Property—Implements of Trade.—R., a retail trader, within three months of the making of a receiving order against him, assigned to V., a trade creditor, in consideration of a past debt of 174l. 6s. 6d. and a money payment of 2l. 13s. 6d. the goodwill of his business, which was of very small value, together with the trade fixtures, three horses, and a cart and van, and also his household furniture. At the date of the assignment R. was the owner, in addition to the property comprised in the assignment, of two life policies which produced 46l. 6s. 3d., and of three leases which were very heavily mortgaged, two of which the trustee disclaimed:—Held, that, as the property of the bankrupt consisted chiefly in the implements of his trade, the assignment which rendered him incapable of carrying on his trade was in substance an assignment of all his property and void as against his trustee. Rayment, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 80 L. T. 807; 6 Manson, 288—Wright, J.

17. FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE.

Onus of Proof.—Where a payment is impeached by a trustee in bankruptcy as constituting a fraudulent preference, the onus is on him not merely to shew insolvency, but also to prove that the payment was made by the bankrupt with a view to prefer the particular creditor. Dictum of Vaughan Williams, J., in Eaton & Co., In re; Viney, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 491; [1897] 2 Q.B. 16), to the contrary dissented from. Laurie, In re; Green, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 431; 46 W. R. 491; 5 Manson, 48—Wright, J.

Breach of Trust—Voluntary Conveyance and Deposit of Shares to Replace Trust Funds.—Where a debtor on the eve of bankruptcy executes a conveyance in trust for certain of his creditors and deposits shares on the same trusts, to make amends for breaches of trust committed against such creditors, such conveyance and deposit being made without pressure from or communication with the creditors benefited thereby, and with the view of shielding the debtor from the consequences of his conduct, there is no fraudulent preference within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 48. Sharp v. Jackson, 68 L. J. Q.B. 866; [1899] A.C. 419; 80 L. T. 841; 6 Manson, 264—H.L. (E.)

— Payment in Good Faith as to Legal Liability.—If a debtor makes a payment, believing in good faith and on reasonable grounds that he is, although in fact he is not, legally bound to make it, such payment is not a fraudulent preference within the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Vautin, In re; Saffery, ex parte (No. 2), 69 L. J. Q.B. 703; [1900] 2 Q.B. 325; 82 L. T. 722; 48 W. R. 652; 7 Manson, 291—Wright, J.

Payment to Creditor to Protect Surety—"Creditor."—To constitute a fraudulent preference under section 48 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the preference must be the preference of a creditor, and the impeached payment must be to the creditor intended to be preferred. Warren, In re; Tranter, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 425; [1900] 2 Q.B. 138; 82 L. T. 502; 48 W. R. 523; 7 Manson, 137—D.

A payment, therefore, by a bankrupt to a creditor of a debt secured by a promissory note on which the creditor is primarily liable, made with a dominant view to relieve the sureties for the debt from their liability thereon, is not a fraudulent preference within the meaning of the section. Pañne, In re, Read, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 71; [1897] 1 Q.B. 122), not followed. Mills, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (5 Morrell, 55), and Goldsmid, In re; Taylor, ex parte (56 L. J. Q.B. 195; 18 Q.B. Trustee and Cestui que Trust—Making Good Breach of Trust.—A trustee who had misappropriated part of the trust funds on the eve of his bankruptcy deposited in the box in which the trust documents were kept certain debentures of his own, accompanied by a memorandum in which he referred to the breach of trust, and stated that he made the deposit as security for whatever might be found due, which he recognized as a personal debt from him. He also referred to certain acts of kindness by the cestuis que trust towards his daughter and himself:—Held, that the dominant motive of the debtor was to repair his breach of duty as a trustee, and not to prefer any particular creditor, and the transaction was not a fraudulent preference within section 48 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Lake, In re; Dyer, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 390; [1901] 1 K.B. 710; 84 L. T. 430; 49 W. R. 291; 8 Manson, 145—C.A.

Per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.—If a payment made by a man on the eve of his bankruptcy to a particular creditor is made in order to repair a breach of trust on the part of the debtor, the presumption is that the payment was made, not with an intention to prefer that creditor, but from a sense of duty. Ib.

Guarantor and Guarantee—Charge in Favour of Guarantor—"Creditor."—A guarantor who has not paid anything under his guarantee has a right to prove in respect of his contingent liability under section 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and therefore is a "creditor" within the meaning of the fraudulent-preference section (section 48). Paine, In re; Read, ex parte (66 L. J. Q.B. 71; [1897] 1 Q.B. 122), followed. Mills, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (5 Morrell, 55), and Warren, In re; Tranter, ex parte (69 L. J. 18. SETTLEMENTS.

Voluntary Settlement—Avoidance.—W., a trader, converted his business into a limited company and became entitled to a number of shares in the company, and also to debentures issued by it. The company went into liquidation in 1898, and F., the son of W., agreed to buy the business from the company, paying 13,000*l.* and undertaking to pay the trade creditors. In order to enable the transaction to be carried out W. withdrew his claim in respect of his debentures, and joined with F. in his agreement to pay the trade creditors. It was admitted that W.'s motive in entering into this arrangement was partly in order to save his own credit as a trader. W. became bankrupt in 1899:—Held, that there had been no "settlement of property" which was void under section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Player, In re; Harvey, ex parte (54 L. J. Q.B. 554; 15 Q.B. D. 682), considered and followed. Plummer, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 936; [1900] 2 Q.B. 790; 83 L. T. 387; 48 W. R. 634; 7 Manson, 367—C.A.

— Gift of Jewellery—"Settlement."—Where a donor within two years of his bankruptcy gave to the donee a valuable pearl necklace and certain furniture, or money to be expended in the purchase of furniture, with an intention that such property should be retained by the donee for an indeterminate time, but without imposing any restriction on the donee's power to alienate it,—Held, that the gift was a settlement within the meaning of section 47, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Player, In re; Harvey, ex parte (No. 2) (54 L. J. Q.B. 554; 15 Q.B. D. 682), and Vansittart, In re; Brown, ex parte (62 L. J. Q.B. 277; [1893] 1 Q.B. 181), followed. Tankard, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 63 L. J. Q.B. 670; [1899] 2 Q.B. 57; 80 L. T. 500; 47 W. R. 624; 6 Manson, 188—Wright, J.

But, quære, whether section 57, sub-section 3, ought not to be held to extend to all conveyances or transfers whether by way of settlement or otherwise. Ib.

Revocable Settlement—Consent of Trustees—Substituted Settlement—Consideration—"Purchaser"—Avoidment.—A, who was then solvent, executed a voluntary settlement revocable with the consent of the trustees. Subsequently, more than two years later, he partially revoked this settlement with the necessary consent. This consent was given on condition that A should settle certain further property for the benefit (inter alia) of the beneficiaries under the former settlement. Within two years of executing this second settlement A became bankrupt:—Held, that the second settlement was not a transaction of purchase for valuable consideration within the meaning of section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and was void accordingly as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Pumfrey, In re; Hillman, ex parte (48 L. J. Bk. 77; 10 Ch. D. 622), as explained in Hance v. Harding (57 L. J. Q.B. 403; 20 Q.B. D. 732), followed. Parry, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 83; [1904] 1 K.B. 129; 89 L. Marriage Settlement—Husband's Covenant to Settle all After-acquired Property except Business Assets—Subsequent Transfer of Property to the Trustees after Act of Bankruptcy.—By his marriage settlement, executed in 1879, the debtor covenanted to settle all after-acquired property, both real and personal, except business assets. In 1891 he was very successful, and purchased a house and furniture for 17,000*l.*, in which he lived with his wife and family. Early in 1903 he was in financial difficulties, and on May 23 the trustees of the settlement served a written notice requiring him to transfer the house and furniture. On May 26 the debtor committed an act of bankruptcy, and on June 10 he conveyed the house and furniture to the trustees by two deeds. On July 15 the receiving order was made on an act of bankruptcy committed after June 10, and on July 23 the debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the words "becoming bankrupt" in section 47 (2) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, must be construed by the light of section 43 of that Act, and mean the commission of an act of bankruptcy on which the receiving order is made, or, if more than one act of bankruptcy has been committed, the first act of bankruptcy proved to have been committed within three months next preceding the date of the presentation of the bankruptcy petition, and that, as the house and furniture had not been actually transferred to the trustees of the marriage settlement before May 26, the transfer on June 10 was void against the trustee in bankruptcy. Reis, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 929; [1904] 1 K.B. 451; 90 L. T. 62; 52 W. R. 302; 11 Manson, 229; 20 T. L. R. 167—Wright, J.

Settlement of Life Policies—No Provision for Keeping up Policies—Payment of Premiums by Bankrupt.—A bankrupt had prior to 1877 insured his life by four policies. By a post-nuptial settlement in April, 1877, he assigned these policies to trustees upon certain trusts for the benefit of his wife and children. The settlement contained no provision for the payment of the premiums on the policies. The bankrupt paid the premiums down to November, 1899. In that month the receiving order in bankruptcy was made against him, and a few days afterwards he died:—Held, that the payments of the premiums did not constitute settlements within the meaning of section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Harrison, In re; Whinney, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 942; [1900] 2 Q.B. 710; 83 L. T. 189; 49 W. R. 2; 7 Manson, 378—C.A.

Discharge of Debts—Covenant in Marriage

Settlement.—The husband is not released from a covenant contained in his marriage settlement to settle all his after-acquired property except business assets by his becoming bankrupt and obtaining his discharge under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 49. Collyer v. Isaacs, (51 L. J. Ch. 14; 19 Ch. D. 342) and Hardy v. Fothergill (58 L. J. Q.B. 44; 13 App. Cas. 351) distinguished. Reis, In re; Clough, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 929; [1904] 2 K.B. 769; 91 L. Separation Deed—Default in Payment of Annuity—Trustees' Right to Retain Trust Property.—Where a husband has become bankrupt, the trustees of a separation deed are entitled, as against the assignee in bankruptcy of the husband, to retain the trust property until the amount payable under the husband's covenant in the deed is satisfied. Weston, In re; *Davies v. 19. PROTECTED TRANSACTIONS.

Sale of Property—Act of Bankruptcy by Vendor before Date of Completion—Right of Purchaser to Refuse to Complete—Recovery of Deposit Paid by Purchaser.—Although a contract for the sale of property, the same to be completed on a certain date, entered into without notice of an available act of bankruptcy by the vendor, is a protected transaction under section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, yet such protection does not extend to a conveyance or payment made in pursuance of such contract with notice of an available act of bankruptcy committed after the contract has been entered into and before the date fixed for completion, and the purchaser is entitled to refuse to complete and to recover back a deposit paid on entering into the contract, because the vendor is not in a position at the latter date to give either a good conveyance or a valid receipt for the purchase-money. Powell v. Marshall, Parkes & Co., 68 L. J. Q.B. 477; [1899] 1 Q.B. 710; 80 L. T. 509; 47 W. R. 419; 6 Manson, 157—C.A.

Assignment to Creditor of Chose in Action in good Faith without Notice of Act of Bankruptcy.—On December 1, 1904, a bankruptcy petition was presented against the debtors, and on December 5 they assigned by deed to a creditor as security for the debt a sum of money due to them. The assignment was made in good faith and the creditor had no notice of the petition. On December 10 the receiving order was made against the debtors:—Held, that the assignment was a protected transaction within section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and was good as against the trustee Transfer of Property for Past Debt—Act of Bankruptcy—Fraudulent Preference.—Where a creditor takes a transfer of substantially the whole of the property of his debtor in payment of a past debt, with notice that there are other creditors, he cannot be said to be acting in good faith. Such a transaction is not protected by section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, but is an act of bankruptcy and a fraudulent preference by the debtor. Jukes, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 71 L. Mortgage—Act of Bankruptcy Before Mortgage.—Where a mortgage is granted on a ship after the mortgagor has committed an act of bankruptcy, in respect of which he is subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, the mortgage is protected by section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act if the mortgagee had no notice of the act of bankruptcy at the date of the mortgage, notwithstanding the fact that the ship remains in the possession of the mortgagor up to the date of the receiving order. *Lyon v. Payment to an Accountant for Preparation of Statement of Accounts—Knowledge of Act of Bankruptcy.—Where an accountant, who had prepared a statement of accounts and sent to the creditors a notice which amounted to an act of bankruptcy, had received payment for his services,—Held, that the transaction was not protected within the exception of Sinclair, In re; Payne, ex parte (15 Q.B. D. 616), and that the money so paid was recoverable by the trustee in the bankruptcy. White, In re; Ward, ex parte, 78 L. T. 25; 5 Manson, 17—Wright, J.

20. CREDITORS.

(1) SECURED CREDITOR.

Security on Property Represented by Debtor to be that of his Wife.—C. in 1898 owed a considerable sum to P. & Co. for goods supplied and for money lent. In August, 1898, P. & Co. agreed to advance to C. a further sum of 2,000l. As security for this advance it was arranged that C.'s wife should mortgage to P. & Co. a property called the Yacht tavern; C. represented to P. & Co. that this was his wife's separate property, and that it had been bought exclusively with her own money. On September 6, 1898, the mortgage was executed, C. joining therein. C. subsequently became bankrupt, and the trustee in his bankruptcy obtained an order from the Court declaring that the Yacht tavern was part of his estate, and that his wife was merely his nominee. P. & Co. having sold the Yacht tavern under the powers in the mortgage, sought to prove against C.'s estate for the full amount of their debt, without giving credit for the amount realised by the sale, arguing that the trustee was estopped from denying that the Yacht tavern was the separate property of the wife:—Held, that there was no such estoppel against the trustee, and that P. & Co. could prove against C.'s estate only for the balance of their debt, after giving credit for the amount realised by the sale of the security. Cooksey, In re; Portal, ex parte, 83 L. T. 435—Wright, J.

Debt Secured by Mortgage—Bills of Exchange Given as Collateral Security—Proof on Covenant to Pay—Scheduling Bills to Proof.]—Where a creditor's debt is secured by a mortgage on the debtor's property, and as collateral security bills of exchange are given, the creditor seeking to prove in the bankruptcy of the debtor on the covenant for payment in the mortgage-deed must specify in his proof particulars of the bills held by him as being "securities" within Form 72 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, 1890. Ruthen, In re; Kidd, ex parte, 5 Manson, 227—Wright, J.

Principal and Surety—Guarantee of Interest—Covenant to Pay Premiums on Policy of Insurance.]—The debtor borrowed 500*l.*, and covenanted jointly and severally with a third party to pay interest upon the loan so long as any part of the principal sum should remain due, and also to keep up the premiums upon a policy assigned by him to the lender as security. Upon the bankruptcy of the debtor the lender put in a proof assessing the value of his security at 100*l.*, and proving for the balance of the principal sum advanced. The third party also claimed to prove on the estate by way of indemnity for his liability for interest and premiums to the lender:—Held, that the principal sum ceased to be due upon the bankruptcy of the borrower, and that the security, having been valued, must be deemed to have been realised; consequently the third party was under no liability to the lender, and his proof must be rejected. Moss, In re; Hallett, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 764; [1905] 2 K.B. 307; 92 L. T. 777; 53 W. R. 558; 12 Manson, 227—D.

Valuation of Security—Proof for Balance of the Debt—Increase in Value of Security—Amendment of Valuation.]—A debtor against whom a receiving order had been made submitted a scheme for payment to his unsecured creditors of 10*s.* in the pound. The scheme was accepted. Subsequently a secured creditor valued his security at half his debt and filed his proof for the other half. The unsecured liability of the debtor was thus so much increased that the scheme had to be abandoned, the debtor was made bankrupt, and a dividend of only 1*s.* in the pound was ever paid. The security having afterwards increased in value, the secured creditor applied under rule 13 in Schedule 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to amend his proof and re-value his security at the full amount:—Held, that he was entitled to do so. Dictum of VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J., in Newton, In re; National Provincial Bank of England, ex parte (65 L. J. Q.B. 686; [1896] 2 Q.B. 403), considered. Fanshawe, In re; Le Marchant, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 153; [1905] 1 K.B. 170; 92 L. T. 32; 53 W. R. 222; 12 Manson, 7—Bigham, J.

— Mistaken Estimate—Lien—Amendment of Proof.]—The debtor was a registered holder of fully and partly paid-up shares in the applicant company. At the time of proof the company had a first and permanent lien on all shares not fully paid up for all moneys due to (including calls made, even though the time appointed for their payment might not have arrived) and liabilities subsisting with the company from or on the part of any registered holder. No value was set upon this lien in the proof. The articles of association were subsequently altered so as to give a lien on the fully paid-up as well as on the partly paid-up shares. The company sought to amend the proof by a fresh valuation of the security:—Held, that as the company must, at the date when the original proof was carried in, have contemplated the possibility that the articles might be altered, they could not be said to have omitted to value the security from inadvertence. Rowe, In re; West Coast Gold Fields, Lim., ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 852; [1904] 2 K.B. 489; 91 L. T. 101; 52 W. R. 608; 11 Manson, 272—Bigham, J.

— Valuation of Security in Petition—Right of Trustee to Redeem at Assessed Value—Contract Induced by Fraud—Voidable Contract—Election by Vendor to Affirm.]—There is nothing in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, or in the rules thereunder, which gives a trustee in bankruptcy a right to redeem a security at the value assessed by the petitioning creditor in his petition. His right is confined to cases where a creditor has proved either under Schedule I. for the purpose of voting, or under Schedule II. for the purpose of ranking for dividend. Vautin, In re; Saffery, ex parte (No. 1), 68 L. J. Q.B. 971; [1899] 2 Q.B. 549; 48 W. R. 96; 6 Manson, 391—Wright, J.

A creditor presented a petition for a receiving order against a debtor in respect of a dishonoured cheque given for shares, which he obtained from the creditor on a fraudulent representation that the cheque would be duly met. The creditor alleged in his petition that he had a security or lien on the shares, which he valued at 3,200*l.* The order was made, and the debtor was afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt. The debtor was subsequently arrested and convicted on the charge of obtaining valuable securities under false pretences, and an order was made by the Court under section 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861, for the restitution of the share certificates to the creditor as owner. The trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor claimed to be entitled to redeem the shares at the value put upon them by the creditor in his petition:—Held—first, that the mistake of the creditor in treating the shares in his petition as a security for his debt did not deprive him of his right to them, or give the trustee on that ground alone any claim to redeem them; and secondly, that there was nothing in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, or the rules thereunder, which entitled the trustee to redeem the shares at the value placed upon them by the creditor in his petition. Taylor, Ex parte; Lacey, in re (13 Q.B.D. 128), distinguished. Id.

— Omission to Value Security—Inadvertence.]—A secured creditor who states in his proof in bankruptcy that his security is worthless does not omit to value his security within the meaning of rule 10 of the First Schedule to the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, which provides that, for the purpose of voting, a secured creditor shall, unless he surrenders his security, state in his proof the particulars of his security and the value at which he assesses it, and shall be entitled to vote only in respect of the balance, if any, due to him after deducting the value of his security, and that if he votes in respect of his whole debt he shall be deemed to have surrendered his security, unless the Court on application is satisfied that "the omission to value the security has arisen from inadvertence" (COLLINS, L.J., doubting). Piers, In re; Piers, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 519; [1898] 1 Q.B. 627; 78 L. T. 314; 46 W. R. 475; 5 Manson, 97—C.A.

A secured creditor who, in consequence of erroneous information that his security is worthless, deliberately omits to value his security in his proof in bankruptcy, does not omit to value his security by "inadvertence" within the meaning of the rule. Id.

(a) Preferential.

"Clerk or servant"—Commission Payable to Commercial Traveller.]—A commercial traveller was employed at a salary of 2*l.* per week and a commission by way of salary of 3½ per cent. upon all business done by him. At the date of his employer's bankruptcy the 2*l.* per week had been paid to him in full, but a sum of about 25*l.* was due for commission earned within the preceding four months:—Held, that the commission was part of the "salary" payable in respect of his services within section 1, sub-section 1 (b) of the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, and must be paid in priority to the ordinary debts. Klein, In re; Goodwin, ex parte, 22 T. L. R. 664—Bigham, J.

—Secretary of Company—Preferential Payments.]—Scumble, the secretary of a company may be a "clerk or servant" within the meaning of section 1 of the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, and section 2 of the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Amendment Act, 1897. But a secretary of a company who is at the same time the registrar of another company, devoting the greater part of his time to such second company, and employing and paying a clerk to do the greater part of the clerical work of the first company, is not entitled to the priority given by the Acts of 1888 and 1897 in respect of unpaid salary, inasmuch as those Acts are intended to apply to the case of a "clerk or servant" who personally renders services to a bankrupt or company. Cairney v. Back, 75 L. J. K.B. 1014; [1906] 2 K.B. 746; 96 L. T. 111; 14 Manson, 58; 22 T. L. R. 776—Walton, J.

"Servant"—"Wages or salary"—Opera Singer.]—An artist engaged to sing during an opera season at a certain sum for each performance held, upon the terms of the contract as a whole, to be a "servant," and his remuneration to be "wages or salary in respect of services rendered," within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 1 (b) of the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, so as to entitle him to priority of payment up to 50*l.* upon the winding-up of the company by whom he was engaged. Winter

Workmen's Wages—Debentures.]—The Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Amendment Act, 1897, which gives workmen's wages and other debts of a company priority over debenture-holders with a floating charge on whose behalf a receiver has been appointed, is not retrospective in its operation, and does not therefore apply in a case where the receiver has been appointed before July 15, 1897, the date of the passing of the Act. Waverley Typewriter, Lim., In re; *D'Esterre v. Landlord—Rent—Sale by Sheriff—Bankruptcy of Debtor—Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy to Proceeds of Sale.]—Under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding 20*l.*, the sheriff having notice of an available act of bankruptcy sold the goods, and within fourteen days received notice of a bankruptcy petition. The sheriff afterwards received notice of the landlord's claim for a quarter's rent. A receiving order was made, and the debtor adjudicated bankrupt. The sheriff then paid the landlord his quarter's rent out of the proceeds of the execution, and paid the balance to the trustee:—Held, that the sheriff was right in deducting the amount of the landlord's rent out of the proceeds of the execution, and was only accountable to the trustee for the balance. Mackenzie, In re; Hertfordshire (Sheriff), ex parte, 68 L. (i.) Proof.

"Provable debt"—Debt Incurred after Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Incapacity of Creditor to Prove.]—The defendant applied to the plaintiff, a solicitor, to file his petition in bankruptcy, and in so doing committed an act of bankruptcy under section 4, sub-section 1 (b) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. The plaintiff filed the petition, and subsequently a receiving order was made against the defendant. Costs were incurred in the bankruptcy proceedings between the date of the act of bankruptcy and the making of the receiving order. The plaintiff received from the estate, under rule 125 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, 1890, part of the costs. In an action against the defendant to recover the balance,—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, upon the ground that the costs were a "provable debt" within section 37, sub-section 3 of the Act of 1883, although the plaintiff could not prove for them in the bankruptcy under sub-section 2, because at the time when they were incurred he had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the defendant. Buckwell v. Norman, 67 L. J. Q.B. 435; [1898] 1 Q.B. 622; 78 L. T. 248; 46 W. R. 339; 5 Manson, 64—C.A.

Assignment of Debts after Proof—Dividend—Claim to Payment by Assignee.]—A trustee in bankruptcy cannot under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and rules, recognise the title of an assignee of a proof to a dividend declared in bankruptcy. Frost, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 68 L. Semble, the assignee's remedy is to prove, and get his proof substituted for that of the original creditor, his assignor. Ib.

— Substitution of Proof by Assignee of Proving Creditor.]—The assignee of a proof who desires to take the benefit thereof, after satisfying the official receiver or trustee of the validity of the assignment, should apply to the Court to give leave to the official receiver to place a proof by him (the assignee) on the file in place of the proof of the assignor. Iliff, In re, 51 W. R. 80—D.

Bill of Exchange—Valuation of Securities—Consolidation of Debts.]—A holder of two bills of exchange, proving in the bankruptcy of the last endorser for the aggregate sum of the two amounts secured by the bills, cannot, where the bills are drawn and accepted by different persons, retain a surplus of over 20s. in the pound obtained by proving against the estates of the drawer, acceptor, prior indorsers, and the last indorser of the one bill, and attribute it to a deficiency on the other bill; but the bills for the purposes of proof must be treated as constituting distinct transactions, and the surplus on the one bill must be brought into account without regard to the deficiency on the other bill. Morris, In re; James v. London and County Banking Co., 68 L. J. Ch. 299; [1899] 1 Ch. 485; 80 L. T. 37; 47 W. R. 324; 6 Manson, 178—C.A.

Inasmuch as drawers, acceptors, and prior indorsers are liable to indemnify the subsequent indorser, the dividends paid by their estates are paid out of the assets of the subsequent indorser, and his estate is therefore entitled to have the surplus which has been paid on one of the bills (not exceeding the amount of such surplus paid by his estate) paid to it, and the overpaid bill handed over to his trustee. Ib.

Company—Proof by—Further Dividends—Right of Crown—Bona Vacantia.]—The real and personal chattels of a dissolved corporation aggregate devolve upon the Crown as bona vacantia. Higginson, In re; Att.-Gen., ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 198; [1899] 1 Q.B. 325; 79 L. T. 673; 47 W. R. 285; 5 Manson, 289—D.

A limited company proved in the bankruptcy of one of its debtors and received from time to time dividends in respect of its proof. Some years, however, before a final dividend was declared, the company was wound up and dissolved by order of Court:—Held, that the Crown was entitled to the final dividend to which the company would have been entitled, if in existence, as bona vacantia. Ib.

Contract—Breach of—Damages in Tort.]—S. stored goods with H. under a verbal contract, in breach of which H. sold the goods. S. brought an action against H., and in the statement of claim set out the contract and its breach, but made no claim for damages for breach of contract, but only for detinue and conversion. Before judgment a receiving order was made against H., of which S. had notice. WRIGHT, J., held that S., having elected to sue in tort rather than contract, must abide by the result, and that the trustee in H.'s bankruptcy had rightly rejected S.'s proof founded on that judgment debt and costs:—Held, that on S. undertaking to abandon the judgment and stay all further proceedings under it, she should be permitted to carry in a proof in the bankruptcy for damages for breach of contract. Hopkins, In re; De Stedingk, ex parte, 86 L. T. 676—C.A.

Damages Recovered in Divorce Suit—Bankruptcy of Co-respondent.]—Damages obtained by a petitioner in a suit in the Divorce Court against the co-respondent which are subject to any order of the Court appropriating them to any particular purpose are a debt or liability which is provable in the bankruptcy of the co-respondent. O'Gorman, In re; Bale, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 650; [1899] 2 Q.B. 62; 80 L. T. 501; 47 W. R. 543; 6 Manson, 204—Wright, J.

Costs—Contentious Business—Draft Bills of Costs Submitted—Account Stated—Mortgage to Secure Agreed Balance—Bankruptcy of Client—Trustee's Right to go behind Stated Account and Mortgage and Require Details.]—Where a solicitor from time to time delivers to a client draft bills of costs in respect of contentious business and a cash account, which are agreed by the client, and he executes a mortgage of his property in favour of the solicitor, and thereby covenants to pay the solicitor the amount due on the account stated, and then becomes bankrupt, and the solicitor lodges a proof for the amount agreed as being due to him, the trustee in bankruptcy's right and duty before admitting the proof is to go behind the account stated and the covenant, and to require satisfactory evidence that the debt on which the proof is founded was a real debt; and the estoppel to which the bankrupt may have subjected himself will not prevail against such trustee. Van Laun, In re; Chatterton, ex parte (No. 1), 76 L. J. K.B. 644; [1907] 2 K.B. 23; 97 L. T. 69; 14 Manson, 91; 23 T. L. R. 384—C.A.

Copyright—Sale—Royalties—Bankruptcy of Publisher—Claim by Author for Royalties—Breach of Contract.]—An author sold the absolute copyright in a book to a publisher in consideration of the payment of certain royalties. The publisher became bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy carried on the business for some time. The author claimed to be paid in full his proportion of the royalties received by the trustee in bankruptcy in respect of sales of the book since the bankruptcy:—Held, that the author was only entitled to prove for damages for breach of contract in not paying the royalties, and could not claim for payment of the royalties in full. Richards, In re; Deeping, ex parte, 76 L. Guarantee of Interest on Debenture in Company—Dissolution of Company—Operation of Law—Liability of Guarantor—Proof for Future Interest.]—A guarantor, who has agreed to guarantee to the holder of a debenture in a company the regular payment of the interest thereon until the whole sum secured by the debenture has been repaid, is not released from his obligation by the fact that the principal debt has come to an end by operation of law; and the debenture-holder will be entitled to prove in the bankruptcy of the guarantor for the estimated value of the amount guaranteed. FitzGeorge, In re; Robson, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 822; [1905] 1 K.B. 462; 92 L. T. 206; 53 W. R. 384; 12 Manson, 14—Bigham, J.

Gaming Debt—Bills—New Consideration.]—The debtor, being sued for a gambling debt of 800*l.*, successfully pleaded the Gaming Act, 1892. Thereupon the creditor wrote to the committee of the debtor's club informing them of the fact with the result that the debtor was not re-elected. The debtor then agreed to pay the creditor 100*l.* in cash, and to give bills for 400*l.* in consideration of the creditor withdrawing his letter. Upon the debtor becoming bankrupt, the creditor proved for the amount of the bills then due, but the proof was rejected by the trustee:—Held, that the bills were given not for the gaming debt, but for a wholly new consideration, which was not illegal, and that therefore the proof was wrongly rejected. Browne, In re; Martingell, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 446; [1904] 2 K.B. 133; 90 L. T. 291; 52 W. R. 384; 11 Manson, 148; 20 T. L. R. 289—Buckley, J.

Legacy—Direction Giving Legatee Power to Retain Debt Due to Testator in or Towards Satisfaction of Legacy—Specific Legacy—Abatement.]—The testator bequeathed to his son 10,000*l.*, and directed that as regards any money due to him at his decease from that legatee the same should (but not to an amount exceeding 10,000*l.*) be set off and retained in or towards satisfaction of the legacy. The legatee was indebted to the testator's estate, and the executors obtained judgment against him for 26,398*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, after giving credit for the amount of the legacy. The legatee became bankrupt, and the testator's estate proved insufficient to pay the legacies in full. The executors proved in the bankruptcy for 5,356*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.*, the difference between the amount of the legacy of 10,000*l.*, with which the bankrupt had been credited, and 4,643*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.*, the proportion due on abatement:—Held, that the legacy was not specific, and was subject to abatement, and that the proof must be admitted. Richardson, In re; Thompson, ex parte, 86 L. T. 25—Wright, J.

Loan to Trader—Sharing Profits—Postponement of Lender—Contract not in Writing.]—Section 3 of the Partnership Act, 1890, which provides that where money is advanced by way of loan to a person engaged or about to engage in business, on a contract that the lender shall receive a share of the profits, the lender, in the event of the borrower being adjudged bankrupt, shall not recover anything in respect of the loan until the claims of the other creditors of the borrower have been satisfied, is not confined to contracts in writing. Fort, In re; Schofield, ex parte, 66 L. J. Q.B. 824; [1897] 2 Q.B. 495; 77 L. T. 274; 46 W. R. 147; 4 Manson, 234—C.A.

Married Woman—Surety for Husband—Right of Exoneration—Money Advanced for Husband's Business—Onus of Proof.]—A claim by a wife against her husband's estate in bankruptcy for exoneration in respect of a mortgage of her property for his benefit is not affected by the provision in section 3 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, as to the postponement of the wife's claim to that of other creditors in the case of money advanced to the husband for the purpose of his trade or business. Cronmire, In re; Cronmire, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 310; [1901] 1 K.B. 480; 84 L. T. 342; 8 Manson, 140—C.A.

It will not be assumed in the absence of proof to the contrary that an advance by a wife to her husband was for the purpose of his business. Ib.

Per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.—CAVE, J., in Genese, In re; District Bank of London, ex parte (55 L. J. Q.B. 118; 16 Q.B. D. 700), did not intend to decide that according to the true construction of section 3 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, it was intended to throw on the wife in all cases the burthen of proving that money lent by her to the husband was not lent for the purposes of his trade or business. Ib.

—Loan by Debtor's Wife for Purpose Unconnected with his Trade or Business.]—Section 3 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882—which provides that money lent by a wife to her husband "for the purpose of any trade or business carried on by him, or otherwise," shall be treated as assets of the husband's estate in case of his bankruptcy, subject to the wife's claim to a dividend after the claims of other creditors for valuable consideration have been satisfied—does not apply to a loan by a wife to her husband for a purpose unconnected with his trade or business, and consequently a wife is entitled to prove against her husband's estate for such a loan pari passu with other creditors of her husband. Tidswell, In re; Tidswell, ex parte (56 L. J. Q.B. 548), approved. Clark, In re; Schulze, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 759; [1893] 2 Q.B. 330; 78 L. T. 735; 46 W. R. 678; 5 Manson, 201—C.A.

Money-lender—Proof of Debt by—Withdrawal of Proof—Jurisdiction of Bankruptcy Court to grant Relief under Money-lenders Act, 1900.]—A bankrupt was indebted to a money-lender for money lent, the money-lender holding a security for the debt. The creditor lodged a proof in the bankruptcy for the debt stating the amount at which he valued the security. The proof was not made use of in voting at any meeting of creditors. The trustee having required the creditor to give up the security under Schedule I. rule 12 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, he gave notice of withdrawal of the proof and of intention to correct the valuation by a new proof. The trustee then moved the Bankruptcy Court for an order for an account and for relief under the Money-lenders Act, 1900:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court to exercise the powers of the Money-lenders Act arises only under section 1, sub-section 3 of that Act, and is confined to cases in which there is an application before the Court relating to the admission or amount of a proof by a money-lender; that, as the proof had not been used either for purposes of voting or of claiming a dividend, the creditor was at liberty to withdraw it without the consent either of the trustee or of the Court; and that, as there was consequently no proof by the money-lender before the Court, it had no jurisdiction to entertain the motion. Attree, In re; Ward, ex parte, [1907] 2 K.B. 868; 23 T. Order and Disposition—Debtor's Petition—Goods Left with Bankrupt—Adjudged Property of Trustee by Order of Court—Proof by True Owner for Damages for Breach of Bailment.—Where a debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt on his own petition, and certain goods which had been left with him to be sold, or returned if not sold, were by order of the Court adjudged to be goods in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner, and to pass to the trustee as property divisible amongst the creditors under section 44, subsection 2 (iii.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the owner was allowed to prove in the bankruptcy for the damage he had sustained by reason of his goods not having been returned to him according to the terms of the bailment. Ewall v. Partridge (8 Term Rep. 308) and Edmunds v. Wallingford (54 L. J. Q.B. 305; 14 Q.B. D. 811) applied. Button, In re; Haviside, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 833; [1907] 2 K.B. 180; 97 L. The presentation by the bankrupt of his own petition was not an abuse of the process of the Court or in any way wrongful. Id.

Partnership—Loan to on Terms of Sharing Profits—Subsequent Advances without Express Stipulation as to Rate of Interest—Dissolution of Partnership—Subsequent Agreement with Continuing Partner Continuing Loan at Fixed Rate of Interest—Postponement.—In 1893 A entered into an agreement with a partnership firm consisting of B and C, under which she advanced to the firm a sum of 1,600*l.* on terms of sharing profits. A subsequently made further advances without express stipulations as to rate of interest. In June, 1895, the partnership was dissolved by deed to which A was a party, and it was thereby agreed that B should continue the business, and be solely responsible for A's advances. In August, 1895, an agreement was entered into between A and B under which fresh advances were made by A to B, and it was thereby agreed that except as regarded the 1,600*l.* all A's advances should bear a fixed rate of interest. B afterwards became bankrupt and A sought to prove for all her advances:—Held, that except as to advances made after August, 1895, A was postponed under section 3 of the Partnership Act, 1890, to the other creditors of the bankrupt. Mason, In re; Bing, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 466; [1899] 1 Q.B. 810; 80 L. T. 92; 47 W. R. 270; 6 Manson, 169—Wright, J.

—Sale of Goodwill—Payment by Annuity.—S. sold to G. the trade name and goodwill of the business carried on by her late husband, whose sole executor and legatee she was. Part of the consideration for the sale was the payment to her of an annuity of 2,650*l.*, which was not expressed to be payable out of the profits of the business. In G.'s bankruptcy S. put in a proof for 29,000*l.*, the capitalised value of the annuity:—Held, that the annuity was not a share of the profits of the business within the meaning of section 3 of the Partnership Act, 1890, and that the proof was not postponed until the claims of the other creditors should have been paid in full. Gieve, In re; Shaw, ex parte, 80 L. Shares in Company—Agreement to take—Disclaimer—Measure of Damages—Company in Liquidation.—Where a person who has agreed to take shares in a company becomes bankrupt, and his trustee in bankruptcy disclaims the agreement, the company, or its liquidator, if the company is in liquidation, is not entitled to prove in the bankruptcy for anything more than damages; and such damages are not to be assessed on the basis of the agreement being in existence and specifically enforceable, the disclaimer having operated to determine the agreement. Hooley, In re; United Oranance and Engineering Co., ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 993; [1899] 2 Q.B. 579—Wright, J.

Stock Exchange Transactions—Bankruptcy of Broker—Debt for Differences Due to Customer—Collection of Assets by Official Assignee of Stock Exchange—Surplus after Payment of Stock Exchange Creditors—Claim by Trustee in Bankruptcy.—A sum of money due by a broker to his customer in respect of ascertained differences on speculative Stock Exchange transactions is not the specific money of the customer or in any way impressed with a special trust or lien in his favour, but is merely a book-debt of the broker which, upon the bankruptcy of the broker, passes to his trustee in bankruptcy as part of his general assets. The only remedy, therefore, of the customer is to prove in the bankruptcy of the broker for the amount. King v. Hutton, 68 L. J. Q.B. 975; [1899] 2 Q.B. 555; 48 W. R. 95—Phillimore, J.

—Default of Broker—Liquidation by Official Assignee of Stock Exchange—Receipt of Dividend by Creditor—Right of Creditor to Present Petition for Balance of Debt.—Where the assets of a defaulting member of the Stock Exchange are distributed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, a member being a creditor who has received a dividend in such distribution is not thereby precluded from suing the defaulter for the balance of his debt or from presenting a petition in bankruptcy against him in respect of such balance. Mendelssohn v. Ratcliff, 73 L. J. K.B. 1027; [1904] A.C. 456; 91 L. T. 204; 20 T. L. R. 670—H.L. (E.)

—Bankruptcy of Broker—Debt for Differences Due to Customer—Collection of Assets by Official Assignee of Stock Exchange—Surplus after Payment of Stock Exchange Creditors—Claim by Trustee in Bankruptcy.—A stockbroker opened a speculative account in certain shares with the defendant. He bought, for the defendant, certain of these stocks from jobbers on the Stock Exchange, and sold them again on behalf of the defendant to certain other jobbers. The account between the stockbroker and the defendant shewed a balance of profit in favour of the defendant in respect of these transactions. The stockbroker, having closed the contracts by passing on the ticket of the stocks which he had sold to the jobbers, absconded owing large sums to outside creditors, and was then officially declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange. The official assignee of the Stock Exchange under the rules of the Stock Exchange closed all the defaulting stockbroker's contracts which were then open, and having collected a certain sum due to the stockbroker from various jobbers, discharged all Stock Exchange liabilities, and then had a surplus available for distribution among outside creditors. This surplus included the balance of the differences which would have been payable to the defendant if the stockbroker had not become insolvent and been adjudicated a bankrupt. The plaintiff, who was the trustee in bankruptcy, claimed the balance as part of the stockbroker's general assets, whilst the defendant claimed it on the ground that it never belonged to the stockbroker at all, but was impressed with a trust in his (the defendant's) favour:—Held, that the relation between the stockbroker and the defendant was simply that of debtor and creditor, so that the balance was a mere general debt due from the stockbroker to the defendant, for which the defendant must prove in the bankruptcy in the ordinary way. King v. Hutton, 69 L. J. Q.B. 786; [1900] 2 Q.B. 504; 83 L. T. 68; 7 Manson, 393—C.A. Affirming, 48 W. R. 95—Phillimore, J.

— Contracts for Differences—Bona fide Purchase of Stock with Profits of Gaming Transactions—Non-delivery—Damages.—Gaming contracts for differences on sales and purchases of stocks entered into between the respondent and the debtor having resulted in a profit to the respondent, the respondent directed the debtor to use the profit for a bona fide purchase of stock, and the debtor thereupon sent a contract note to the respondent to the effect that he had sold the stock to him and debited him with the price of the stock, stamp, and fees. The debtor died before the stock was delivered, and the respondent claimed to prove against his estate for damages for the non-delivery of the stock:—Held, that the transaction was not equivalent to a payment by the debtor to the respondent of the price of the stock, and that the respondent was precluded by the Gaming Act, 1845, s. 18, from so proving. Cronmire, In re; Waud, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 620; [1898] 2 Q.B. 383; 78 L. T. 483; 46 W. R. 679; 5 Manson, 30—C.A. And see GAMING.

— Deposit of Money as "Cover"—Recovery of Deposit.—The respondent had deposited with the debtor money as cover to secure him against loss upon the gaming transactions. The money was never required or appropriated for that purpose, and the events in respect of which it was deposited had resulted in favour of the respondent:—Held, that the respondent was entitled to prove for it against the estate of the debtor. Ib.

Trustee and Cestui que Trust—Unauthorised Investment—Bankruptcy of Trustee—Dealing by Cestui que Trust with Investment—Valuing Security—Separate and Joint Estates—Damages.—Prior to the bankruptcy of Lake, who was a trustee of a settlement and also surviving partner of a firm of Lake & Lake, who were solicitors to the trust, a sum of 5,500*l.*, part of the trust funds, had been invested by him or his firm on a mortgage which was not authorised by the trust. New trustees of the settlement were appointed, who, without any notice to the trustee in bankruptcy, compromised an action brought by the mortgagor to set aside the mortgage. They then claimed to prove in the bankruptcy against both the separate estate of Lake and the joint estate of the firm, without valuing and giving credit for the benefit acquired under the compromise:—Held, on the equitable principle that a trustee who has made an unauthorised investment is entitled to an opportunity of taking to it on replacing the fund, that the trustees of the settlement, by making the compromise without the concurrence of the trustee in bankruptcy, were disentitled to prove in the present form, but, semble, could put in fresh proofs for damages for loss to the trust estate by the improper investment. Salmon, In re; Priest v. Uppleby (42 Ch. D. 351), applied. Lake, In re; Howe, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 213; [1903] 1 K.B. 439; 88 L. T. 31; 51 W. R. 496—Wright, J.

Voluntary Payment made to Creditor by Stranger.—A voluntary payment by a stranger to a creditor in respect of a loss occasioned by the debtor is not a payment for which the creditor is bound to give credit in his proof. Roue, In re; Derenburg, ex parte, 73 L. Withdrawal—Substitution of Fresh Proof.—A creditor may withdraw his proof at any time before the trustee in bankruptcy has notified that he has admitted or rejected it. Roue, In re; Derenburg, ex parte, 73 L. (ii.) Double Proof.

Bills of Exchange—Valuation—Consolidation of Debts.—A holder of two bills of exchange proving in the bankruptcy of the last indorser for the aggregate sum of the two amounts secured by the bills cannot retain a surplus of over 20*s.* in the pound, obtained by proving against the estates of prior indorsers of the one bill, and attribute it to a deficiency on the other bill, but both bills for the purposes of proof must be treated as constituting distinct transactions, and the surplus on the one bill must be brought into account without regard to the deficiency on the other bill. Morris, In re; James v. London and County Banking Co., 67 L. J. Ch. 534; [1898] 2 Ch. 413; 46 W. R. 627; 5 Manson, 216—Romer, J.

(iii.) Interest.

Debt Carrying Interest above 5 per cent.—Scheme of Arrangement.—Section 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, which provides that where a debt "has been proved" upon a debtor's estate, and such debt includes interest, such interest shall, for the purposes of dividend, be calculated at a rate not exceeding 5 per centum per annum, without prejudice to the right of a creditor to receive out of the estate any higher rate of interest to which he may be entitled after all the debts have been paid in full, is not retrospective in its operation and does not therefore apply to the case of a debt under a scheme of arrangement which was sanctioned by the Court before the passing of the Act. Athlumney (Lord), In re; Wilson ex parte, 67 L. (iv.) Set-off.

Mutual Dealings—Administration Order—Debt becoming Payable after Death of Debtor.]

—Where there have been mutual dealings between a creditor and a debtor, the creditor is entitled as against the trustee in the administration of the insolvent debtor's estate, under section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to set off against his indebtedness a debt due to him from the insolvent, although it has only ripened into a debt after the insolvent's death. Watkins v. Lindsay, 67 L. J. Q.B. 362; 5 Manson, 25—Wright, J.

The doctrine established in the case of ordinary administrations by Rees v. Watts (25 L. J. Ex. 30; 11 Ex. 410), Newell v. National Provincial Bank of England (45 L. J. C.P. 235; 1 C.P. D. 496), and Gregson, In re; Christison v. Bolam (57 L. J. Ch. 221; 36 Ch. D. 223), does not apply in the case of an administration in bankruptcy. Ib.

— Brewer's Lease—Right to Set Off.]—A firm of brewers let a public-house on lease, one of the terms of which was that all debts due to the landlords should be deducted out of the valuation to be paid by any incoming tenant, and the landlords were by the lease obliged to pay the amount of the valuation at the determination of the tenancy in default of finding another tenant able and willing to do so. At the date of the act of bankruptcy the tenant was indebted to the landlords to an amount of about 500*l.*, and the amount of the valuation as subsequently ascertained was about the same sum:—Held, that the landlords were entitled to set off the amount owing by the tenant against the sum due from the valuation. Rushforth, In re; Holmes, ex parte, 95 L. — Time for Ascertaining.]—Under section 38 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the date of the receiving order is the date to be looked at for the purpose of ascertaining what mutual debts, credits, and dealings were existing between the bankrupt and other persons. Daintrey, In re; Mant and Mant, ex parte, 69 L. (v.) Expunging Proof.

Application to Expunge—Assessment to Income Tax—Power of Court to Reconsider.]—Where a debtor has been assessed to income tax in respect of profits which he alleges he has not earned, but has not appealed against such assessment, it is not competent to the Court at his instance in his subsequent bankruptcy to go behind the assessment as in the case of a judgment, but the Court will treat the assessment as conclusive. Calvert, In re; Calvert, ex parte (No. 3), 68 L. Scheme—Additional Proofs—Objection by Debtor—Motion to Expunge.]—Where, after a scheme has been accepted, additional proofs are made to which the debtor objects and the official receiver refuses either to reject or admit them, the debtor can by leave apply by motion against the creditors to expunge the proofs. Calvert, In re; Calvert, ex parte (No. 1), 80 L. T. 268; 6 Manson, 209—Wright, J.

Partly Secured Debt—Subsequent Appreciation of Security—Motion for Conditional Abandonment of Proof—Liberty to Re-introduce Proof.]—Although a creditor in bankruptcy, who has tendered a proof of his debt, is entitled to withdraw his proof before it has been adjudicated upon, finally and unconditionally, on the footing, as it were, that no such debt has ever existed—yet it is in the discretion of the Court to refuse him permission to withdraw it conditionally, or with the reservation that he is to be at liberty to re-introduce it should occasion arise at some subsequent time. Clark, In re; Buenos Ayres and Pacific Railway, ex parte, 70 L. J. K.B. 259; [1901] 1 K.B. 655; 84 L. T. 208; 49 W. R. 528; 8 Manson, 186—Wright, J.

Service of Notice of Motion out of the Jurisdiction.]—Where leave was given a debtor to serve notices of motion to expunge their proofs on creditors some of whom were out of the jurisdiction, it was directed that the Scotch creditors should be served with the notices of motion by registered post, and that the notices of motion on the creditors in Western Australia should be served on the solicitors in London who had lodged their proofs. Calvert, In re; Calvert, ex parte (No. 2), 80 L. T. 499; 6 Manson, 216—Wright, J.

21. OFFENCES BY DEBTOR.

Failure by Debtor to Discover Property to Trustee—Disclosure by Debtor at Private Meeting of Creditors—Admissibility of Evidence.]—Evidence that a debtor at a private meeting of his creditors held shortly before his bankruptcy disclosed all his property is admissible for the purpose of negating any intent to defraud, upon an indictment under section 11, subsections 1, 2, 4, and 6 of the Debtors Act, 1869, charging him with not fully and truly discovering to the trustee in bankruptcy all his property. Rex v. Wiseman, 71 L. J. K.B. 128; 85 L. T. 791; 50 W. R. 333; 66 J. P. 40; 9 Manson, 12; 20 Cox C.C. 144—C.C.R.

Fraudulent Debtor—Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Quitting England with Property Divisible among Creditors—“His property.”—A debtor executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors whereby he conveyed and assigned all his property, including sums of money, to a trustee upon trust to sell, and out of the money coming to his hands by the ways and means aforesaid to pay himself the cost of carrying the deed into effect, and then to distribute the same among the creditors of the debtor as therein provided. The deed was executed by the debtor and by the trustee, but was not executed by or communicated to any of the creditors. Except a sum of 161*l.*, which the debtor had in his possession at the date of the deed and which he retained, the trustee took possession of the debtor's effects and carried on his business. Soon afterwards the debtor quitted England, taking with him 120*l.*, part of the sum of 161*l.* Within four months afterwards he was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the 120*l.* was part of “his property” which ought by law to be divided amongst his creditors within the meaning of section 12 of the Debtors Act, 1869, and that he was rightly convicted of a felony under that section. Reg. v. Creese (43 L. J. M.C. 51; L. R. 2 C.C.R. 105) distinguished. Rev. v. Humphris, 73 L. J. K.B. 464; [1904] 2 K.B. 89; 90 L. T. 555; 52 W. R. 591; 68 J. P. 325; 11 Manson, 139; 20 Cox C.C. 620; 20 T. L. R. 425—C.C.R.

Undischarged Bankrupt—Obtaining Credit—Maximum Punishment.—By section 31 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, where an undischarged bankrupt obtains credit to the extent of 20*l.* or upwards from any person without informing such person that he is an undischarged bankrupt, “he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and may be dealt with and punished as if he had been guilty of a misdemeanour under the Debtors Act 1869” . . . :—Held, that the section refers to the class of misdemeanours mentioned in section 13 of the Act of 1869, and not to the class enumerated in section 11, and that therefore the maximum punishment which can be inflicted upon a prisoner convicted under section 31 is imprisonment for one year with hard labour. Rev. v. Turner, 73 L. J. K.B. 46; [1904] 1 K.B. 181; 89 L. T. 676; 52 W. R. 214; 68 J. P. 15; 20 Cox C.C. 590; 20 T. L. R. 67—C.C.R.

Purchase of Goods on Credit—Fraudulent Intention of Debtor—Vendor's Right to Disaffirm Contract—Re-taking Possession of Goods after Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Title of Trustee.—When goods have been purchased on credit by a debtor with the fraudulent intention of not paying for them, the vendor, on discovering this fact, is entitled to disaffirm the sale within a reasonable time and re-take possession of the goods, although he has knowledge of the commission of an act of bankruptcy by the debtor. Eastgate, In re; Ward, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 324; [1905] 1 K.B. 465; 92 L. T. 207; 53 W. R. 432; 12 Manson, 11; 21 T. L. R. 198—Bigham, J.

The title of the trustee in bankruptcy to the goods which he finds in the bankrupt's possession is subject to the rights of third parties, including that of the vendors of the goods, to disaffirm the contract. Ib.

Prosecution of Bankrupt—Sanction of Committee of Inspection—No Order of Court to Prosecute—Costs.—A trustee in bankruptcy, with the sanction of the committee of inspection but without leave of the Court, prosecuted the bankrupt for an offence under section 11 of the Debtors Act, 1869, upon which he was tried and acquitted:—Held, that the trustee was not entitled to the costs of the prosecution out of the estate, so far as they were increased by his not having obtained the leave of the Court. Houes, In re; White, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 705; [1902] 2 K.B. 290; 9 Manson, 252—Wright, J.

Discharge—Offences under Debtors Act, 1869—“Special reasons”—Statement of.—Section 8, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, provides that on an application by a bankrupt for his discharge “the Court shall refuse the discharge in all cases where the bankrupt has committed any misdemeanour under the Debtors Act, 1869, . . . unless for special reasons the Court otherwise determines, and shall on proof of any of the facts hereinafter mentioned,” either (inter alia) refuse the discharge or suspend the discharge for a period of not less than two years:—Held, that the Judge in granting a discharge under the section to a bankrupt who has committed a misdemeanour under the Debtors Act, 1869, must state in his judgment the “special reasons” which determine him to grant the discharge. Stevens, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 932; [1898] 2 Q.B. 495; 79 L. T. 80; 47 W. R. 61; 5 Manson, 222—D.

The fact that the jury recommended the bankrupt to mercy is not a “special reason” within the meaning of the statute. Ib.

Jurisdiction of Court to decline to Consider Report.—When the official receiver makes a report to the Court under section 16 of the Debtors Act, 1869, as amended by section 164 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, stating that in his opinion the bankrupt has committed an offence, but does not ask for an order to prosecute the bankrupt, it is not competent for the Court to refuse to allow the report to be filed or to take it into consideration upon the ground that no application is made for leave to prosecute. The Court may decline to make any immediate direction on the point, but must consider the report. Dunn, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 71 L. J. K.B. 83; [1902] 1 K.B. 107; 85 L. T. 567; 50 W. R. 183; 9 Manson, 1—C.A.

Statement of Affairs—Admissibility in Criminal Proceedings.—See CRIMINAL LAW.

22. ARREST OF DEBTOR.

“Where debtor has absconded or is about to abscond.”—The Court has power, under section 25, sub-section 1 (a) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, taken with section 7 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, to order a warrant to issue for the arrest of a debtor when it appears to the Court that there is probable reason for believing that he has absconded or is about to abscond; and the words “has absconded,” when taken in conjunction with the words “about to abscond,” are without limitation as to time, and mean has absconded before, or is about to abscond after, a notice of bankruptcy has been issued or a petition presented by or against him. Reg. v. Northallerton County Court Judge, 68 L. J. Q.B. 24; [1898] 2 Q.B. 680; 79 L. T. 327; 47 W. R. 68; 5 Manson, 300—C.A. See s.c. sub nom. Skinner v. Same, in H.L., post, col. 150.

Bond to Secure Attendance for Examination—Release of Debtor—Failure to Attend—Estrated Bond—Destination of Proceeds.]—Where a debtor, arrested under section 25 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for failing to attend an examination ordered by the Court, has been released on giving a bond with sureties for his appearance for examination and attendance upon the official receiver as and when required, and the bond is subsequently estrated by reason of his failure to attend, the proceeds of the bond will, as a general rule, go to the debtor's estate, and not to the Crown. In any exceptional case the Registrar in bankruptcy may apply to the Judge as to the application of the money. Gordon, In re; Salmond, In re, 72 L. J. K.B. 587; [1903] 2 K.B. 164; 89 L. 24. DISCHARGE OF BANKRUPT.

Application for—Transfer from Registrar to Judge in Bankruptcy.]—The fact that a bankrupt's application for his discharge raises issues of great importance is a good and sufficient reason for transferring the hearing of such application from the Registrar to the Judge sitting in bankruptcy. The fact that the Registrar has been concerned in the making of the order for the prosecution of the bankrupt for offences committed under the Debtors Act, 1869, does not prevent the Registrar from determining the bankrupt's application for his discharge on its merits, and does not constitute a sufficient reason for transferring the hearing of such an application to the Judge. Hooley, In re; Hooley, ex parte (No. 2), 80 L. T. 495; 6 Manson, 176—Wright, J.

Assets not Equal to 10s. in the Pound—Burden of Proof—Opposition—Official Receiver's Report.]—Upon an application by a bankrupt for an order of discharge the onus lies upon the person opposing the grant of the discharge to prove the facts which entitle the Court under section 8, sub-sections 2 and 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, to refuse or suspend the discharge. The official Receiver's report is, however, by sub-section 5, made prima facie evidence, if there is any definite finding thereon. Van Laun, In re; International Assets Co., ex parte, 23 T. L. R. 371—C.A.

Liquidation by Arrangement—After-acquired Property—Bequest to Debtor—Right of Executors to Retain Debt.]—Section 54 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, which contains provisions dealing with the status of undischarged bankrupts, applies to liquidating debtors. Williams, Ex parte (44 L. J. Bk. 122; L. R. 20 Eq. 743), followed. Powell, In re; Powell v. Powell, 11 Manson, 22; 20 T. L. R. 374—Swinfen Eady, J.

Prior to 1882 a father had lent his son various sums of money, amounting in the whole to 1,133*l.*, for which the son had given him a bill of sale on his furniture. In 1882 the son filed a petition under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement. In 1883 the liquidation was closed, but the creditors refused to grant the son his discharge. The father sold the property comprised in the bill of sale for 182*l.*, but did not prove in the liquidation for the balance of his debt. In 1903 the father died, having by his will bequeathed to the son a share of his residuary estate, which amounted to about 2,000*l.* The executors claimed to retain the balance of the debt out of the son's share:—Held, that section 54 of the Act of 1869 applied, that the debtor not having obtained his discharge the balance of the debt was a subsisting debt, and that the debtor must therefore bring it into account, together with interest thereon, from the expiration of three years from the close of the liquidation until distribution. Ib.

Suspending Discharge—Bankrupt without Means or Prospects.]—An order suspending a bankrupt's discharge until a dividend of 10s. in the pound has been paid, ought not to be made unless there is a reasonable prospect that some funds or property will be forthcoming, and will be available for payment of the debts of the bankrupt. Marley, In re; Marley, ex parte, 82 L. T. 692—D.

Misdemeanour by Bankrupt—"Special Reasons"—Suspension of Discharge.]—A bankrupt was convicted at the Central Criminal Court of a misdemeanour under sub-sections 9 and 10 of section 11 of the Debtors Act, 1869, in having within four months of his bankruptcy made false entries in his books with intent to conceal the true state of his affairs. The Judge who tried the case postponed sentence till the following sessions, the bankrupt being in the meantime kept in custody, and then he released the bankrupt on his own recognisances in 50*l.* for his appearance to hear judgment. The transaction to which this conviction related was subsequently challenged by the trustee, on the ground of its being a fraudulent preference, but Wright, J., held that it did not amount to that:—Held, without giving any decision as to what in general would constitute "special reasons" within section 8, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, that the way in which the Judge at the trial dealt with the case and the light thrown upon the debtor's conduct by the decision of Wright, J., constituted special reasons within the sub-section for hearing the bankrupt's application for a discharge. Solomons, In re, 73 L. J. K.B. 55; [1904] 1 K.B. 106; 89 L. T. 637; 52 W. R. 473; 10 Manson, 369—C.A.

Per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.—It does not follow from the fact that the Judge who has tried a case of misdemeanour under the Debtors Act, 1869, thinks that there are circumstances connected with the offence which go in mitigation of it, that the bankrupt is entitled to his discharge at once. The intention of the Act is that there should be a period of probation, so that the Court may be able to judge from his conduct during that time whether or no he ought to be allowed again the ordinary rights of trading. Ib.

Per ROMER, L.J.—On hearing an application for discharge on the ground of special reasons the Court ought not to disregard the conduct of the bankrupt in the bankruptcy, and especially with reference to the act of misdemeanour of which he may have been guilty. Ib.

Discharge Conditional on Bankrupt Consenting to Judgment—Refusal to Consent—Re-hearing.]

—The bankrupt was a captain in the army with no means but his pay, and his insolvency was due to damages given against him in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff being the only creditor. The Registrar made an order for the bankrupt's discharge on condition of his consenting to judgment for 600*l.* being entered against him, to which he refused his consent. On a re-hearing of his application for a discharge under rule 240, sub-rule 3, the Registrar substantially repeated his former order. The bankrupt appealed, and asked for an order suspending his discharge for two years only under section 8, sub-section 2 (ii.) :—Held, that, though the bankrupt was not entitled to such an order as of right, it was a proper order to make under all the circumstances of the case. Gaskell, In re; Gaskell, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 656; [1904] 2 K.B. 478; 91 L. T. 221; 11 Manson, 125; 20 T. L. R. 469—C.A.

Conditional Discharge on Payment by Bankrupt.]—The Court suspended the bankrupt's discharge for two years, subject to the condition that, after setting aside 500*l.* a year out of his earnings for his own support, he should pay the surplus, if any, to the trustee until the creditors received 10*s.* in the pound on their debts. Dallmeyer, In re; Dallmeyer, ex parte, 22 T. L. R. 445—C.A.

Revocation — Default — Jurisdiction.] — A debtor, having been adjudicated bankrupt, had applied for his discharge, which was granted by an order made under section 8, sub-section 2 (iv.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, conditional on his consenting to judgment being entered against him for the amount due from him; and by the same order he was ordered to pay the amount by instalments. The debtor having made default in payment of the instalments, notwithstanding an intermediate order for payment of all arrears,—Held, that the Court had ample jurisdiction under section 104 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to rescind or vary the order of discharge, which was conditional not merely on the consenting to judgment, but also on the performance of it by payment of the instalments. Summers, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 707; [1907] 2 K.B. 166; 96 L. T. 791; 14 Manson, 101; 23 T. L. R. 465—Bigham, J.

Consent to Judgment Payable by Annual Instalments—Modification of Terms.]—An application to the Court after the expiration of two years from the date of an order of discharge under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 28, sub-s. 2, to modify the terms of the order, should be made by the bankrupt, and not by the trustee. Roberts & Co., In re; Bonzoline Manufacturing Co., ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 724; [1904] 2 K.B. 299; 91 L. T. 222; 11 Manson, 134; 20 T. L. R. 474—C.A.

The bankrupt is not disqualified from making such an application by the mere fact that he has failed to comply with the requirements of rule 244 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 to 1890, requiring him to render accounts of his after-acquired property. Ib.

The Court will modify the terms of the order for the bankrupt's discharge where on the evidence there is no reasonable probability of his being in a condition to comply with the terms of the order originally made. Ib.

25. THE COURT IN BANKRUPTCY.

County Court—Jurisdiction—Matter not arising out of the Bankruptcy—Amount in Dispute Exceeding 200*l.*—A County Court Judge has not jurisdiction (except by consent) under section 102, sub-section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to refer a claim exceeding 200*l.* not arising out of the bankruptcy to his Registrar, to ascertain, by taking an account, the amount really due. Healey, In re; Healey, ex parte, 93 L. T. 704—D.

— Judge Exercising Bankruptcy Jurisdiction

—Certiorari.]—A County Court Judge exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction under the Bankruptcy Acts, and acting within that jurisdiction, has all the powers of a Judge of the High Court exercising his jurisdiction, and so long as such County Court Judge is exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction the remedy by which to question an order made by such Judge when exercising such jurisdiction, if such order requires alteration or amendment, is by application to the Judge himself, sitting in bankruptcy, and not by certiorari to bring up the order into the Queen's Bench Division. Skinner v. Northallerton County Court Judge, 68 L. J. Q.B. 896; [1899] A.C. 439; 80 L. T. 814; 63 J. P. 756; 6 Manson, 274—H.L. (E.) Affirming, Reg. v. Northallerton County Court Judge, supra, col. 147.

— Appeal from—Amount not Exceeding 50*l.*

—Leave to Appeal—High Court—Jurisdiction.]—As the word "Court" in Bankruptcy Rule 129 means the original Court exercising jurisdiction in bankruptcy, an appeal cannot be brought from the order of a County Court relating to property not exceeding 50*l.* in value except by leave of that Court, and the High Court cannot give leave to appeal when it has been refused by the County Court. Everson, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 38; [1904] 2 K.B. 619; 91 L. T. 81; 52 W. R. 656; 11 Manson, 389—D.

— Decree for Foreclosure—Power to Make.]—

By consent of parties, the Bankruptcy Court will, in a proper case, make a decree for accounts and foreclosure usual in a foreclosure action in the Chancery Division. Salmon, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 125; [1903] 1 K.B. 147; 87 L. T. 654; 51 W. R. 288; 10 Manson, 22—Wright, J.

26. COSTS.

Taxation—Parties Litigating with Trustee—Review at Instance of Board of Trade.—Rule 124 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 and 1890, which provides that “where any bill of costs, charges, fees, or disbursements of any solicitor, manager, accountant, auctioneer, broker, or other person has been taxed by a Registrar of a County Court, the Board of Trade may require the taxation to be reviewed by a Bankruptcy Taxing Master of the High Court,” applies only to the costs of persons employed by the trustee in the bankruptcy, and not to the costs of persons litigating with the trustee outside the bankruptcy. Hunt, In re; Board of Trade, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 247; [1898] 1 Q.B. 287; 46 W. R. 384; 4 Manson, 315—Wright, J.

— Solicitor to Trustee.—See supra, THE TRUSTEE.

Bill of Sale—Bankruptcy of Grantor—Costs of Preparation and Redemption.—The grantor of a bill of sale became bankrupt, and the grantee, having sold the chattels therein comprised, realised a sum more than sufficient to discharge the amount secured by the bill of sale. By an antecedent agreement the grantor was liable to pay all the expenses of the bill of sale, and the grantee now claimed to deduct out of the fund in his hands his solicitor's costs in connection with the preparation and redemption of the bill. The official receiver, as trustee, having paid the costs under protest, moved in the bankruptcy for a declaration that certain heads of these costs could not be charged:—Held, that the Court having jurisdiction in the bankruptcy had a discretionary power under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 102, to tax the costs of the grantee's solicitor, and that the third-party taxation provided by the Solicitors Act, 1843, s. 38, did not exclude this discretionary jurisdiction. Ford, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 84 L. T. 329—D.

Costs of Solicitors to Trustee “Realising assets”—“Costs of Petitioner”—Re-hearing and Appeal—Priorities.—The “taxed costs of the petition” payable under rule 125 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, will include the costs of a re-hearing of the petition and an appeal therefrom, and will be payable according to the rule in priority to the general disbursements of a trustee, other than those actually incurred in realising the assets of the debtor. Bright, In re; Wingfield & Blew, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 287; [1903] 1 K.B. 735; 10 Manson, 31—Wright, J.

Proceedings taken in Name of Official Receiver—Taxation—Remission to Allow Official Receiver to be Represented.—A litigant was allowed to take proceedings in the name of the official receiver. They were unsuccessful, and costs were given against the official receiver. The indemnity given by the litigant proved to be insufficient. No notice of taxation was given to the official receiver, and he was unrepresented except by the solicitor for the litigant:—Held, that the bill ought to be remitted for re-taxation. Dillon, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 88 L. T. 127—Wright, J.

Security for Costs—Applicant Resident Abroad.—The jurisdiction to order an applicant resident abroad to give security for costs ought only to be exercised in extreme cases, and, in the absence of any evidence of inability to pay, an order ought to be refused. Pilling, In re; Chapman, ex parte, 94 L. T. 682—Bigham, J.

27. APPEAL.

Appeal from County Court—Amount not Exceeding 50*l.*—Leave to Appeal—High Court—Jurisdiction.—As the word “Court” in Bankruptcy Rule 129 means the original Court exercising jurisdiction in bankruptcy, an appeal cannot be brought from the order of a County Court relating to property not exceeding 50*l.* in value except by leave of that Court, and the High Court cannot give leave to appeal when it has been refused by the County Court. Everson, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 74 L. — Deposit as Security for Costs—Costs of Application to Dispense with Deposit.—The security for costs which appellants are required to lodge by rule 131 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, is security for all costs in relation to the appeal. Costs ordered to be paid by the appellant upon his application to dispense with the payment of the deposit are on taxation properly deducted out of the deposit. Child, In re; Child, ex parte, 84 L. T. 326; 49 W. R. 447—Wright, J.

— Evidence—Judge's Note—Shorthand Writer's Transcript.—On the hearing of an appeal the Judge's note may, by special order, be supplemented on vital points by a transcript of a shorthand writer's note, but the whole of the shorthand writer's note ought not to be referred to. Sprange, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 77 L. T. 808; 4 Manson, 335—D.

28. SUMMARY ADMINISTRATION.

Claim for over 200*l.* not Arising out of the Bankruptcy—Jurisdiction.—An order for summary administration having been made under section 121 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the official receiver applied to the County Court Judge for an order against a third party to pay him 843*l.* 14*s.* This claim did not arise out of the bankruptcy:—Held, that the County Court had no jurisdiction. The jurisdiction is the same in summary as in ordinary bankruptcies. Rule 273 does not affect the right of third parties to claim the protection given by section 102 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Billing, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 86 L. T. 689—D.

Release of Official Receiver—Appointment by Creditors of New Trustee.—Where the official receiver, acting as trustee in a summary administration in bankruptcy, has been released, the creditors have no power to appoint a new trustee for the purpose of any future administration of the estate, but the official receiver continues to act. Leach, In re; Barnes, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 931; [1900] 2 Q.B. 649; 83 L. T. 222; 49 W. R. 76; 7 Manson, 384—Wright, J.

29. ADMINISTRATION ORDER.

Judgment for Debt Incurred Subsequently to Order—Stay of Execution on Judgment.—Section 122, sub-section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, which provides that, during the continuance of an administration order, "no creditor shall have any remedy against the person or property of the debtor," in respect of a debt which the debtor has notified to a County Court, "except with the leave of that county court, and on such terms as that court may impose," applies to subsequent creditors as well as to creditors before the date of the order. Therefore, a creditor whose debt has been incurred after and without notice of the date of the administration order is only entitled to be scheduled as a creditor under the order, unless the Court in its discretion gives him leave to issue execution, or the order has been set aside or rescinded. Frank, In re ([1894] 1 Q.B. 9), not followed. *Pearson v. 30. ADMINISTRATION OF INSOLVENT ESTATES.

Retainer—Executor's Debt Exceeding Assets—Realisation—Retainer in Specie.—An executor whose debt largely exceeds the value of his testator's estate may retain the entire assets in specie without first realising them. Woodward v. Darcey (Lord) (1 Plowd. 184) and Chapman v. Turner (9 Mod. 268; s.c. Vin. Abr. "Executor," D 2, p. 71) discussed. Gilbert, In re; Gilbert, ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 229; [1898] 1 Q.B. 282; 77 L. T. 775; 46 W. R. 351; 4 Manson, 337—Wright, J.

Where therefore a trader died insolvent and indebted to his executrix in a sum of 870*l.*, and leaving assets valued at 300*l.*, and the executrix had, prior to the making of an administration order under section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, asserted her right to retain the assets in specie, the Court held she was entitled under the circumstances to do so. Ib.

— Assets Paid to Official Receiver under Mistake of Law—Right to Recover.—The mere fact of payment of assets collected by an executor into the hands of an official receiver acting as trustee under an administration order in bankruptcy does not necessarily bar the executor's right of retainer. Rhoades, In re; Rhoades, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 804; [1899] 2 Q.B. 347; 80 L. T. 742; 47 W. R. 561; 6 Manson, 277—C.A.

An insolvent debtor died indebted to his executrix in a sum of 604*l.* The executrix got in the estate and paid the money into a bank in her own name. An order was subsequently made for the administration in bankruptcy of the debtor's estate. Thereupon the official receiver required the executrix to pay over to him the assets which she had collected, and this she accordingly did. She then put in a proof for the 604*l.*, but, on being informed that she had a right of retainer, she withdrew it:—Held, that the executrix had not, by handing over the assets to the official receiver without reserving her right of retainer, lost that right; that she must be assumed to have retained the amount of her debt whilst the assets were in her possession; and that the official receiver must repay the 604*l.* Ib.

Rights of Execution Creditor.—Section 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, which restricts the rights of creditors under execution or attachment, does not apply to the administration of the estate of a deceased insolvent in pursuance of an administration order made under section 125 of the Act. Hasluck v. Clark, 68 L. J. Q.B. 486; [1899] 1 Q.B. 699; 80 L. T. 454; 47 W. R. 471; 6 Manson, 146—C.A.

Consolidation of Proceedings—Administration of Estate of Deceased Partner—Bankruptcy of Surviving Partner.—An order may be made consolidating the proceedings in the administration in bankruptcy of the estate of a deceased member of a firm of two partners with the bankruptcy of the surviving member of the firm. Greaves, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 975; [1904] 2 K.B. 493; 91 L. T. 80; 52 W. R. 633; 11 Manson, 270; 20 T. L. R. 564—Bigham, J.

And see EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR.

31. DEED OF ARRANGEMENT.

Agreement for Composition with Creditors—"Creditors generally"—Form—Construction—Registration.—The Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, does not apply to companies registered under the Companies Acts. An agreement for a composition construed to be for the benefit of "creditors generally." General Furnishing Co. v. Venn (32 L. J. Ex. 220; 2 H. & C. 158) applied. Rileys, Lim., In re; Harper v. Rileys, Lim., 72 L. J. Ch. 678; [1903] 2 Ch. 590; 89 L. T. 529; 51 W. R. 681; 10 Manson, 314—Byrne, J.

Execution by Foreign Debtor Abroad—Business Carried on in England through Agent—"Mobilia sequuntur personam"—Registration of Deed in England.—The word "debtor" in the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, which is supplementary to the law of bankruptcy, means debtor subject to the Bankruptcy Acts, so that a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors executed by foreign debtors in the country of their domicile, who are possessed of goods in this country, in respect of a business carried on through an agent, does not require registration here, and there is no lex loci rei sita in respect of such goods to interfere with the operation of the maxim Mobilia sequuntur personam. Principle of the decision in Cooke v. Charles A. Vogeler Co. (70 L. J. K.B. 181; [1901] A.C. 102) adopted. Dulaney v. Merry, 70 L. J. K.B. 377; [1901] 1 K.B. 536; 84 L. T. 156; 49 W. R. 381; 8 Manson, 152—Channell, J.

Deed of Assignment for the Benefit of Creditors—Notice—No Dissent—Delay in Presenting Petition.—There is no duty cast on a creditor who receives notice of the deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors to express his dissent; nor does mere attendance at a meeting of creditors where such a deed is agreed to amount to approval. An unexplained delay of two months in presenting a petition or expressing dissent from the deed amounts to acquiescence. Carr, In re; Jacobs, ex parte, 85 L. T. 552; 50 W. R. 336—D.

A creditor, by his agent, attended a meeting of creditors held on November 4, 1901, at which a resolution was carried approving a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors. The agent neither assented nor dissented, but stated that he must consult his principal, and expressly reserved his right to take bankruptcy proceedings. On November 30 he wrote to the trustee under the deed saying he was not satisfied with the debtor's affairs, and that he still reserved his right to take steps in bankruptcy. The trustee in reply asked him if he intended to proceed in bankruptcy to do so at once in order to save trouble and expense. No further communication was made to the trustee till after the filing of the petition on January 27, 1902:—Held, that there had been no acquiescence or unexplained delay. Day, In re; Hammond, ex parte, 86 L. T. 238; 50 W. R. 448—D.

Petition—Deed of Assignment—Clause Empowering Trustee to Pay any Dissenting Creditor in Full—Recognition of Deed by Petitioning Creditor—Estoppel.—A creditor who by his acts recognises the title of the trustee under a deed of assignment executed by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors cannot afterwards rely on the execution of the deed as an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding that the creditor has all along refused to assent to it. Brindley, In re; Brindley, ex parte, 75 L. J. K.B. 211; [1906] 1 K.B. 377; 94 L. T. 116; 54 W. R. 301; 13 Manson, 1; 22 T. L. R. 155—C.A.

A clause in a deed of this character empowering the trustee to pay in full any creditor who may decline to execute or assent to the deed is an improper clause. Ib.

Assignment of Debtor's Property—Assent of Petitioning Creditor—Further Act of Bankruptcy—Estoppel.—At a meeting of creditors it was resolved that a deed of assignment of all the debtors' property should be executed for the benefit of their creditors. B., one of the creditors present, did not assent or dissent; but when a nominee of the debtors was proposed as trustee of the deed he objected, and suggested another name, which was adopted by the meeting. B. served on the debtors a bankruptcy notice founded on a judgment debt, which the debtors failed to comply with:—Held, that, though B. might by his conduct be prevented from availing himself of the deed of assignment as an act of bankruptcy, yet he was not so bound by the deed as to be precluded from petitioning and obtaining a receiving order for non-compliance with the bankruptcy notice. Observations of LORD CAIRNS, L.J., in Stray, In re; Stray, ex parte (36 L. J. Bk. 7; L. R. 2 Ch. 374), followed. Mills, In re; Mills, ex parte, 75 L. J. K.B. 247; [1906] 1 K.B. 389; 94 L. T. 41; 54 W. R. 322; 13 Manson, 9—C.A. And see Crow, In re; Collier, ex parte, 97 L. T. 140; 14 Manson, 279—D.

Registration—Affidavit of Creditors' Names—Fraudulent Conveyance—Omission of Creditor's Name—Exclusion of Creditor.—A deed of arrangement may be duly registered under section 5 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, although the affidavit made by the debtor under section 6 of the Act does not contain the names and addresses of all the creditors of the debtor. Maskelyne v. Smith, 72 L. J. K.B. 237; [1903] 1 K.B. 671; 88 L. T. 148; 51 W. R. 372; 10 Manson, 121—C.A.

A deed of arrangement is not necessarily void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, either because it contains provisions in favour of the debtor or because a particular creditor is intentionally excluded from its operation. Ib. Alton v. Harrison (38 L. J. Ch. 669; L. R. 4 Ch. 622) and Boldero v. London & Co. Discount Co. (5 Ex. D. 47) followed. Spencer v. Slater (48 L. J. Q.B. 204; 4 Q.B. D. 13) commented on. Ib.

Non-registration of Deed of Arrangement—Deed for Benefit of Certain Creditors Named Therein—Validity.—A deed of arrangement for the benefit of certain pressing creditors named therein, and not for the benefit of creditors generally, does not require registration under the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887. Saumarez, In re; Salaman, ex parte, 76 L. J. K.B. 828; [1907] 2 K. B. 170; 97 L. T. 121; 14 Manson, 170; 23 T. L. R. 477—C.A.

—“For benefit of creditors generally.”—A debtor, who was unable to pay his debts, called a meeting of his creditors, at which he stated that his liabilities were about 5,500*l.*, of which about 3,800*l.* was for money lent by relatives, and his assets about 900*l.* It was arranged that the relatives should withdraw their claims, that the creditors should accept a composition of 5*s.* in the pound, and that one P., who was present, should be the trustee for the creditors. Three days later a deed was executed between the debtor and P., by which the debtor, in consideration of 50*l.* paid to him by P., conveyed all his property to P. absolutely “and not as trustee” for the debtor or his creditors, and P. covenanted to pay in full all claims against the debtor which would have preferential right in bankruptcy, and to pay a composition of 5*s.* in the pound to the creditors on their debts not exceeding 1,800*l.* This deed was not registered:—Held, that the deed was a deed made for the benefit of the creditors generally within section 4 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, and was void to all intents and purposes because it was not registered as required by the Act. Hedges v. Preston, 80 L. T. 847—C.A.

A debtor in consideration of an immediate advance of 100*l.* by one of two trustees, assigned all his personal estate by deed to the trustees upon trust to sell, and out of the proceeds, in the first place, to repay the 100*l.* to the advancing trustee, and, in the second, to discharge the debtor's debts and liabilities, and, in the third, to hold the residue in trust for the debtor's daughter. The creditors were not parties to the deed:—Held, that the primary object of the deed was to benefit the debtor and his daughter, and not the debtor's creditors generally, and, therefore, that the deed did not fall within the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, and consequently was not void for want of registration. Hobbs, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 6 Manson, 212—Wright, J.

Composition Scheme — Debts Provable — Interest above 5 per cent.—It is competent to the parties to a composition scheme to exclude from the scheme the operation of section 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890. Where a scheme provided simpliciter that a dividend should be paid "on the amount of the debts . . . provable against the estate of the debtor,"—Held, on the right construction, that the operation of section 23 was tacitly excluded. Nepean, In re; Ramchand, ex parte, 72 L. J. K.B. 407; [1903] 1 K.B. 794; 88 L. T. 477; 51 W. R. 559; 10 Manson, 156—Wright, J.

Payment of Debt to Assignee—Bankruptcy Petition—Right of Trustees to Payment of Debt—Receipt of Balance from Assignee—Election—Following Debt into Hands of Trustee.—Where a debtor pays to an assignee under a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors generally a debt thereby assigned, and subsequently a petition in bankruptcy is presented and a receiving order made upon the act of bankruptcy committed in the execution of the deed, the trustee in bankruptcy may claim repayment from the debtor of the debt so paid to the assignee, unless the debtor can shew that the money paid by him, or some part thereof, has come to the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy. Davis v. Petrie, 75 L. J. K.B. 992; [1906] 2 K.B. 786; 95 L. T. 239; 13 Manson, 344; 22 T. L. R. 771—C.A.

Withdrawal of Debt Obtained by Debtor—Provisional Release of Debt — Circumstances of Release not Disclosed—Provable Debt—Sanction of Court.—Where in a scheme of arrangement between a debtor and his creditors the debtor proposes to pay a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on all provable debts, and that such creditors as released their debts should not be included in the payment of the composition, and it turns out that the debtor has himself entered into an arrangement with the majority of his creditors, with a view to facilitating the payment of the composition, that they should release their debts, but the circumstances under which the releases were obtained are not fully disclosed, and the releases are conditional on the scheme being approved by the Court, the Court will, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to sanction the scheme. Pilling, In re, 72 L. J. K.B. 392; [1903] 2 K.B. 50; 88 L. T. 667; 51 W. R. 465; 10 Manson, 142—C.A.

BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

Counsel's Authority—Reference of Action—Limit of Authority.—Counsel has no authority to agree to the reference of an action in disregard of the conditions imposed by his client on such reference. Neale v. Gordon-Lennox, 71 L. J. K.B. 939; [1902] A.C. 465; 87 L. T. 341; 51 W. R. 140; 66 J. P. 757—H.L. (E.)

In a libel and slander action the plaintiff authorised her counsel to agree to refer the action on the understanding that all imputations on her moral character were publicly withdrawn in Court. This condition was not made known to the defendant's counsel:—Held, that counsel had exceeded his authority, that the agreement must be set aside, and the cause restored to the list for trial. Ib.

BASTARDY.

Maintenance of Bastard—Marriage of Mother—Liability of Husband—Liability of Putative Father.—A bastard child may become "chargeable to a parish" within the meaning of section 5 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1873, although its mother has married a man who is able to maintain the child. Plymouth Guardians v. Gibbs, 72 L. J. K.B. 33; [1903] 1 K.B. 177; 87 L. T. 685; 51 W. R. 157; 67 J. P. 61; 1 L. G. R. 48—D.

Woman Living Apart from her Husband—"Single woman"—Application for Bastardy Order in respect of Child born before Marriage.—A married woman, who has had an illegitimate child before her marriage, cannot, although living apart from her husband, apply for a bastardy order against the putative father of such child, as her husband is liable for its maintenance. Featfield v. Childs, 63 J. P. 117—D.

Application for Summons—Twelve Months' Limit—Exhaustion of Application by Hearing and Determination.—The hearing of a bastardy summons upon which no order is made, upon the ground that the evidence adduced by the complainant is insufficient, is a hearing and determination of the summons so as to exhaust the application upon which it is based, notwithstanding a statement by the magistrates that they do not dismiss the summons upon the merits, and that the complainant may apply again if she can bring further evidence in support of her claim. Reg. v. Thomas (8 L. T. 460) and Staples v. Staples (41 L. T. 347) followed. Reg. v. Lancashire Justices (29 L. T. 886) distinguished. Reg. v. Robinson; Corbishley, Ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 510; [1898] 1 Q.B. 734; 78 L. T. 350; 46 W. R. 462; 62 J. P. 309—D.

Similar Applications made on Same Day to Different Justices.—Where an applicant for a bastardy summons makes three applications against the same man on the same day to three different magistrates, no summons being issued upon any one of them at the time owing to the impossibility for the time being of effecting service, those three applications must be deemed to be one application, except for the single purpose of ensuring the issue of a summons as soon as an opportunity for effecting service occurs; and therefore, where a summons is issued upon one of such applications, the exhaustion of that one application by the hearing and determination of the summons is the exhaustion of all three. Ib.

Evidence of Mother—Corroboration.]—In corroboration of the evidence of the mother, who was a servant to the appellant's grandfather, in an application for an order against the appellant under section 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, evidence was given that the appellant and respondent were seen "out together evenings in the lanes," and that after the birth of the child the appellant asked if the respondent "was going to swear the child": Held (dissentiente WILLS, J.), that this was corroboration in some material particular to satisfy section 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872. Harvey v. Auning, 87 L. T. 637; 67 J. P. 73—D.

Corroboration in "material particular".]—Semble, Under section 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, the corroboration of the evidence of the mother "in some material particular by other evidence" must be evidence which has some relation to the conduct of the person charged—that is, the putative father—or have some relation to the probability of his being the father. Refell v. Morton, 70 J. P. 347—Lord Alverstone, C.J.

Affiliation Order—Application by Married Woman—"Single Woman."]—An application under section 3 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, cannot be made by a married woman if she is living with her husband. Jones v. Davies, 70 L. J. K.B. 38; [1901] 1 K.B. 118; 83 L. T. 412; 49 W. R. 136; 65 J. P. 39—D.

3. DRAWER.

Agreement for Agent to Provide Drawer for Particular Purpose—Insertion of Name for Another Purpose—Liability of Third Person who Takes in Good Faith.]—In pursuance of an agreement made between the plaintiffs and R. for accommodation in relation to acceptances, the plaintiffs handed R. certain bills, which they had accepted, in which the dates and drawers' names were left blank, which under the agreement were to be provided by R. The bills were to be used by R. to recoup himself for advances to the plaintiffs, and for the purpose of raising money for the plaintiffs. R. used the bills for his own purposes, and, having filled in the dates, handed them to the defendant L., who, acting in good faith, inserted drawers' names. In an action against L. for conversion,—Held, that although L. took the bills in good faith, he was liable, as he took the bills with only an acceptor's name, but no drawer's name, and so ran the risk that R. had no authority, or only a limited authority, to allow a drawer's name to be put in the instrument; that here R. had no authority to insert a drawer's name under the circumstances, as the only authority he had to insert a name was that of a drawer who would take the bill for the plaintiff's benefit; and that the insertion of the words in the agreement, "drawers to be provided by the said R." did not extend the limited authority actually given. Watkin v. Lamb, 85 L. T. 483—Kennedy, J.

4. ACCEPTANCE.

"Approved acceptance."]—An "approved acceptance" in a mercantile contract means an acceptance to which no reasonable objection can be taken, and it is not competent to prove that by the custom of a particular trade it means an acceptance to which no objection has in fact been made. McDowall and Neilson's Trustee v. Snowball Co., 7 F. 35—Ct. of Sess.

Trading Firm—Acceptance by Partner—Authority to Bind Firm.]—See PARTNERSHIP.

5. INDORSEMENT.

Right of Transferee to have Transferor's Indorsement—"Holder."]—The plaintiff agreed to advance a sum of money to one Chapman if the latter would procure a bill of exchange for the amount accepted by himself with the name of a responsible drawer attached. Chapman accordingly brought to the plaintiff a bill drawn by the defendant to his own order and accepted by Chapman, and the plaintiff made the advance. The bill was not indorsed by the defendant, but this was not noticed at the time of the advance. The defendant, who had received no consideration for the bill, gave it to Chapman for the purpose of his raising money upon it. The defendant having refused to indorse the bill,—Held, that the effect of the transaction was that the defendant was the "holder" of the bill within section 2 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, immediately after it had been accepted by Chapman, and that he transferred the bill, by means of Chapman, to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff as the transferee was entitled to have the indorsement of the defendant and to recover against him on the bill. Walters v. Neary, 21 T. L. R. 146—C.A.

Incomplete Bill—Indorser Guaranteeing Debt—Circuity of Action—Estoppel.—The defendant T. being unable to pay for some pigs bought from the plaintiffs' testator, the defendant S. agreed to be responsible for the price of any pigs delivered to T. S. accordingly indorsed bills for the price of the pigs, and for several years transactions took place between the parties upon this footing. In each case the acceptance by T. and the indorsement by S. were placed upon a blank bill form, which was then handed to the plaintiffs' testator, who afterwards filled up the body of the bill. In an action upon two such bills filled up with the name of the deceased as drawer and indorser, Held, that, as the defendant S. had agreed to become liable for the price of pigs supplied to T., and the transactions between the parties had for several years proceeded on the faith of such agreement, and as the bills sued upon had been indorsed in pursuance of the agreement and made out with the authority of S., he was estopped from setting up the defence of circuity of action or that the bills were incomplete at the time when he indorsed them, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Glenie v. Tucker, 76 L. J. K.B. 874; [1907] 2 K.B. 507; 97 L. T. 434; 23 T. L. R. 596—A. T. Lawrence, J. Affirmed, 24 T. L. R. 177—C.A.

Person Signing otherwise than as Drawer or Acceptor—Subsequent Indorsement by Drawer.—A stranger to a bill who writes his name across the back of it before it has passed out of the hands of the drawer does not, by the operation either of section 55, sub-section 2 (a), or of section 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, thereby become liable to the drawer upon failure of the acceptor to pay the bill at maturity. The provisions of section 56 as to the liability of a person who signs a bill otherwise than as drawer or acceptor are not satisfied unless the bill be complete on the face of it when signed by such person. Jenkins v. Comber, 67 L. J. Q.B. 780; [1898] 2 Q.B. 163; 78 L. T. 752; 47 W. R. 48—D.

The decision of the HOUSE OF LORDS in Steele v. McKimlay (5 App. Cas. 754) has not been deprived of authority, nor has the principle there laid down been altered by the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882. Ib.

Forged Indorsement—Cheque Payable to "Fictitious or non-existing person"—Knowledge or Intention of Drawer.—Where a cheque has been obtained by a fraudulent representation from the drawer, who has designated an existing person as the payee, intending that he only should be the payee, the cheque cannot, where the name of such payee has been forged, be treated as payable to bearer on the ground that the payee is a "fictitious or non-existing person" within the meaning of section 7, sub-section 3 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882. Vinden v. Hughes (74 L. J. K.B. 410; [1905]

1 K.B. 795) followed. Macbeth v. North and South Wales Bank, 75 L. J. K.B. 1026; [1906] 2 K.B. 718; 11 Com. Cas. 293—Bray, J. Affirmed, H.L., 77 L. J. K.B. 464.

Indorsement of Stolen Cheque—Transfer Valid by Law of Foreign Country—Conversion of Cheque in England.—By Austrian law the holder of a stolen cheque who takes the cheque bona fide for value and without gross negligence acquires a valid title to the cheque even though he takes it under a forged indorsement, and if the holder pays it into an English bank which presents it to the bank upon which it is drawn and receives the proceeds, the English bank is not liable to an action for conversion by the original owner of the cheque, inasmuch as the validity of the indorsement and the transfer of the cheque in Austria depend upon Austrian law. Embiricos v. Anglo-Austrian Bank, 74 L. J. K.B. 326; [1905] 1 K.B. 677; 92 L. T. 305; 53 W. R. 306; 10 Com. Cas. 99; 21 T. L. R. 268—C.A.

6. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

Bill Drawn by one Company and Indorsed in favour of another Company—Same Secretary to both Companies—Knowledge—Presumption of Notice.—It is not true as a general proposition that the knowledge of a fact which comes to a person as secretary of one company is notice of the fact to him as secretary of another company from the mere existence of the common relationship. The question in such a case is whether or not the information he receives as secretary of one company is received by him under such circumstances that it would be his duty to communicate it to the other company. Fenwick, Stobart & Co., In re; Deep Sea Fishery Co., ex parte, 71 L. J. Ch. 321; [1902] 1 Ch. 507; 86 L. T. 193; 9 Manson, 205—Buckley, J.

Draft Drawn by Branch Bank on Bank—Liability of Bank to True Owner.—A draft drawn by the manager of a branch of a bank as manager upon the bank is not a bill of exchange within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, since it is not addressed by one person to another within the meaning of section 3, sub-section 1 of the Act, and section 17 of the Revenue Act, 1883, does not apply to such a draft, since it is not issued by a customer of a bank. Ib.

The A company drew a bill of exchange on the B company and indorsed it over to the C company. The same person acted as secretary both for the A company and for the B company. The bill was dishonoured, but no express notice of dishonour was given by the C company to the A company. Held, that notice of dishonour was not to be imputed to the A company by reason of the dual position occupied by the secretary. Ib.

Branch Bank—Notice Sent to Wrong Address.—The holders of a bill of exchange gave it for collection to a branch bank of a country bank which had several branches in different places. The branch bank sent the bill to a London bank for collection. The bill was duly presented for payment and was dishonoured on a Saturday. On the following Monday the London bank sent notice of the dishonour by post to the country bank, but by mistake the letter containing the notice was addressed not to the branch bank from which the bill had been received, but to another branch of the country bank carrying on business in another place. The mistake in the address having been discovered, the London bank on the Tuesday morning sent a telegram addressed to the branch bank from which the bill had been received, notifying that it had been dishonoured:—Held, by A. L. SMITH, L.J., and RIGBY, L.J., that, as the two acts of sending the notice by post to the wrong address, but to the right person, and the telegram to the right address when the mistake was discovered, must be treated as one continuing act, due notice of dishonour had been given as required by section 49, sub-section 12 (b) of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882; but held, by COLLINS, L.J., that as the several branches of a bank ought to be treated not as one and the same person, but as different persons, for the purpose of receiving notice of dishonour of a bill, the obligation imposed by the section had not been complied with. Fielding v. Corry, 67 L. J. Q.B. 7; [1898] 1 Q.B. 268; 77 L. T. 453; 46 W. R. 97—C.A.

7. ACTION UPON.

Payment by Bill—Dishonour—Bill Outstanding in Hands of Third Parties—Right of Creditor to Sue on Original Debt.—It is a good defence for a debtor sued on a debt for the discharge of which he had originally given a bill of exchange to plead that at the time at which the writ was issued against him the bill, although it had been dishonoured, was outstanding in the hands of a third party; and the fact that the creditor has subsequently obtained possession of it is not a sufficient remedy of the original defect in his cause of action. Davis v. Reilly, 66 L. J. Q.B. 844; [1898] 1 Q.B. 1; 77 L. T. 399; 46 W. R. 96—D.

Holder for Value—Solicitor to Drawer—Lien for Costs—Bill Overdue when Obtained by Solicitor.—The acceptors of a bill of exchange, for whose accommodation it was drawn, handed it to the drawer with instructions to him to get it discounted. The drawer endorsed it in blank and handed it to L., asking him to get it discounted. L. claimed to keep it, and the drawer thereupon sued him for detention of the bill. In this action the drawer obtained judgment, and the bill, which by this time was overdue, was handed over by L. to the drawer's solicitors. The solicitors knew of the circumstances under which the bill had been drawn. They retained possession of the document, over which they claimed a lien in respect of their bill of costs in the action by the drawer against L. Afterwards they brought an action upon the bill against the acceptors, claiming so much as would satisfy their lien:—Held, that the solicitors had no right of action against the acceptors. Redfern v. Rosenthal, 86 L. T. 855—C.A.

8. CHEQUE.

Cheque Payable to "Fictitious person"—Knowledge and Intention of Drawer.—For the purpose of construing section 7, sub-section 3 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which enacts that "where the payee is a fictitious or non-existing person the bill may be treated as payable to bearer," the circumstances of the particular case must be looked at to see whether the name inserted in a bill or cheque is the name of a "fictitious person," having regard to all those circumstances. Clutton v. Attenborough (66 L. J. Q.B. 221; [1897] A.C. 90) held to be inapplicable. Bank of England v. Vagliano (60 L. J. Q.B. 145; [1891] A.C. 107) distinguished. Vinden v. Hughes, 74 L. J. K.B. 410; [1905] 1 K.B. 795; 53 W. R. 429; 21 T. L. R. 324—Warrington, J.

Forged Indorsement—Crossed Cheque to Order—Indorsement by Customer—Immediate Credit to Customer—Cheque Crossed by Banker—Draft drawn by Branch Bank on Head Office.—The protection afforded by section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, to a banker who in good faith and without negligence receives payment for a customer of a crossed cheque, is restricted to the process of collecting the cheque for the customer, and does not extend to a case in which the banker makes himself a holder for value, as, for example, by immediately crediting the customer with the amount of the cheque. Capital and Counties Bank v. Gordon; London, City, and Midland Bank v. Gordon, 72 L. J. K.B. 451; [1903] A.C. 240; 88 L. T. 574; 51 W. R. 671; 8 Com. Cas. 221—H.L. (E.)

A cheque is not a "crossed cheque" within the Act which is crossed for the first time by the recipient banker. Ib.

A draft drawn by a country branch of a bank on its head office, not being an instrument upon which an action can be brought by the drawer, is not a bill of exchange, but the banker who cashes it is entitled to the protection of section 19 (which is still unrepealed) of the Stamp Act, 1853. Ib.

An instrument constituting an order for the payment of money, and crossed, but payable only upon signature by the payee of a form of receipt at its foot, is not a bill of exchange within the meaning of the Act. Ib.

Indorsement of Stolen Cheque—Transfer Valid by Law of Foreign Country—Conversion of Cheque in England.—By Austrian law the holder of a stolen cheque who takes the cheque bona fide for value and without gross negligence acquires a valid title to the cheque even though he takes it under a forged indorsement, and if the holder pays it into an English bank which presents it to the bank upon which it is drawn and receives the proceeds, the English bank is not liable to an action for conversion by the original owner of the cheque, inasmuch as the validity of the indorsement and the transfer of the cheque in Austria depend upon Austrian law. Embiricos v. Anglo-Austrian Bank, 78 L. J. K.B. 993; [1904] 2 K.B. 870; 91 L. T. 652; 53 W. R. 92; 9 Com. Cas. 308; 20 T. L. R. 794—Walton, J.

Cheque Given in Part Payment before Performance of Contract Rendered Impossible—Misfortune beyond Control of either Party—Payment of Cheque Subsequently Stopped—

Right to Recover on Cheque.—The plaintiff, a refreshment contractor, agreed with the defendants, who were acting on behalf of the Navy League, to supply at an agreed rate the refreshments on a steamer hired by the defendants for the purpose of taking members of the Navy League to the naval review on the occasion of the King's Coronation. By the contract 300*l.* was to be paid by the defendants to the plaintiff on the Monday previous to the review day, and it was a term of the contract that, in the event of the cancellation of the review before any expense had been incurred by the contractor, there should be no liability on the part of the defendants. The plaintiff expended a small sum on extra knives, forks, &c., but nothing on refreshments. A cheque for 300*l.* was sent by the defendants to the plaintiff on the stipulated day, but was not paid by the plaintiff into his bank. On the next day, owing to the illness of the King, the review was cancelled. An endeavour was subsequently made to effect an arrangement between the parties, but ultimately the defendants stopped payment of the cheque before it was presented:—Held, in an action on the cheque, that upon the cheque being stopped the rights of the parties were the same as though it had never been given, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Elliott v. Crutchley, 72 L. J. K.B. 927; [1903] 2 K.B. 476; 89 L. T. 417—Ridley, J.

Provision for Payment in Advance "on account"—Impossibility of Performance of Contract—Right to Recover.—A contractor offered to supply refreshments for the defendants upon a steamship upon the occasion of a Naval Review on terms which included a provision that 300*l.* should be paid to the contractor "on account of the refreshments" on the Monday previous to the Review day. The defendants accepted the terms, subject to the following stipulation: "It is of course understood that in the event of the cancellation of the Review before any expense is incurred by the caterer, there shall be no liability on our side." On the day named the defendants sent a cheque for 300*l.* to the plaintiff. On the following day it became known that the Review could not be held in consequence of the illness of the King. The cheque was stopped by the defendants:—Held, in an action by the contractor on the cheque, that upon the true construction of the contract the parties had provided for the contingency of the performance of the contract becoming impossible, and that the defendants were only liable to repay to the contractor the amount of the expense he had incurred, and were not liable to pay the 300*l.* Elliott v. Crutchley, 73 L. J. K.B. 406; [1904] 1 K. B. 565; 90 L. T. 497; 52 W. R. 499; 20 T. L. R. 286—C.A.

Countermand of Payment—Telegram Placed in Bank's Letter Box—Telegram Overlooked—Notice.—Payment of a cheque can be countermanded by telegram. A cheque drawn upon the defendants' bank was given by the plaintiff on October 31 to a third person. Upon the same day the plaintiff, after banking hours, sent a telegram to the bank countermanding payment of the cheque. The bank being closed, the telegram was put into the bank letter-box. On the next morning the bank cashier, when clearing the letter-box, by some accident left the telegram lying in the box, where it remained until the following morning, November 2, when it was opened. In the meantime the cheque was presented for payment on November 1, and was paid. In an action by the plaintiff to recover the sum so paid away as money had and received,—Held, by DARLING J., that the telegram having been delivered at the bank before the cheque was paid was a good countermand of payment, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover; by A. T. LAWRENCE, J., that the countermand of payment was not good until it was in fact brought to the knowledge of the bank, and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Cur-tice v. London City and Midland Bank, 23 T. L. R. 594—D. Reversed, C.A., 77 L. J. K.B. 34; [1908] 1 K.B. 293; 24 T. L. R. 176—C.A.

Receipt Annexed to Cheque—Unconditional Order to Pay—Negotiable Instrument.—The defendants, who were tobacco manufacturers, agreed with their customers to distribute among them annually for four years from April, 1902, their entire net profits on goods sold by them in the United Kingdom, and in addition the sum of 50,000*l.* each quarter in proportion to their purchases. The defendants paid the first quarterly bonus, and before the time for the second distribution arrived they sold their business and went into voluntary liquidation. They paid the second bonus to each customer by means of a cheque upon a banker, which was signed by the defendants and the liquidator, the cheque being stated as sent as the customer's share of the second and final bonus distribution. The cheque was payable to the customer or order, and at the foot were the words: "The receipt at back hereof must be signed, which signature will be taken as an endorsement of this cheque." On the back were the words: "Received from Mr. Joseph Hood (liquidator of Ogdens, Limited) this cheque for" the amount specified "being my share of the second and final bonus distribution of the company":—Held, that the cheque was a negotiable instrument, as the order to pay was unconditional, the words at the foot not being addressed to the banker and not affecting the order to them. Nathan v. Ogdens, Limited, 93 L. T. 553; 21 T. L. R. 775—A. T. Lawrence, J. See s.c. in C.A., ante, ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

Negotiability—Condition to Pay "against cheque."—A cheque was given in the following form: "Pay to Messrs. K. & H. against cheque or [the word "order" was deleted] four hundred pounds sterling":—Held, that the words "against cheque" had no effect upon the negotiability of the cheque so given. Glen v. Semple, 3 F. 1134—Ct. of Sess.

Condition Attaching to Delivery—Proof of—Negotiation.—A condition attached to the delivery of a cheque that the drawer should be entitled to stop payment unless he received within a specified time the cheque of a third party to meet it, may be proved by parol, and is effectual against an indorsee who is not a holder in due course. Semple v. Kyle, 4 F. 421—Ct. of Sess.

Cheque Drawn by Three Persons—Liability of Drawers to Bank.]—Three persons drew a cheque on a bank in favour of blank or order. None of the drawers had any funds at their credit with the bank at the time. The bank cashed the cheque, payment being made to one of the drawers, and opened an account in the names of the drawers, the account being debited with the amount of the cheque:—Held, that the drawers were jointly and severally liable to the bank for the amount of the cheque. Henderson v. Wallace & Pennell, 5 F. 166—Ct. of Sess.

Crossed Cheque—Receiving Payment for a Customer—Giving Credit to Customer before Cheque Cleared—Crediting Customer in Bank's Books—Negligence—Holding Out—Name of Individual same Name as Firm.]—A banker does not lose the protection of section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, merely because, before a crossed cheque paid in by a customer is cleared, he makes a credit entry in the bank's books or in the pass-book not communicated to the customer. Capital and Counties Bank v. Gordon (19 T. L. R. 462; [1903] A.C. 240) distinguished. It may be negligence on the part of a banker to receive payment for a customer of a crossed cheque marked "Account of payee," where the banker has information which may lead him to think that the account into which he is paying the amount of the cheque is not the payee's account. The defendants, however, held not negligent. Bevan v. National Bank, 23 T. L. R. 65—Channell, J.

—"Not negotiable"—"Customer"—Defective Title—Liability of Banker.]—A person accustomed to get cheques cashed at a bank, but having no account and no entry of debit or credit in any book or paper of the bank, is not a "customer" within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 82. Where, therefore, a bank gives cash to such person for a cheque obtained by fraud and marked "Not negotiable" and the cheque is honoured, the bank must refund the amount thereof to the drawer, its title being no better than that of the person for whom the cheque was cashed. Great Western Railway v. London and County Banking Co., 70 L. J. K.B. 915; [1901] A.C. 414; 85 L. T. 152; 50 W. R. 50; 6 Com. Cas. 275—H.L. (E.)

—Forged Indorsement—Banker Receiving Payment for Customer—Receiving Bank—Collecting Bank—Cheques Crossed Generally—Specially Crossed by Receiving Bank to Collecting Bank—"To account of" Receiving Bank—Crediting Customer when Cheque Cleared.]—The defendants, who were bankers, received from their customer cheques crossed generally. These they crossed specially to other bankers, adding words directing payment to their own account. They then entered the amounts of the cheques to the credit of their customer in their own books, but not in his pass-book. They did not themselves present the cheques for payment, but handed them to the bankers to whom they had specially crossed them, who cleared the cheques, credited the defendants' account with the amount, and informed the defendants that they had done so. The defendants then entered the amounts of the cheques in their customer's pass-book, and allowed him to draw against them:—Held, that they had merely received payment for a customer within the meaning of section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, and were protected by that enactment, although their customer, having forged the indorsements, had no title to the cheques. Akroherri (Ashanti) Mines v. Economic Bank, 73 L. J. K.B. 742; [1904] 2 K.B. 465; 91 L. T. 175; 52 W. R. 670; 9 Com. Cas. 281; 20 T. L. R. 564—Bigham, J.

—Collection—Negligence—Liability to True Owner.]—The Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 82, provides that where a banker without negligence receives payment of a crossed cheque for a customer who has no title to the cheque, the banker shall not incur any liability to the true owner of the cheque. A cheque for 542l. was drawn in favour of the plaintiffs, or order, and crossed generally. The plaintiffs' secretary indorsed the cheque with the name of the plaintiffs, followed by his own name and the word "secretary," and, without the authority of the plaintiffs, paid the cheque into his account at the defendants' bank for collection. The secretary had never previously paid into his own account a cheque drawn in favour of the plaintiffs. The defendants, without making any enquiry as to the authority of the secretary to deal with the cheque, placed the amount to the credit of the secretary, and collected the proceeds from the paying bank:—Held, that the defendants had not acted without negligence, and were liable to the plaintiffs for the amount of the cheque. Hannan's Lake View Central v. Armstrong & Co., 5 Com. Cas. 188—Kennedy, J.

—Agents to Collect Crossed Cheque—Holders for Value.]—J., a clerk of the plaintiff, stole certain cheques and forged the indorsement thereon. He paid them into his accounts at the defendants' bank, and his accounts were at once credited with them. The accounts were sometimes in credit and sometimes overdrawn. The stolen cheques were paid in at various times over a period of some four years. The cheques were, when paid in by J., (1) drawn in favour of G. or order on other banks and uncrossed; (2) drawn in favour of G. or bearer on other banks and uncrossed; (3) drawn on another branch of the defendants' bank, payable to order, and uncrossed; (4) drawn on another branch of the defendants' bank and crossed; (5) drawn on other banks, crossed, and marked "Not negotiable"; (6) drawn to order on other banks and crossed; (7) drawn to bearer on other banks and crossed. In collecting the cheques the defendants acted bona fide and without negligence. Held, that the defendants received all the cheques as agents to collect for their customer; that as to (1) and (2) they were liable for the conversion of the proceeds, but that as to (3), (4) they were protected by section 60 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, and as to (5), (6), (7) they were also protected by section 82 of the same Act. Gordon v. London, City, and Midland Bank, 83 L. T. 762—Bucknill, J.

The defendants also received, crossed, a document addressed to a banker, stating: "Pay to — the sum named below on presentation of the subjoined receipt duly signed and dated." Held, that the defendants were entitled to the protection of section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, by virtue of section 17 of the Revenue Act, 1883. Bankers are not deprived of the protection of section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, by reason of crossing, for the purpose of collection, crossed cheques received by them. Ib.

Cheque to Order Crossed by Banker.—Where a cheque payable to order is handed by a customer to a banker uncrossed the banker cannot claim the protection of section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, upon the ground that he crossed the cheque upon receipt of it. Fenwick, Stobart & Co., In re; Deep Sea Fishery Co., ex parte, 71 L. J. Ch. 321; [1902] 1 Ch. 507; 86 L. T. 193; 9 Manson, 205—Buckley, J.

Crossed Cheque on Branch Bank Paid into another Branch.—A cheque payable to order drawn upon one branch of a bank was paid crossed into another branch of the bank by a customer who had forged upon it the indorsement of the drawee. The bank dealt with the cheque in good faith, without negligence, and in the ordinary course of business by entries in their books debiting the drawer and crediting the customer paying the cheque in with the amount thereof:—Held, in an action by the drawee against the bank for conversion of the cheque, that, if the provisions of sections 79 and 80 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, involving the employment of two banks in the transaction, were applicable, the bank had satisfied the requirements of those sections; and, if those sections did not apply, section 60 of the Act protected the bank from liability to the drawee. Ib.

9. PROMISSORY NOTE.

Inchoate Instrument—Blank Stamped Paper Filled up by Agent in Excess of Authority—Note in Hands of Payee—Applicability of Common Law Doctrine of Estoppel—Holder in Due Course—Negotiation.—A person who has signed a blank stamped paper, and delivered it to an agent authorising him to fill it up as a promissory note for a certain amount payable to a named payee for the purpose of obtaining an advance from the payee is estopped from asserting against the payee, who has bona fide advanced money on the note, that the agent has exceeded his authority as to the amount, provided that the stamp covers the amount for which the note has been filled up. Lloyd's Bank v. Cooke, 76 L. J. K.B. 666; [1907] 1 K.B. 794; 96 L. T. 715; 23 T. L. R. 429—C.A.

Section 20 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, whatever the true construction of it may be, has not the effect of preventing the common law doctrine of estoppel from being applicable to negotiable instruments. Ib.

Per FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.—According to the true construction of section 20 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, the estoppel created by the proviso to that section operates in favour of a payee of a promissory note as well as in favour of an indorsee. Ib.

Sum Payable “together with any interest that may accrue thereon”—“Sum certain.”—An obligation to pay a capital sum on demand “together with any interest that may accrue thereon” is not a promissory note, as, the rate of interest not being specified, the obligation is not for a sum certain, as required by the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882. Lamberton v. Aiken, 2 F. 189—Ct. of Sess.

Form—Joint and Several Agreement—Condition as to Rights of Holder.—A condition added to an instrument purporting to be a joint and several promissory note, “that no time given to or security taken from or composition or arrangement entered into with either party hereto shall prejudice the rights of the holder to proceed against any other party,” does not deprive the instrument of its character as a promissory note within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882. Yates v. Evans (61 L. J. Q.B. 446) approved. Kirkwood v. Smith (65 L. J. Q.B. 408; [1896] 1 Q.B. 582) overruled. Kirkwood v. Carroll, 72 L. J. K.B. 208; [1903] 1 K.B. 581; 88 L. T. 52; 51 W. R. 374—C.A.

Signature Obtained by Fraud—Negligence—Holder in Due Course.—Where a person has been induced to sign a promissory note by a fraudulent representation that he is witnessing a deed, and at the time he signs it he believes he is witnessing a deed, and has no knowledge of the existence of the promissory note, and the jury negative negligence upon his part in so signing the document, he is not estopped in an action brought against him upon the note by the payee of the note from relying upon the true facts as a defence, and such facts afford an answer to the action. Lewis v. Clay, 67 L. J. Q.B. 224; 77 L. T. 653; 46 W. R. 319—Lord Russell of Killowen, C.J.

The payee of a promissory note is not a “holder in due course” within the meaning of section 29 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, inasmuch as he is not a person to whom, after its completion by and as between the immediate parties, the note has been negotiated. Even if the plaintiff had been a “holder in due course” he would not upon the facts stated above have been entitled to recover. Ib.

The law as declared by Foster v. Mackinnon (38 L. J. C.P. 310; L. R. 4 C.P. 704) is still in force, and has not been altered by the Act of 1882. Ib.

Alteration whether “material” or “apparent”—Insertion of Word “Limited” after Name of Company.—A promissory note was made in Liverpool and posted to Canada by which the defendants promised to pay to the order of “The Goderich Organ Co.” a certain sum. “The Goderich Organ Co.” having been converted into a limited company called “The Goderich Co., Lim.,” an officer of that company, without the consent or knowledge of the defendants as makers of the note, inserted the word "Limited" on the face of the note and indorsed it on behalf of the limited company to the plaintiffs, who were holders in due course. There was sufficient space within which to write the word "Limited" on the face of the note, and the plaintiffs took it without any knowledge that it had been altered. The note being dishonoured on presentation, the plaintiffs sued to recover the amount due upon it:—Held, that the insertion of the word "Limited" on the face of the note, if a "material," was not an "apparent" alteration; that, consequently, by section 64 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, the note was payable according to its original tenor—that is, was payable as if the word "Limited" had not been inserted; and therefore that the indorsement was irregular and did not entitle the plaintiffs to sue upon it. Bank of Montreal v. Exhibit and Trading Co., 11 Com. Cas. 250; 22 T. L. R. 722—Phillimore, J.

Note Payable Abroad—Stamp Required when Sued on in England.—Section 72, sub-section 1 (a) of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which provides that "where a bill is issued out of the United Kingdom it is not invalid by reason only that it is not stamped in accordance with the law of the place of issue," does not exempt a bill or note made abroad from the necessity of complying with the requirements of the English Stamp Act when the bill or note is sued on in this country. Id.

Promissory Note Payable on Demand Given to Payee not for Negotiation—Note left in Possession of Payee after Payment by Maker—Indorsement to Third Party for Value by Payee after Payment—Note Obtained by Fraud from Indorsee by Payee and Returned to Maker—Maker no Better Title as against Indorsee than Payee—Estoppel—Holder "in his own right."—The words "in his own right" in section 61 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which provides that "when the acceptor of a bill of exchange is or becomes the holder of it at or after its maturity, in his own right, the bill is discharged," do not mean merely "not in a representative character," as executor, for instance, but mean a holder having a right to the instrument not subject to that of any one else, but good against all the world. Nash v. De Freville, 69 L. J. Q.B. 484; [1900] 2 Q.B. 72; 82 L. T. 642; 48 W. R. 434—O.A.

The defendant at various periods made five promissory notes, payable on demand, which he handed to the payee, who promised not to negotiate them. The first three notes were given to the payee as security for money due to him, and the remaining two promissory notes were given in substitution for the first three, which the defendant allowed to remain in the payee's possession. The payee, in violation of his promise, indorsed the five promissory notes for value to the plaintiffs, and without notice of any defect in their title, who gave him a cheque for a sum exceeding the total amount of the promissory notes. This cheque was duly met by the plaintiffs. Subsequently the defendant paid the payee a sum of money for the purpose of discharging his liability on the last two promissory notes which were not handed back to the defendant by the payee, nor did the defendant then know that they had been negotiated by the payee. The plaintiffs having pressed the payee for payment of the promissory notes, he gave them his cheque and received back the five promissory notes, which he immediately sent by post to the defendant, who received them the next day and destroyed them. The payee absconded, and the cheque given by him to the plaintiffs was dishonoured. The plaintiffs sued the defendant on the promissory notes, and alternatively claimed for a conversion of the same:—Held, that the defendant came within the rule laid down in Lickbarrow v. Mason (2 Term Rep. 63) as being the person who had enabled the payee to occasion the plaintiffs' loss, and that he must therefore sustain it. Held also, that even if there was any consideration for the transfer of the promissory notes by the payee to the defendant, yet under the circumstances he could acquire as against the plaintiffs no better title than the payee had. Id.

Blank Form with Signature Thereto—Delivery to Agent to Negotiate only on Receiving Instructions—Negotiation by Agent without Instructions—Liability of Principal—Estoppel.—The defendant on leaving Cape Colony for England gave to T. and W. a power of attorney to manage all his affairs in the colony. He also left with them two lithographed forms of promissory notes, containing the words "promise to pay," and signed by him, but left blank in all other respects, and unstamped, informing them that these forms were only to be filled up and negotiated on his sending them instructions from England to that effect. Subsequently T., without having received any instructions from the defendant, and in fraud of the defendant, filled up the notes and discounted them to the plaintiff, who acted in good faith and without notice of the limitation of T.'s authority. T. having converted the proceeds of the notes to his own use, and the plaintiff having brought an action upon the notes against the defendant,—Held, that, as the defendant had never authorized T. to fill up and issue the notes, he was not estopped from denying that they had been made with his authority, and that the plaintiff could not recover. Smith v. Prosser, 77 L. J. K.B. 71; [1907] 2 K.B. 735; 97 L. T. 155; 23 T. L. R. 597—C.A.

Note in Hands of Payee—Incomplete Instrument—Negotiation.—The defendant applied to A. for a loan of 15*l.*, and gave him his signature in blank on stamped paper authorising him to fill it up as a promissory note payable to himself for 15*l.* A. fraudulently filled it up as a promissory note for 30*l.* payable to the plaintiff, who took it and gave value for it without having any knowledge that A. had exceeded his authority. The amount of the stamp was sufficient for a note for 30*l.*:—Held, that there had been no negotiation of the note after completion to a holder in due course within the meaning of the proviso to section 20, sub-section 2 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, and that the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to recover. Herdman v. Wheeler, 71 L. J. K.B. 270; [1902] 1 K.B. 361; 86 L. T. 48; 50 W. R. 300—D.

1. WHAT IS.

Sale and Hire-Purchase Agreement—Loan Secured by Mortgage on Furniture.]—By an agreement dated May 4, 1899, the bankrupt agreed to purchase from S. a freehold hotel, together with the furniture, fittings, and effects on the premises, for 30,000*l.* The purchase was to be completed on May 15, 1899. Being in want of money to complete the purchase, the bankrupt applied to the defendants for a loan of 2,000*l.*, and offered as a security a fourth mortgage on the hotel. This the defendants refused, and suggested that the bankrupt should give them a bill of sale on the furniture, but this he declined to do. The defendants then offered to buy the furniture from S. and to let it to the bankrupt on a hire-purchase agreement, and to this the bankrupt agreed. Accordingly on May 15, the day fixed for the completion, but before the actual completion, the defendants, out of their own moneys, purchased the furniture, fixtures, and effects from S., and after the completion they let the same to the bankrupt on a hire-purchase agreement. This agreement was not registered as a bill of sale. On December 13, 1900, a receiving order was made against the bankrupt, and he was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt. The plaintiff, the trustee in bankruptcy, claimed the furniture as forming part of the bankrupt's estate:—Held, that the transaction was in substance a loan by the defendants to the bankrupt secured by a mortgage of the furniture, which was void for want of registration under the Bills of Sale Acts, 1878 and 1882. Mellor's Trustee v. Maas, 72 L. J. K.B. 82; [1903] 1 K.B. 226; 88 L. T. 50; 10 Manson, 26—C.A.

— Colourable Transaction—Inference of Fact—Registration.]—The appellant advanced money to a hotel keeper, who subsequently became bankrupt, on a hire-and-purchase agreement of the furniture, under which the purchase-money was to be paid by instalments. The agreement was not registered as a bill of sale:—Held, on the evidence, that the transaction was not a real sale, but a loan on security, and that the agreement was, for want of registration as a bill of sale, void against the trustee in bankruptcy. Maas v. Pepper, 74 L. J. K.B. 452; [1905] A.C. 102; 92 L. T. 371; 53 W. R. 513; 12 Manson, 107; 21 T. L. R. 304—H.L. (E.)

Letters of Lien—Secured Creditor—Order and Disposition—Bankruptcy.]—The debtors purchased goods in England for shipment to India upon the orders of a firm there. The goods had to be sent to bleachers to be prepared, and for the purpose of paying for the goods the debtors obtained advances from a bank, to whom they gave letters of lien stating that the advances were loans on the security of goods in preparation for shipment to the East, and that as security for the advance the debtors held the goods then in the hands of the bleachers on the bank's account and under lien to them. The bleachers' receipts for the goods were inclosed with the letters of lien. The debtors were adjudged bankrupt while some of the goods were in the hands of the bleachers, and other goods were in the debtors' warehouse, having been sent there from the bleachers, in respect of which letters of lien had been given to the bank. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the goods upon the ground that the letters of lien were bills of sale, and therefore void as not being in the required form and not having been registered:—Held (STIRLING, L.J., dubitante), that the letters of lien came within the exceptions mentioned in section 4 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, as being documents “used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods,” and therefore were not bills of sale. Hamilton, Young & Co., In re; Carter, ex parte, 74 L. J. K.B. 905; [1905] 2 K.B. 772; 93 L. T. 591; 54 W. R. 260; 12 Manson, 365; 21 T. L. R. 757—C.A.

Verbal Agreement for Sale of Goods—Valuation and Inventory—Lease of Chattels in Schedule.]—I. being indebted to H., agreed to sell his “valuation” at the M. S. Hotel to him, T. to value for both. T. then prepared and signed an inventory and valuation for 930l. 12s. 7d., which was stamped and dated August 9, 1902. Subsequently, on September 12, 1902, H. granted I. a quarterly lease of the M. S. Hotel, and also let to him the fixtures and effects set out in the schedule, and at the end of the lease it was stated, "the whole of the valuation as per inventory is the property of J. R. Holmes and Sons, brewers, Bingley," and this was signed by I.:—Held, that neither the document of August 9 nor the lease of September 12 constituted a bill of sale, as there was a good sale, which passed the property independently of the documents. Clapham v. Ives, 91 L. T. 69—D.

Inventory with Receipt Attached—Sale by Sheriff—Receipt of Sheriff's Officer—Subsequent Hire of Goods to Execution Debtor.—In April, 1901, the goods of an execution debtor were seized by the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa. By consent of the execution debtor the goods were, on April 22, sold by the sheriff to the claimant for 240l., and the claimant paid this sum to the sheriff and took formal possession of the goods on the same day. The claimant, on April 25, let the goods on hire to the execution debtor, who remained in possession thereof, and on the same day the claimant wrote to the auctioneers who had been employed by the sheriff with a view to a sale by auction, asking them to send him an inventory of the goods. The claimant wished for the inventory in order that it might be attached to the hire agreement. The auctioneer sent to the claimant a receipt, dated April 27, and signed by the sheriff's officer, for the purchase-money of the goods, though the claimant had not asked for it, and also the inventory. In 1904 the goods were seized under a writ of fi. fa. issued under another judgment against the execution debtor:—Held, that it was the intention of all parties that the property in the goods should pass to the claimant on April 22, 1901, and that the sale was complete on that day; that neither the inventory and receipt nor the receipt alone were intended to be an instrument of transfer or a record of the transaction; and that, therefore, neither of them required registration as a bill of sale. Stammers v. Margrett, 21 T. L. R. 342—Walton, J.

Marriage Settlement—Assignment of Personal Chattels.—An assignment of personal chattels to the trustees of a marriage settlement in pursuance of a covenant by the husband to settle all his after-acquired property except business assets does not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, being within the exception of a marriage settlement contained in section 4. Wenman v. Lyon (60 L. J. Q.B. 668; [1891] 2 Q.B. 192) and Courcier v. Bardili (27 Sol. J. 276) followed. Reis, In re; Clough, ex parte, 73 L. J. K.B. 929; [1904] 2 K.B. 769; 91 L. T. 592; 53 W. Mortgage—Trade Fixtures with Freehold—Power to sell Fixtures Separately—Validity.—The decisions under the repealed Bills of Sale Act, 1854—such as Daglish, Ex parte (42 L. J. Bk. 102; L. R. 8 Ch. 1072)—that a mortgage enabling the mortgagee to sell trade fixtures separately requires to be registered as a bill of sale under that Act, are not limited to mortgages of leaseholds, where the mortgagor's interest in the land is of a different nature to his interest in the fixtures, but apply also to mortgages of freeholds, where the fixtures are essentially parts of the freehold, and pass by the grant. Johns v. Ware, 68 L. J. Ch. 155; [1899] 1 Ch. 359; 80 L. T. 112; 47 W. R. 202; 6 Manson, 38—Romer, J.

2. FORM.

Grantor Generally Known by Assumed Name.]

—The Bills of Sale Act, 1878, contains no provision which makes it necessary to state the name of the grantor, and consequently the description of the grantor in the bill of sale, in the affidavit filed with the Registrar, and in the register, by a name other than that by which he is generally known, will not, in the absence of any intention to mislead creditors, invalidate the registration. Stokes v. Spencer, 69 L. J. Q.B. 792; [1900] 2 Q.B. 483; 83 L. T. 199; 49 W. R. 13; 7 Manson, 402—D.

Omission of Name of Grantor and of Attesting Witness in Filed Copy.]

—The omission of the name of the grantor of a bill of sale and of the name and address of the attesting witness in the copy thereof filed upon registration under section 10, sub-section 2 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878—those particulars being contained in the affidavit filed with such copy—does not render the bill of sale void. Thomas v. Roberts (67 L. J. Q.B. 478; [1898] 1 Q.B. 657) followed. Coates v. Moore, 72 L. J. K.B. 539; [1903] 2 K.B. 140; 89 L. T. 8; 51 W. R. 648; 10 Manson, 271—C.A.

Affidavit with Description of Residence and Occupation—Manager of Business at Weekly Salary.]

—The description of a grantor of a bill of sale, in the affidavit filed under section 10, sub-section 2 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, as a married woman, does not satisfy the statutory requirement when her occupation as manager to a Court milliner is omitted. Kemble v. Addison, 69 L. J. Q.B. 299; [1900] 1 Q.B. 430; 82 L. T. 91; 48 W. R. 331; 7 Manson, 156—D.

Variation in Address of Grantors in Bill and Affidavit—Misdescription—Validity.]

In a bill of sale the grantors were described as W. D., of 25 B. F. Road; L. D., of 93 B. F. Road; K., of 94 W. Road. In the affidavit the addresses were: 23 B. F. Road; 23 B. F. Road; 24 W. Road:—Held, that the bill of sale was void for misdescription. Murray v. Mackenzie (L. R. 10 C.P. 625) followed. Marks v. Derrick, 80 L. T. 60—D.

Bill of Sale by Two Grantors not Jointly Interested in Chattels Assigned.]

—A bill of sale given by two or more grantors, who are not joint owners of the chattels comprised in the schedule to the bill of sale—each being owner of a portion only of the chattels, and the portion belonging to each not being distinguishable in the schedule—is void under section 9 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, as not being made in accordance with the form in the schedule to the Act. Saunders v. White, 71 L. J. K.B. 818; [1902] 1 K.B. 472; 86 L. T. 173; 50 W. R. 825; 9 Manson, 113—C.A.

Omission of Date in Filed Copy—"True copy."]

—The omission of the date of a bill of sale in the copy thereof filed upon registration under section 10, sub-section 2 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, does not necessarily render the bill of sale void; and the affidavit filed with the copy may be looked at to supply the omission. Thomas v. Roberts, 67 L. J. Q.B. 478; [1898] 1 Q.B. 657; 78 L. T. 712; 5 Manson, 70—D.

Omission of Address of Grantee—Grantee a Limited Company—Sufficiency of Description.]—The omission of the address of the grantee from a bill of sale given by way of security for the payment of money renders the bill void under section 9 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, as not being made in accordance with the form in the schedule to that Act, even where the grantee is a limited company, the name of which alone is ordinarily sufficient for purposes of identification. Altree v. Altree, 67 L. J. Q.B. 882; [1898] 2 Q.B. 267; 78 L. T. 794; 47 W. R. 60; 5 Manson, 235—D.

“Defeasance or condition”—Collateral Security—Guarantee by Third Person.]—A collateral security given by a third person upon the execution of a bill of sale, being a guarantee by that person for the payment of the principal advanced and the interest in case the bill of sale should prove insufficient or inoperative for that purpose, is not a “condition or defeasance” within the meaning of section 10, sub-section 3 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, so as to require registration. The Court refused to re-open the transaction under section 1 of the Money-lenders Act, 1900. Oakes v. Green, 23 T. L. R. 560—Channell, J.

Statement of Consideration—“Now paid”—Joint Debt of Grantor and Grantee—Unmatured Promissory Note.]—The consideration for a bill of sale is none the less truly set forth to be “now paid” because part is applied by the grantee in pursuance of a contemporaneous agreement in retiring a current promissory note upon which the grantor and grantee are jointly and severally liable. Richardson v. Harris (22 Q.B. D. 268) distinguished. Wiltshire, In re; Eymon, ex parte, 69 L. J. Q.B. 145; [1900] 1 Q.B. 96; 81 L. T. 616; 48 W. R. 256; 7 Manson, 145—D.

—True Consideration—Payment off of Prior Bill of Sale with Money Advanced.]—Where the money consideration as set forth in a bill of sale has been actually paid to the grantor it is not necessary to refer to the payment off of a prior bill of sale out of the proceeds. Davies, In re; Equitable Investment Co., ex parte, 77 L. T. 567; 4 Manson, 358—Wright, J.

—Provision for Repayment of Principal and Interest by Monthly Instalments of a Specified Amount—Interest.]—Where the principal and interest advanced on a bill of sale is to be repaid by regular instalments of a specified amount the holder is in the same position as if the date of repayment which can be gathered by calculation had been inserted in the bill of sale, and can only be redeemed by payment of interest to that date. Id.

—“Now due and owing.”]—A statement in a bill of sale that it is granted “in consideration of a sum of 90*l.* now due and owing” does not truly set forth the consideration for which it is given, within the meaning of section 8 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, when the grantor already owes 40*l.* of the 90*l.* to the grantee, and only receives the additional 50*l.* on execution of the bill of sale. Davies v. Jenkins, 69 L. J. Q.B. 187; [1900] 1 Q.B. 133; 81 L. T. 788; 48 W. R. 286; 7 Manson, 149—D.

Omission of Receipt.]—The omission of an acknowledgment of the receipt of the consideration by the grantor is a departure from the form in the Act which renders the bill of sale void under section 9. Id.

Estoppel—Approbating and Reprobating the Transaction—Bill of Sale Invalid.]—The defendant gave a bill of sale over his goods to the plaintiffs. Subsequently executions were levied upon the goods, and on each occasion the plaintiffs, at the request or with the knowledge and concurrence of the defendant, successfully asserted their title to the goods under the bill of sale. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendant, the latter alleged that the bill of sale was invalid, the consideration not being truly stated:—Held, that the defendant could not set up the invalidity of the bill of sale, as he could not both affirm and disaffirm the transaction. Comitti v. Maher, 94 L. T. 158; 22 T. L. R. 121—Kekewich, J.

Title Deeds Included in Schedule—Assigned as Personal Chattels without Creating Charge on Land.]—The owner of land may deal with the title deeds as mere personal chattels divorced from the land. Dicta in Barton v. Gainer (27 L. J. Ex. 390; 3 H. & N. 387) approved and followed. Swanley Coal Co. v. Denton, 75 L. J. K.B. 1009; [1906] 2 K.B. 873; 95 L. T. 659; 13 Manson, 353—C.A.

By a bill of sale the grantor assigned to the grantee the several chattels and things specifically described in the schedule thereto annexed then being in and about the Lion Hotel, by way of security for a loan; and thereby covenanted to insure the chattels and things, and to pay rates and taxes in respect of the premises in which the same might be. It was further provided that the grantee should be at liberty to remove and sell the same at the expiration of five days from seizure or taking possession thereof. The schedule specifically enumerated certain furniture and effects, and concluded with “Assignment of lease of the Lion Hotel, and all the muniments of title referred to in the said assignment”:—Held (COZENS-HARDY, L.J., dissenting), that, according to the true construction of the bill of sale, the title deeds included in the schedule were granted as personal chattels severed from the leasehold interest to which they related, and not with the intention of creating any charge thereon, and that therefore the bill of sale was not void under the Bills of Sale (1878) Amendment Act, 1882, s. 9. Cochrane v. Entwistle (59 L. J. Q.B. 418; 25 Q.B. D. 116) distinguished. Id.

Schedule—Live Farming Stock—Specific Description.]—The schedule to a bill of sale setting out the live farming stock assigned by the grantor as “2 horses, 4 cows, and 1 calf” is not such a sufficiently specific description as to satisfy section 4 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882.

Davies v. Jenkins, 69 L. J. Q.B. 187; [1900] 1 Q.B. 133; 81 L. T. 788; 48 W. R. 286; 7 Manson, 149—D.

Time for Payment—"On or before a fixed day"—Defeasance of Security.—A bill of sale containing an agreement by the grantor to pay principal and interest "on or before" a fixed day is not void under section 9 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, as not being in accordance with the statutory form. De Braam v. Ford, 69 L. J. Ch. 82; [1900] 1 Ch. 142; 81 L. T. 568; 7 Manson, 28—C.A.

Covenant to Produce Last Receipt for Rent on Verbal Demand—Power to Seize.—By a bill of sale the grantor covenanted that when called upon by the grantee he would produce to him the policy of insurance and the receipt for the last premium and the last receipt for the rent, rates, and taxes. The bill of sale contained a proviso that the chattels thereby assigned should not be liable to seizure or to be taken possession of by the grantee for any cause other than those specified in section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, and also a further proviso that if the chattels thereby assigned should be seized or taken possession of by the grantee in consequence of the breach of any of the covenants therein contained, the grantee should be at liberty to remove or sell the same as therein mentioned:—Held, that the power given to the grantee to seize in default of the production of the last receipt for rent, rates, and taxes, on a verbal demand, coupled with a further proviso as to compliance with the Act, did not render the bill of sale invalid as not being in accordance with the form in the schedule to the Bills of Sale Act, 1882. Bullock, In re; Ward, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 953; [1899] 2 Q.B. 517; 81 L. T. 268; 48 W. R. 46—Wright, J.

Covenant to Replace Goods worn out—Term for Maintenance of Security.—A bill of sale on household goods is not void as not being in accordance with the form in the schedule to the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, because it contains a covenant by the grantor to replace any articles worn out with others of equal value, such a covenant being one which can be included in the bill of sale as being for the maintenance of the security. Seed v. Bradley (63 L. J. Q.B. 387; [1894] 1 Q.B. 319) followed. Coates v. Moore, 72 L. J. K.B. 539; [1903] 2 K.B. 140; 89 L. T. 8; 51 W. R. 648; 10 Manson, 271—C.A.

Amount of Interest and Period when Amount Payable Uncertain.—By a bill of sale, in consideration of 50*l.* due and owing from the grantor to the grantee, the grantor assigned to the grantee certain chattels in the schedule "by way of security for the payment of the said sum of 50*l.*" The grantor further agreed that he would pay the grantee "the said principal sum with interest thereon after the rate of 5*l.* per centum per annum by the following instalments—namely, 10*l.* on the 25th Dec. 1903, and the like sum of 10*l.* on the 25th March, the 24th June, the 29th Sept., and the 25th Dec. in each year succeeding, until the whole amount be duly paid":—Held, that the bill of sale was void, as not being in accordance with the statutory form in the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882. Attia v. Finch, 91 L. T. 70—D.

Repayment of Sum Secured—Ambiguity—Validity.—By a bill of sale the grantor assigned to the grantee certain chattels by way of security for the sum of 70*l.*, and interest thereon at the rate of 1*s.* in the pound per month, and the grantor further agreed that he would pay to the grantee the principal sum and the interest "by monthly payments of seven on the 25th day of every month" succeeding the date of the bill of sale:—Held, that it being clear from the terms of the deed that the sum intended to be inserted in the clause was "seven pounds," the bill of sale was not void as not being in accordance with the form in the schedule to the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882. Mourmand v. Le Clair, 72 L. J. K.B. 496; [1903] 2 K.B. 216; 88 L. T. 738; 51 W. R. 589; 10 Manson, 261—D.

3. NON-REGISTRATION.

Apparent Possession—Bona Fide Purchase—Execution Creditor.—The owner of certain furniture, which was in a house occupied by him, sold it in 1903 to a company by an agreement which was not registered as a bill of sale, and in 1904 the company bona fide sold it to the original owner's mother by a document which was not registered. The furniture remained in the apparent possession of the original owner till 1905, when it was seized in execution under a judgment obtained against him. His mother having claimed the furniture,—Held, that as she could not shew either a registered title or that she had taken possession so as to render registration unnecessary, the title of the execution creditor must prevail. Hopkins v. Gudgeon, 75 L. J. K.B. 452; [1906] 1 K.B. 690; 94 L. T. 578; 54 W. R. 419; 13 Manson, 363—D.

Goods not in Apparent Possession.—The bankrupt, being indebted to a friend, and having no property but her furniture, transferred the furniture in satisfaction of the loan, and carried out the transaction by documents which were found in fact to constitute an absolute bill of sale. Subsequently the sheriff seized the goods in execution, and was actually in possession when the bankrupt filed her own petition. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the furniture, and sought to set aside the bill of sale as void for want of registration:—Held, following Saffery, Ex parte; Brenner, in re (16 Ch. D. 669), that the bill of sale could not be avoided, because at the date when the bankrupt filed her petition the goods were not in her possession or apparent possession, but in the possession of the sheriff. Eales, In re; Steel, ex parte, 54 W. R. 202—D.

4. SEIZURE AND SALE.

Seizure for Purpose of Maintaining Security—Default in Payment of Interest—Relief—Jurisdiction to Order Bill of Sale to be Delivered up.—By a bill of sale given to secure the repayment of an advance and interest thereon at the rate of 60 per cent. per annum, the grantor covenanted to repay the principal sum at the expiration of twelve months, and the interest by equal monthly instalments on the 8th of each month during the twelve months. The grantor having made default in the payment of the sixth monthly instalment of interest, the grantee seized the chattels comprised in the bill of sale, the warrant to the bailiff authorising him to take and hold possession until the monthly instalment of interest was paid. Upon an application by the grantor for relief under section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882,—Held, that the grantee having seized, not for the purpose of realising but merely of maintaining the security, the Court had no jurisdiction to order the bill of sale to be given up to the grantor upon payment by him of the principal sum advanced and interest to date. Wickens, Ex parte (67 L. J. Q.B. 397; [1898] 1 Q.B. 543), approved and distinguished. Ellis, Ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 734; [1898] 2 Q.B. 79; 78 L. T. 733; 46 W. R. 531; 5 Manson, 231—C.A.

Seizure of Chattels Assigned for Purpose of Realising the Security—Non-production of Last Receipt for Rent—Reasonable Excuse—Tender of Principal and Interest to Date—Such "order as may seem just."—Five days after the execution of a bill of sale by which the chattels were assigned to secure the repayment of a loan at the expiration of one year, and the payment of interest thereon by monthly instalments, the grantee demanded in writing that the grantor's rent receipt for the previous quarter should be sent to him by post. The receipt was not sent, and eight days later the grantee seized the assigned chattels, demanding the principal sum lent with the full interest for one year and costs of levy. The grantor applied at chambers for relief under section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882. The rent, the receipt for which was demanded, was thirty-two days overdue at the time of the seizure, and it did not appear that the landlord had asked for payment of it:—Held, that as the grantee had seized for the purpose of realising his security, the Judge at chambers had jurisdiction to order the bill of sale to be given up on payment of the principal with interest to the date of seizure. Held also, that as the grantee had not shewn that the failure of the grantor to produce her last receipt for rent was without reasonable excuse, the seizure was wrongful, and the Judge was right in refusing to allow the grantee the costs of levy. Held also (per CHITTY, L.J., and COLLINS, L.J.), that a demand in writing for a receipt to be sent by post is not a demand in writing to produce the receipt within the meaning of section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882. Cotton, Ex parte (11 Q.B. D. 301), approved. Wickens, Ex parte, 67 L. J. Q.B. 397; [1898] 1 Q.B. 543; 78 L. T. 213; 46 W. R. 385; 5 Manson, 55—C.A.

Covenant to Produce Last Receipt for Rent on Verbal Demand.—By a bill of sale the grantor covenanted that when called upon by the grantee he would produce to him the policy of insurance and the receipt for the last premium and the last receipt for the rent, rates, and taxes. The bill of sale contained a proviso that the chattels thereby assigned should not be liable to seizure or to be taken possession of by the grantee for any cause other than those specified in section 7 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, and also a further proviso that if the chattels thereby assigned should be seized or taken possession of by the grantee in consequence of the breach of any of the covenants therein contained, the grantee should be at liberty to remove or sell the same as therein mentioned:—Held, that the power given to the grantee to seize in default of the production of the last receipt for rent, rates, and taxes, on a verbal demand, coupled with a further proviso as to compliance with the Act, did not render the bill of sale invalid as not being in accordance with the form in the schedule to the Bills of Sale Act, 1882. Bullock, In re; Ward, ex parte, 68 L. J. Q.B. 953; [1899] 2 Q.B. 517; 81 L. T. 268; 48 W. R. 46; 6 Manson, 367—Wright, J.

Principal and Interest Repayable by Instalments—Sale by Mortgagee under Authority of Mortgagor—Account—Interest Subsequent to Sale.—A sale of chattels by the grantee of a bill of sale under an express authority from the grantor will be treated by the Court upon the same principle as a sale by a mortgagee under a power of sale, or as a sale by the Court under the Interpleader Rules. West v. Diprose, 69 L. J. Ch. 169; [1900] 1 Ch. 337; 82 L. T. 20; 48 W. R. 389; 64 J. P. 281; 7 Manson, 152—Cozens-Hardy, J.

Where a bill of sale of the furniture and effects in a house provided for the repayment of the principal sum advanced and interest by means of ten monthly instalments, and after one instalment had been paid the grantor authorised and requested the grantee to sell the house and furniture and deduct whatever the grantor was liable to pay under the bill of sale, and the sale realised more than enough to pay the principal and interest due to that date, the grantee will not be entitled to claim any interest after the date of the sale. Ib.

5. ABSOLUTE BILL OF SALE.

Registration Void—Assignment of Goods by Grantee—Title of Assignee—Execution Creditor of Grantor—Apparent Possession—Interpleader.—The grantee of goods under an absolute bill of sale assigned the goods by a duly registered bill of sale. At the date of the second bill of sale the first was unregistered:—Held, that the second bill of sale conveyed a title valid against all who became execution creditors of the grantor of the first bill of sale after the date of the second. Cookson v. Swire (54 L. J. Q.B. 249; 9 App. Cas. 653) followed. Antoniadi v. Smith, 70 L. J. K.B. 869; [1901] 2 K.B. 589; 85 L. T. 200; 49 W. R. 693; 8 Manson, 335—C.A.

Penalty—Interest—Payments Made of Interest as Such—Administration Suit—Payment by Receiver.]—After a decree for administration of real and personal estate, a receiver who had been previously appointed by deed to collect the rents of the landed property of the deceased, and to keep down the interest on the incumbrances, and who was also a mortgagee in possession, was left undisturbed in possession by the Court. One of the incumbrances was a bond debt for 500*l.*, on which judgment had been entered, and the judgment was registered as a mortgage against the lands. Interest was paid by the receiver, under orders of the Court, for a number of years to the bond creditor, and accounts were passed in the suit, and embodied in the final decretal order, shewing that the payments were appropriated to interest, and that the principal sum of 500*l.* was due to the bond creditor at the date of the final order, December 17, 1867. Further payments were made by the executors of the deceased, and by the Court receiver—all expressly on account of interest—down to January, 1897. The total amount of the payments exceeded the penalty of the bond. All creditors prior to the bond creditor had been paid off, when some further lands were sold, the proceeds of which came to be allocated. The bond creditor claimed to be paid 500*l.* for principal, and the interest accrued since January, 1897. A subsequent creditor having challenged the right of the bond creditor to receive anything further than the amount of the penalty of the bond,—Held, that the payments having been made as interest, and applied as such, and the amount of the interest due at any one time, together with the principal, never having reached the penalty, the rule which prevents a bond creditor from being paid more than the amount of the penalty did not apply. *Hatton v. — Penal Sum—Interest—Damages.]—A bond in a penal sum with a condition to make void the same upon payment of a lesser sum with interest thereon up to and at a certain date is an interest-bearing security, the interest being recoverable as interest, and not as damages; and interest can be recovered from the date of the bond to the date of payment. *Cook v. Bond by Husband to Wife's Trustees—Receipt of Wife's Income by Husband—Constructive Payment of Interest—Bond for Principal and Interest at Specified Date—Penalty—Bar by Lapse of Time.]—Under a marriage settlement money belonging to the wife was authorised to be invested on personal security, and the interest directed to be paid to the wife for her separate use for life, and after her death to her husband for life. The money was advanced by the trustees to the husband on his bond. The wife lived twenty-four years after the date of the bond, and the husband survived her for twenty years. They lived together in amity. For the whole forty-four years no interest on the bond was paid by the husband, and after his death the bond was found amongst his papers:—Held, that there was no presumption of payment of the bond by the husband, that the debt secured by the bond was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, and that the capital sum was recoverable from the husband's executors, together with interest from the date of his death. Dixon, In re; Heynes v. Dixon, 68 L. J. Ch. 689; [1899] 2 Ch. 561; 48 W. R. 71—Byrne, J.

Interest is payable as interest and not as damages under a bond having a condition on defeasance to make void the same upon payment of a lesser sum at a day certain, even although no express mention of interest is made in the bond; nor is the amount of interest recoverable diminished by reason only of the bond being conditioned for payment of principal and interest up to and at a certain date. Ib. And see DEED.

BOUNDARIES

Highway—Roadside Waste—Presumption of Dedication to Public.]—Prima facie, when a highway runs between fences, unless there is something to shew the contrary, the public have a right to the whole space, and are not confined to the metalled part of it. Offin v. Rochford Rural Council, 75 L. J. Ch. 348; [1906] 1 Ch. 342; 94 L. T. 669; 54 W. R. 244; 70 J. P. 97; 4 L. G. R. 595—Warrington, J.

Where a triangular piece of land is by the side of and not fenced off from a highway, it must be assumed, there being no evidence to the contrary, that the fences bounding it were put up as boundaries of the highway and therefore that the piece of land formed part of the highway. Ib.

Ditch and Hedge Adjoining—Ownership.]—A road was laid out in 1847 under an inclosure award, and its width was stated to be thirty feet. The defendant council, in whom the road was vested, claimed that they were entitled to the adjoining ditch, bank, and hedge:—Held, that as the road was of the width of thirty feet without the ditch, bank, or hedge, and that as the plaintiff had exercised rights of ownership over these, the plaintiff and not the defendants had made out a title to them. Simcox v. Yardley Rural Council, 69 J. P. 66; 3 L. G. R. 1350—Swinfen Eady, J.

Ditch and Fence—Presumption of Ownership—Acts of Ownership.]—The plaintiff and defendant were adjoining owners of land, the lands being bounded by a bank with a fence, with a ditch on the defendant's side. For nearly fifty years defendant had trimmed the fence, pollarded the trees, and cleansed the ditch, but there was no evidence of knowledge on the part of the plaintiff:—Held, that these acts of ownership did not rebut the presumption that the bank and fence were the property of the plaintiff. Henniker v. Howard, 90 L. T. 157—D.

Trees near Boundary of Adjacent Properties.]—Per LORD STORMONTH DARLING.—Trees whose stems are wholly on one side of the boundary of two adjacent properties, but which stand so near the boundary as to extend their roots into the other side of it are not the common property of both proprietors. Hetherington v. Galt, 7 F. 706—Ct. of Sess.

Party-walls—Erection at Joint Expense—Contribution to—Building Estate Sold in Plots—Implied Contract between Sub-purchasers from Original Purchasers of Plots.]—Where an estate has been laid out in plots for building upon the condition (inter alia) that the purchaser of a plot first building a party-wall is to be repaid by the purchaser of the adjoining plot one-half of the value of the party-wall, and the original purchasers of plots sell their plots, either built upon or vacant, to other purchasers, an implied contract arises between these sub-purchasers of adjoining plots that, as between them, the sub-purchaser of a vacant plot, adjoining a plot on which a house has already been built by an original purchaser, when he builds his house up to the house already built and makes use of its gable-walls, he shall repay the then owner of the house, and not the original builder, the half cost of the party gable-wall. Irving v. Turnbull, 69 L. J. Q.B. 593; [1900] 2 Q.B. 129—D.

Conveyance—Parcels—Land Situate on the Seashore—Bounded by the Seashore—Accretion—Plan.]—In 1864 the predecessor in title of the defendants conveyed to the predecessors in title of the plaintiffs a piece of land described as being situate on the seashore, and bounded "on or towards the west by the seashore," and on the other sides by boundaries as to which there was no dispute, and more particularly delineated in the plan drawn on the back of the conveyance. There was a strip of land intervening between the western boundary of the land conveyed as shewn on the plan and what was there defined as seashore. Since 1864 the sea had gradually receded and left uncovered a considerable amount of land on the west side of the property as delineated on the plan. The question was as to the property in and rights over this piece of land—Held, that "seashore" in the conveyance meant that portion of land adjacent to the sea which was ordinarily and prima facie vested in the Crown with its special rights and obligations; and declaration made that the plaintiffs as owners of the land conveyed in 1864 were entitled to free access and egress to and from the sea from and to their premises. Held, by VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., and STIRLING, L.J., that the defendants were estopped from saying that any part of the land on the western boundary of the land conveyed as described on the plan was anything else than seashore. Held also, by VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., that the predecessor of the defendants impliedly covenanted that he would do nothing to prevent the grantees enjoying the land and the house which the evidence showed it was contemplated by all parties should be built thereon, as land and a house facing on the sea and having the seashore as a boundary. Held, by ROMER, L.J., that, as between the grantor and the grantees, the foreshore at the date of the conveyance was fixed as coming up to the western boundary of the land described in the conveyance, and the land in dispute must be held to be an accretion subsequent to the deeds, and accordingly land which had become the property of the plaintiffs. *Mellor v. 1. RULES.

Validity—Insolvency of Society—Priorities between Different Classes of Members—Transfer of Properties to Members in Exchange for Shares—Breach of Trust—Payment of Interest on Shares.]—When a building society is known to be insolvent, no rule can be passed altering the rights of the members of the society, so as necessarily to affect their rights inter se in respect of liability or in respect of distribution of assets, to the injury of some of such members, for the benefit or advantage of others, even although it may be a rule which could properly be made by a society not in contemplation of liquidation. But a rule passed with the object of facilitating realisation of assets and enabling the society to get rid of burdensome obligations may legitimately be passed by a building society which is known to be insolvent, as auxiliary to its existing rules. Sixth West Kent Building Society v. Hills, 68 L. J. Ch. 476; [1899] 2 Ch. 60; 81 L. T. 86; 47 W. R. 647—Byrne, J.

A building society issued preferential shares (known as C shares), the proprietors of which were entitled to be paid interest in lieu of bonus and other periodical profits. The remaining shares (known as A and B shares) were issued on ordinary conditions. A new rule, passed in 1889, of the society provided: "After the 31st day of December, 1890, no further advances shall be made upon shares then existing. From and after the passing of this rule the withdrawal of shares, other than C shares, by priority of notice shall cease, and all funds derived from repayment of advances, from realisation of properties in possession, or from any other source, shall be applied as follows: First, to the expenses of management and secretary's salary, the payment of capital and interest on C shares, and the remainder pro rata to the repayment from time to time of the subscriptions standing to the credit of the holders of unadvanced shares, until the total assets of the society shall have been realised and distributed." At that date the society was known to be insolvent. By a further rule, passed in 1891, it was provided: "In order to facilitate the realisation of any properties now or at any time in possession of the society, the directors shall have power to sell the same or any part thereof to any member, and receive in payment, either wholly or in part, any fully paid-up or subscription shares held by the member, whether under notice of withdrawal or not, provided that such shares shall be taken subject to the deduction of any withdrawal fee in force for the time being." At the time the rule of 1891 was passed the only creditors of the society were members of the society in respect of their shares. The assets from all sources of the society were not sufficient to repay in full to members the capital sums due on their shares:—Held, that the rule of 1889 was invalid so far as it sought to give priority in respect of capital to the holders of C shares, who had not given notice of withdrawal before the change in the rules, over holders of A and B shares; but that the C shares retained their preferential right to interest. Held further that the rule of 1891 was not ultra vires, and that unless the power thereby given were exercised with the fraudulent purpose of benefiting a particular member, the directors could not be made liable for a breach of trust. Held further, that the C shareholders were entitled by the terms of the original contract to payment of interest notwithstanding the society was insolvent. Ib.

2. WINDING-UP.

Building Society whose Registry is Cancelled.]

—A winding-up order may be made against a building society whose registry has been cancelled under the Building Societies Act, 1894, s. 6. Grosvenor House Property Acquisition and Investment Building Society, In re, 71 L. J. Ch. 748; 50 W. R. 630—Buckley, J.

List of Contributories—Ceasing to be a Member by not Paying Instalments.]—The rules of a building society contained an article (16) providing that when the fines due by a member amounted to the sum standing at his credit, the amount thereof should be forfeited to the society, and that the member should thereafter cease to have an interest in the society. The article required notice to be sent to every member six months in arrear. The society having gone into liquidation, the liquidator placed on the list of contributories B., a member whose contributions had been exceeded by fines twenty years before the liquidation, but who had received no notice as to arrears:—Held, that, under article 16, B. had ceased to be a member of the society before the liquidation, and that his name should not have been put on the list of contributories. Irvine and Fullerton Building Society v. Cuthbertson, 8 F. 1—Ct. of Sess.

The rule applied in Moore v. Rawlins (28 L. J. C.P. 247; 6 C. B. (N.S.) 289), that a clause of forfeiture in the case of shares of a joint-stock company operates only at the option of the directors, held not applicable. Ib.

Scheme of Arrangement—Surplus Assets—Priorities—Widows and Children of Deceased Members.]

—Upon the construction of a scheme of arrangement entered into between the creditors and contributories of an unincorporated building society, in the course of its winding-up by the Court, it was declared that the surplus assets ought to be distributed according to the rights of the shareholders under the rules of the society. The question then arose, whether the widows and children of deceased members were entitled to precedence, having regard to the customary provision in the rules that "if more than one member shall give notice to withdraw at one time they shall be paid in rotation, according to the priority of notice; provided always that the widows and children of deceased members shall always have the precedence." The rules also provided (clause 25) that, in case of a member dying, his share and interest should belong to his executors or administrators, or other the person or persons thereafter mentioned; that, when on the death of any member without leaving a will a sum of money not exceeding 50% should become payable, such sum should, in default of letters of administration being taken out to the deceased member, be paid to any person nominated by the deceased in writing (such person being husband, wife, father, mother, child, brother or sister, nephew or niece, of such member), and, in case there should be no such nomination, or the person so nominated should have died before the deceased member, or in case the member should have revoked such nomination, then such sum should be paid to the person who should appear to be entitled under the Statutes of Distributions to receive the same, without taking out letters of administration:—Held, that the true construction of the rules was that, whenever there was a competition between persons who had given notice to withdraw their shares and the widows and children of deceased members whom the society was bound to recognise under clause 25, then the widows and children should always have precedence. Held, therefore, that under the scheme such widows and children were entitled to be paid in priority to the other shareholders of the society, such widows and children ranking inter se according to the dates of the deaths of the deceased members through whom they claimed. West London and General Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, 78 L. T. 393—C.A.

Mortgage—Reconveyance—Stamp—Exemption.]—A reconveyance by a building society executed by trustees appointed for a special purpose under an instrument of dissolution of the society, indorsed upon a mortgage, is under section 41 of the Building Societies Act, 1874, exempt from stamp duty in the same way that the statutory form of receipt provided by section 42 is exempt under section 41. Old Battersea Building Society v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, 67 L. J. Q.B. 696; [1893] 2 Q.B. 294; 78 L. T. 746—D.

Voluntary Dissolution—Rules—Withdrawal of Members—"Not to exceed one-half of monthly income from share subscriptions"—Priority of Payment.]—Where by the rules of a building society members might withdraw on giving a month's notice in writing, and were to receive certain specified payments on withdrawal according to the receipt of the notice of withdrawal by the society, and the directors were authorised from time to time to limit the withdrawals so as not to exceed one-half of the monthly income from share subscriptions, but all previous applications for advances were to have priority over notices of withdrawal, and the society was wound up voluntarily, it was held, all outside creditors having been paid, that members whose notices of withdrawal matured before the winding-up were entitled to be paid in full in priority to members whose notices matured after the winding-up, and also to members who had given no notice of withdrawal, and according to the priority of the receipt of such notices by the society, notwithstanding that such payments would exhaust the whole of the assets of the society. Counties Conservative Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re; Davis v. Norton, 69 L. J. Ch. 798; [1900] 2 Ch. 819; 49 W. R. 71—Stirling, J.

Deceased Member.]—The rules contained no provisions as to deceased members. One of the members died before the winding-up without having given any notice of withdrawal, and it was held that his executor was entitled to be paid in priority to all members who had given notice of withdrawal subsequent to the death of such member. West London and Permanent Building Society, In re (78 L. T. 393), applied. Ib.

Advance on Fully Paid Share—Ultra Vires—Set-off.]—A member who had given notice of withdrawal, and subsequently accepted an advance from the society, which was admittedly ultra vires, on the security of his fully paid share, was held to have waived his notice of withdrawal, and not to be entitled to set off the amount due from him in respect of the advance against such fully paid share. *Brownlie v. Ticket—Conditions Incorporated—Delay Caused to Passenger by Negligence of Company.]—D. travelled by an early workman's train, which arrived late and he consequently lost a day's wages:—Held, that the railway company were not liable to him, notwithstanding their admitted negligence, because the printed notice on the back of the ticket (to the effect that the departure or arrival of the trains at the times specified in the time-table was not guaranteed nor were the company under any circumstances to be held responsible for delay or detention, however occasioned, or any consequences arising therefrom) was a condition incorporated into the contract. Duckworth v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, 84 L. T. 774; 49 W. R. 541; 65 J. P. 517—D.

— Continuance of Journey to More Distant Station—Fare for Whole Distance Greater than Sum of Fares to Intermediate Station—Quantum Meruit—Amount.]—The through fare by a railway from H. to M. was greater than the fares from H. to S., an intermediate station, and from S. to M. added together. The defendant, intending to travel from H. to M., took a ticket at H. for S. On arriving at S. he gave up his ticket, tendered the fare from S. to M. which was refused, and travelled on to M. by the same train without a ticket:—Held, that he was liable for the through fare for the entire journey, less the amount which he had already paid, and not merely for the fare from S. to M. London and North-Western Railway v. Hinchcliffe, 72 L. J. K.B. 530; [1903] 2 K.B. 32; 88 L. T. 800; 51 W. R. 556; 67 J. P. 205—D.

Right of Railway Passenger to Break his Journey—Determination of Contract.]—The plaintiff took a return ticket from Chorley to Manchester on the defendants' railway. On her return journey she travelled by a train by which it was necessary for her to change at Bolton. Upon her arrival there she alighted, and was about to leave the station to visit a friend when a ticket-collector demanded her ticket, and she gave it up under protest. On resuming her journey to Chorley by a later train on the same day she was required to pay the fare from Bolton to Chorley, which she did under protest. In an action to recover back the amount so paid,—Held, that the contract of the company was to carry the plaintiff from Chorley to Manchester and back by two continuous journeys; that the plaintiff, by leaving the company's premises, released them from all contractual relations; and that she was not, therefore, entitled to recover. Ashton v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, 73 L. J. K.B. 701; [1904] 2 K.B. 313; 91 L. T. 349; 52 W. R. 655; 20 T. L. R. 482—D.

Railway Company—Carriage by Steamship—Negligent Navigation—Loss of Ship—Passenger Travelling with Free Pass—Loss of Luggage.]—Section 81 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1863 (which extends the provisions of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, to steam vessels), does not apply to a railway company whose special Acts were passed before the Act of 1863. The Stella (No. 2), 69 L. J. P. 70; [1900] P. 162; 82 L. T. 390; 9 Asp. M.C. 66—Gorell Barnes, J.

Section 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, does not operate to prevent a railway company making conditions with a passenger travelling with a free pass which exempt the company from liability for the loss of such passenger's luggage, although no notice has been posted in the company's offices as required by that section. Ib.

Carriage of Passengers—Dangerous Luggage—Fatal Explosion—Negligence—Onus Probandi.]—Railway companies are bound to use reasonable care and diligence in the conveyance of passengers; but they are not common carriers of passengers, and are not under obligation to carry safely. East Indian Railway v. Kalidas Mukerjee, 70 L. J. P.C. 63; [1901] A.C. 396; 84 L. T. 210—P.C.

The appellant's son was killed by an explosion of bombs brought by passengers into a railway carriage. There was no evidence of the appearance or dimensions of the parcels, or that any servant of the company knew or had reason to suspect the character of the parcels, which were taken into the carriage according to a practice which prevails in India as well as in England:—Held, that the company was not liable, and was not under obligation to disprove that the parcels suggested danger, or to search every parcel carried by a passenger. Collett v. London and North-Western Railway (20 L. J. Q.B. 411; 16 Q.B. 984) explained. Ib.

Evidence of Negligence—Closing Carriage Door—Personal Injuries.]—It is not evidence of negligence on the part of servants of a railway company that they close railway carriage doors, left open by passengers who have quitted the train, without warning other passengers still seated in the carriages that they are about to do so; and a passenger, so left seated, who places his finger in the hinge of the open door of the carriage as it is being closed by the company's servant cannot recover damages for personal injuries. Drury v. North-Eastern Railway, 70 L. J. K.B. 890; [1901] 2 K.B. 322; 84 L. T. 658—D.

Train in Motion—Shutting Door without Notice—Injury to Passenger.]—B. being a passenger from D. to U., at L., some people getting into the carriage, he put his hand in the doorway. While the train was moving, the door was banged to by a servant of the defendant company without any notice or warning, and B.'s hand was injured:—Held, that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the company. Benson v. Furness Railway, 88 L. T. 268—D.

Train Snowed up—Injury to Passenger.]—In an action of damages for personal injury against a railway company, the pursuer averred that when she was travelling in one of the defenders' trains it became snowed up between two stations; that the windows of the compartment in which she travelled were covered with snow so that she could not see out; that she was unable to open the windows, which were rendered immovable by the frost; that the company's officials left her unattended during the stoppage, which lasted for more than an hour; that in consequence of the exposure to cold her health was seriously injured; that the exposure was due to the fault of the company; that the other passengers were forwarded to the next station by a special train, but that pursuer was not informed of this arrangement:—Held, that the pursuer had averred no relevant case. Mathieson v. Caledonian Railway, 5 F. 511—Ct. of Sess.

Accident to Passenger in Station, after Alighting from Train—Accident due to Intoxication.]—A railway company is not liable in damages for failing to see an intoxicated passenger safely off the platform at which he arrives. McCormick v. Caledonian Railway, 6 F. 362—Ct. of Sess.

2. PASSENGERS' LUGGAGE.

Steamship Company—Conditions on Ticket—Fitness of Ship—Seaworthiness.]—While the plaintiffs were passengers upon the defendants' steamer, their personal luggage, owing to the crowded state of the vessel, was placed in a lavatory, which was not in use, but adjoined another which remained in use. During the voyage the lavatory in use became stopped by some cotton-waste improperly placed in it by some person, and an overflow of water occurred, by which the luggage was damaged. Upon the back of the plaintiffs' ticket were printed conditions exempting the defendants from liability for damage to passengers' luggage, although caused by negligence or default of the defendants' servants, providing that reasonable diligence had been used by the defendants to render the ship at starting seaworthy and fit for the voyage:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the damage to the luggage upon the ground that, having regard to the contingency of the overflow of water from the lavatory in use, the vessel, in sailing with the luggage so stowed, was not seaworthy with regard to the carriage of the luggage, and that reasonable diligence had not been used by the defendants to render the ship seaworthy within the meaning of the ticket. Upperton v. Union Castle Mail Steamship Co., 89 L. T. 289; 9 Com. Cas. 50; 9 Asp. M.C. 475—C.A.

3. GOODS.

(a) LOSS OF AND INJURY TO.

Loss of Goods—Exemption of Insurable Losses—Liability for Loss caused by Servants' Negligence.—Goods belonging to the plaintiffs were carried in one of the defendants' barges under a contract containing a clause that the defendants would not be liable "for any loss of or damage to goods which can be covered by insurance." Owing to negligence on the part of the defendants' lighterman, the barge sank and the plaintiffs' goods were lost. In an action for damages for breach of contract,—Held, that the defendants were liable, as the exemption clause, being in general terms, did not relieve them from liability for loss occasioned by the negligence of their servants. Price v. Union Lighterage Co., 73 L. J. K.B. 222; [1904] 1 K.B. 412; 89 L. T. 731; 52 W. R. 325; 9 Com. Cas. 120; 20 T. L. R. 177—C.A.

Carriage over Several Lines—Special Contract—Owner's Risk—Goods Lost by Fire while on Rail—Privity of Contract.—Where two or more railway companies agree together to carry through goods at a special rate in consideration that the goods are conveyed at owner's risk on their respective lines, and goods are lost or damaged, the sender has no cause of action, although the loss or damage to the goods occurred through the negligence of one of the companies other than that to which the sender or his agent consigned the goods on these terms. Barratt v. Great Northern Railway, 52 W. R. 479; 20 T. L. R. 175—D.

Contract for Carriage of Goods—"Owner's risk" Condition—Deviation from Route—Delay—Liability of Carrier.—By a contract between the plaintiff and the defendants, a railway company, for the carriage of goods to their destination by a specified route, the plaintiff, in consideration of the defendants charging a reduced rate below their ordinary rate, agreed to relieve the defendants "during any portion of the transit from all liability for . . . delay or detention, except . . . from wilful misconduct on the part of the company's servants." After having sent the goods a part of the way by the route contracted for, the defendants by mistake sent them to a station which was not on that route, and on discovering their mistake sent them on by another and more direct route, which was the most expeditious course to adopt in the circumstances. In consequence of the delay the goods arrived at their destination in a damaged condition:—Held, that the defendants were relieved from liability. Mallett v. Great Eastern Railway (68 L. J. Q.B. 256; [1899] 1 Q.B. 309) discussed and distinguished. Foster v. Great Western Railway, 73 L. J. K.B. 811; [1904] 2 K.B. 306; 90 L. T. 779; 52 W. R. 685; 20 T. L. R. 472—D.

Inherent Defect in Goods Carried—Injury to Goods caused by Defect—Liability of Carrier.

A common carrier is not liable for an injury to goods caused by an inherent latent defect in the goods themselves, the existence of which was unknown both to the sender and the carrier. Lister v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, 72 L. J. K.B. 385; [1903] 1 K.B. 878; 88 L. T. 561; 52 W. R. 12—D.

The question of liability is not affected by the fact that, in the course of the transit, the carrier's servants may have done some act contributing to the injury. Ib.

Perishable Merchandise—"Passenger" Train.

—A consignment note relating to perishable merchandise bore that it was to be carried by a railway company "by passenger train":—Held, that a train which had the facilities and privileges of a passenger train, but did not carry passengers, was a passenger train in the sense of the consignment note. Caledonian Railway v. Muirhead's Trawlers, Lim., 6 F. 605—Ct. of Sess.

Damage of Article in Transit—Rejection by Consignee—Liability of Carrier.

—A machine of the value of 100*l.* was damaged while in the custody of a carrier. The consignee refused to take delivery and sued the carrier for the value of the machine. It was proved that the damaged parts of the machine could be repaired at a cost, according to the defendants' witnesses, of 16*l.*, and according to the pursuers' witness of 30*l.*, in addition to the expense of an expert to adjust them, but the pursuers' witnesses would not say that in the result the machine would work satisfactorily:—Held, that the machine was so much damaged that the consignee was entitled to reject it, and that the carrier was bound to pay the full value of the machine. Dick v. East Coast Railways, 4 F. 178—Ct. of Sess.

Through-Booking — Condition Limiting Liability of Contracting Company to Wilful Misconduct of its Servants on its own Line—Validity—

Onus of Proof.—Where there is a through-booking of goods which necessitates their being carried over lines owned by different companies, a condition limiting the liability of the contracting company to wilful misconduct of its servants on its own line is valid. When the goods are damaged in transit, the onus of proving that they were not damaged by the wilful misconduct of the servants of the contracting company on its line lies on the contracting company. Mahoney v. Waterford, Limerick, and Western Railway, [1900] 2 Ir. R. 273—Q.B. D.

—The Highland Railway Co. at Inverness accepted delivery of a piano in a packing-case in terms of the following consignment note, partly printed and partly written: "Ordinary consignment note for traffic carried at company's risk. The Highland Railway Company will please receive the under-mentioned goods and forward them subject to the conditions on the back hereof. Senders, L. & Co. [Below.] Consignee, J. G. Kirkwall, Orkney. Mode of transit, goods or passenger train. Goods and steamer, via Aberdeen. Who pays the carriage? Senders to Aberdeen only. Consignee pays steamer freight." One of the conditions printed on the back was that in respect of goods booked through by the company for conveyance partly by railway and partly by sea, "the company shall be exempted from liability" for any loss or damage during the carriage by sea from accidents from machinery, boilers, and steam. On the piano being delivered at Kirkwall it was found to be damaged, and the consignee having refused to take delivery, the sender raised an action of damages against the railway company. The defenders contended that as there was no through fare, and as they were only entitled to hire for the carriage to Aberdeen, they were not liable as carriers beyond that point:—Held, that the consignment note was to be construed as imposing a contract by the railway company to carry the goods from Inverness to Kirkwall, and that they were responsible as carriers for the safe carriage of the goods to Kirkwall. Logan v. Highland Railway, 2 F. 292—Ct. of Sess.

Goods in Custody of Carrier Seized by Officer of the Law—Consequential Damages.—A. delivered to a railway company at Peebles a box for carriage to a consignee in Edinburgh. At Edinburgh the box, while in the custody of the railway company, was opened by a fishery officer, who took possession of a salmon contained in it. Thereafter A. was prosecuted for having in her possession a salmon known by her to have been taken from the Tweed in close time, but was acquitted. A. then sued the railway company for damages, claiming, besides general damages, the costs she had incurred in defending the criminal prosecution, alleging that the damage had been caused by the fault of the defenders in allowing the box to be opened and the salmon removed without a legal warrant, and by their breach of the contract of carriage:—Held, that the action was not maintainable. Boswell v. North British Railway, 4. F. 500—Ct. of Sess.

(b) DELAY.

Delay in Delivery—Measure of Damages—Notice of Special Circumstances.—The owners of a steamship of 4,000 tons which had broken one of her pistons and was lying at Plymouth, got another cast at Port Glasgow and sent it by rail from there to Plymouth. The agreement with the railway company was that the casting should be carried by passenger train at a special rate and at the company's risk. A delay of between three and four days having taken place in delivery, the shipowner sued the company for damages, including outlays and loss of profit caused by the detention of the ship, amounting to 300*l*. The railway company admitted that there had been a breach of contract, but they disputed the amount of damages claimed. It was proved that the railway company received notice from the shipowners' agents that the carriage was urgent, and that any delay in the delivery of the casting would cause the detention of the ship, but the company were not informed of the size of the ship, and that it had a crew of fifty-seven men on board, and that the casting was a piston and formed part of the machinery of the vessel. A high charge was made for the carriage of the casting:—Held, that the railway company were not liable for the loss of profit, and were only liable for part (estimated at 50*l*.) of the outlays caused by the detention of the ship. "Den of Ogil" Co. v. Caledonian Railway, 5 F. 99—Ct. of Sess.

Loss of Market—Just and Reasonable Condition—No Negligence.—Goods carried at various times by the defendant company for the plaintiffs arrived too late for market and the plaintiffs suffered loss for which they sued. In answer to questions left to them by the judge, the jury found that the defendants accepted the goods with the knowledge that they were to be sold in particular markets, that the defendants lost those markets, but that they had not—except in one instance—been guilty of negligence. On these findings judgment was reserved for further consideration. Two kinds of consignment notes had been used, one of which contained a notice that the defendants had two rates for the carriage of the goods thereinunder mentioned, "one, the ordinary liability of a railway company; the other, a reduced rate, adopted when the sender agrees to relieve the company from all liability for loss, damage, misdelivery, delay, or detention, except upon proof that such loss, &c., arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the company's servants." The defendants admitted that, as a matter of fact, they had only one rate for the carriage of the class of goods consigned by the plaintiffs. Both kinds of consignment notes contained the following, among other, conditions: "The company will not be liable for any loss of market":—Held, that if section 7 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, had been applicable, the condition would have been unreasonable, but that, as the jury had negatived negligence, the defendants were not within section 7, and that, at common law, the condition was good as a notice to the consignor. Duckham v. Great Western Railway, 80 L. T. 774—Darling, J.

Liability Limited to Wilful Misconduct—Acts of Omission—Onus of Proof.—G., having contracted with the railway company that they were to be exonerated from liability in respect of the transit of his goods, save when the damage arose from their wilful misconduct, delivered at Ballymena station for carriage to Manchester a case of fowls, which the railway company knew to be perishable goods requiring to be forwarded without delay. They failed to dispatch the goods by either of two trains which would have ensured their arrival in time for the Manchester markets on the following morning, for which they were intended, and when the goods did arrive in Manchester they were late, and, being perishable, had deteriorated in value. At G.'s instance the consignee refused to take delivery, and G. sued the company for the loss occasioned by their wilful misconduct in delaying the goods:—Held (PALLES, C.B., dissenting), that under the circumstances, unreasonable delay, even though entirely unexplained, was not sufficient to amount to wilful misconduct, and that it lay upon the plaintiff to prove that the defendants intentionally delayed the goods. Graham v. Belfast and Northern Counties Railway, [1901] 2 Ir. R. 13—Q.B. D.

(c) MISDELIVERY.

Carriage by Rail at Owner's Risk—Reduced Rate—Goods Sent by Wrong Route—"Misdelivery"—Liability of Carriers.—A railway company which accepts goods for carriage by a named route is liable to the consignor in damages for loss occasioned to him owing to the goods being carried by a different route. A clause in the consignment note exempting the company from liability for loss, damage, misdelivery, delay, or detention of the goods, except upon proof that such loss, &c., arose from wilful misconduct on the part of its servants, has no application to such a case. Mallett v. Great Eastern Railway, 68 L. J. Q.B. 256; [1899] 1 Q.B. 309; 80 L. T. 53; 47 W. R. 334—D.

4. RATES.

"Ordinary luggage"—Bicycle.—A bicycle is not "ordinary luggage" within the meaning of section 17 of the Great Northern Railway and East Lincolnshire Railway Acts Amendment Act, 1850. Britten v. Great Northern Railway, 68 L. J. Q.B. 75; [1899] 1 Q.B. 243; 79 L. T. 640—Channell, J.

Carriage of Non-perishable Goods by Passenger Train—Inclusive Charge for Collection, Carriage, and Delivery—Rebate where Consignee Collects.—There being no obligation on a railway company to carry non-perishable goods by passenger train, such company can quote an inclusive charge for collection, carriage, and delivery, provided section 90 of the Railway Clauses Act, 1845, is not infringed, and a consignor who delivers such goods at the station cannot claim any rebate in respect of the collection portion of the charge. Stone v. Midland Railway, 72 L. J. K.B. 377; [1903] 1 K.B. 741; 88 L. T. 92—D.

Undue Preference—Ultra Vires—Action by Shareholder.—An undue preference in the carriage of goods given by a railway company to a customer, though contrary to law, is not ultra vires, and no action in respect thereof lies against the company or the customer at the instance of a shareholder. Anderson v. Midland Railway, 85 L. T. 408; 50 W. R. 40—Buckley, J.

Competing Wharftowners.—Any person who is directly prejudiced by the breach of the statutory duty imposed on a railway company to give similar treatment to all similar traffic can apply to the Railway and Canal Commission for an order to remedy the grievance. Hence a wharfinger, who has no interest in the goods carried, can complain of undue preference given to a competing wharfinger. Forwood v. Great Northern Railway, 20 T. L. R. 320—Ry. Com.

—Ultra Vires—Action by Shareholder of Railway Company against Company and Third Party.]

—It is not ultra vires for a railway company having a fixed rate of charge for the conveyance of goods of a specified class to allow one of its customers to send goods of that class at a lower rate than the fixed rate. Such an act may entitle other customers to appeal to the Railway Commissioners, on the ground of undue preference, under section 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, but it does not enable a shareholder of the company suing on behalf of himself and all other shareholders to maintain an action against the company and the preferred customer to recover from the latter the difference between the rate paid and that which ought to have been paid. Anderson v. Midland Railway, 71 L. J. Ch. 89; [1902] 1 Ch. 369; 85 L. T. 408; 50 W. R. 40—Buckley, J.

—Ports—Benefit of Geographical Position—Group Rate—Coal Traffic—Charges Disproportionate to Distance.]

—Upon a complaint that the railway company did not in respect of coal traffic give the applicants or the traders of Carrickfergus the benefit of the geographical position of the port and harbour of Carrickfergus as compared with the ports of Larne and Belfast in relation to the several towns and places on the railway lying west and north-west of Carrickfergus, it having appeared that the railway company had established uniform rates from the three ports of Larne, Belfast, and Carrickfergus to certain inland towns, and that the effect of such group rates was that Carrickfergus sustained a loss of mileage advantage amounting to fourteen miles as against Larne in respect of the Cookstown and similar traffic,—Held, that so much of the complaint as related to the rates charged by the railway company for the conveyance of coal from the ports of Larne and Carrickfergus respectively to Ballyclare junction, to Antrim and the intermediate stations to Cookstown junction, and to towns and places on the railway between Cookstown junction and Cookstown and Draperstown respectively being the same, notwithstanding the distance the coal was carried from Carrickfergus was shorter than that from Larne, was true, and that the Carrickfergus traffic in coal was thereby subjected to an undue disadvantage. Held, further, that the rates for coal from Carrickfergus to the aforementioned towns and places must be lower than those from Larne to the same by the sum of 3d. per ton. Carrickfergus Harbour Commissioners v. Belfast and Northern Counties Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 74—Ry. Com.

—Shipment Rate and Works Rate—Works Rate for same Services Higher than Shipment Rate

—Right of Trader to Apply for Reduction of Works Rate—Right to make Application where Trader does not Directly Pay Rate.]—The mere fact that a railway company charge a higher rate for carriage of coal over the same length of line to traders' works—all traders being charged an equal rate—than they do for coal for shipment, is not of itself sufficient to give a trader a right to apply to the Court for reduction of the works rate, and such difference between the works rate and the shipment rate does not necessarily shew an undue preference or an undue prejudice within the meaning of the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts. Spillers & Bakers v. Taff Vale Railway, 90 L. T. 713; 20 T. L. R. 101—Ry. Com.

A railway company carried from certain collieries to C. large quantities of coal, the greater proportion of which was for shipment from that port to places abroad and to ports in England, and the remaining part was for works in C., including the works of the applicants, who were large flour millers in C., and for home consumption. They carried the shipment coal at a low shipment rate, but all other coal, whether for works (including the applicants' works) or for home consumption, was charged a higher or works rate, the works rate being some 50 per cent. higher than the shipment rate, and being the same for all traders in C. It was proved that the low shipment rate was justified by necessity, and that owing to competition with other ports and to other causes it was practically impossible in the interests of the public for the company to raise the shipment rate; and further, that the works rate was a reasonable rate, and was in fact so low that it could not reasonably be made lower without reducing it to a non-paying rate, and though there was some slight competition, no real or substantial competition was proved between the two classes of coal. Upon a complaint by the applicants that the higher works rate charged for the carriage of their coal as compared with the low shipment rate was an undue preference and an undue prejudice within the meaning of the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts,—Held, that the mere difference in the two rates was not in itself sufficient to prove an undue preference or an undue prejudice, or to give the applicants a right to come to the Court for relief; that, under the circumstances, within the meaning of sub-section 2 of section 27 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, not only was the lower charge for the shipment traffic "necessary for securing in the interests of the public the traffic in respect of which it is made," but also "the inequality could not be removed without unduly reducing the rates charged to the complainant," and that therefore the applicants were not entitled to a reduction in the works rate charged to them. Ib.

Semble, in such case, the fact that the rates are charged by the railway company to and paid by the colliery company, and not directly charged to or paid by a trader himself in the first instance, does not prevent the trader from applying to the Court under the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts, if in substance the charge is made so as to affect the traders' interest. Ib.

— Reasonable Facilities—Private Siding—Jurisdiction of Railway Company.—The owner of a private siding on a railway has no other right than a right to use the railway as a highway for his own engines and carriages on payment of tolls, and although a railway company has power to receive and deliver goods at a private siding it is under no obligation to do so, and this is so although the railway company may have been in the practice of receiving and delivering goods at such siding for a number of years. A railway company is entitled to deliver certain classes of goods at a private siding without thereby coming under any obligation to deliver other classes of goods. Therefore, where a railway company has refused to deliver at such a siding a certain class of goods, the provisions of section 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, have no application, and the Railway Commissioners have no jurisdiction to order the railway company to deliver such goods at the private siding. Cowan v. North British Railway, 3 F. 677—Ct. of Sess.

The Railway Commissioners pronounced an order finding that the railway company in delivering coal at the private sidings of other traders in the neighbourhood, competitors in trade with the applicant traders, and refusing to deliver coal at the applicants' siding, had given to such other traders an undue preference, and subjected the applicants to an undue prejudice, and ordering the railway company to desist from so doing:—Held, that this order was within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners. Ib.

Sufficient Notice under Section 13 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888.—Section 13 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, enacts that "in cases of complaint of undue preference no damages shall be awarded . . . unless and until the party complaining shall have given written notice to the railway company requiring them to abstain from or remedy the matter of complaint, and the railway company shall have failed, within a reasonable time, to comply with such requirements in such manner as the Commissioners shall think reasonable." The applicants sent a letter to the London and North-Western Railway Co., who were the railway company admitted at the hearing to have given the undue preference complained of. Such letter, which was dated August 1, 1895, was in the following terms: "When I saw you in London on the 18th July, you said you would speak to the Midland railway company on the following Monday about the Birmingham Windsor Street rate from here, and that you would let me hear from you, but I have heard nothing. I am bound to say that I am not content to pay the present quoted rate":—Held, that such letter was a sufficient written notice to the railway company requiring them to abstain from or remedy the matter of complaint, and that the right to damages therefore arose from the date of that letter. Sheffield Coal Co. v. London and North-Western Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 230—Ry. Com.

Equal Charge to all Persons—Carriage of Non-perishable Goods by Passenger Train—No Obligation to Carry—Through Rate—Including Collection and Delivery—Right of Person Delivering Goods at Station to Return of Cost of Collection.—Section 90 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, provides that all tolls by the special Act authorised to be taken shall be charged equally to all persons. Regulation 3 of Part V. of the schedule to the Midland Railway Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, provides that the company shall not be under obligation to convey by passenger train any merchandise other than perishables. A firm of carriers delivered to the company at one of their stations certain non-perishable goods for conveyance by passenger train, and the company duly forwarded them, charging a rate including collection, the company making no rate for such goods by passenger train which did not include collection. In an action by the carriers to recover that portion of the rate which represented the cost of collection,—Held, that, as the company were under no statutory obligation to carry the goods by passenger train, and no rate was imposed by statute in respect of such carriage, the company, who at the same time were not debarred from so carrying the goods, and had the right so to carry them, did not fall with respect to the carriage of the goods within the "equality" proviso of section 90 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and that the carriers were therefore not entitled to recover back the cost of collection. Stone v. Midland Railway, 73 L. J. K.B. 392; [1904] 1 K.B. 669; 90 L. T. 194; 52 W.R. 491; 20 T. L. R. 225—C.A.

The expression "all tolls for the use of the railway" in section 203 of the Midland Railway Act, 1844, means all the tolls referred to in the group of sections in which that section is placed, and not all tolls in fact charged by the company for the use of the railway, and the section is therefore no wider in its application than section 90 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Ib.

Rebate under Special Agreement—Publication of Rates in Rate Book under Section 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873.—Section 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, enacts that "every railway company shall keep at each of their stations a book or books showing every rate for the time being charged for the carriage of traffic, other than passengers and their luggage, from that station to any place to which they book, including any rates charged under any special contract, and stating the distance from that station of every station, siding, or place to which any such rate is charged." Section 13 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, enacts, that "in cases of undue preference no damages shall be awarded if the Commissioners shall find that the rates complained of have, for the period during which such rates have been in operation, been duly published in the rate books of the railway company kept at their stations in accordance with section 14 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873." The Midland Railway Co. granted a rebate of 3*d.* per ton to traders who agreed to send a certain amount of coal traffic to Great Eastern stations in a year and pay for the carriage of the same punctually every month. In the rate books at various stations on the Midland Railway Co.'s line was inserted on the flyleaf at the beginning of the book a printed slip stating that "rebates are allowed to coal merchants from certain rates to stations in the Eastern Counties and upon certain conditions, the particulars of which may be obtained on application to the general manager":—Held that this general notice on the flyleaf of the rate book was not a sufficient publication of a lower rate in the rate book to relieve the railway company from liability under section 13 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888.

Daddy v. Midland Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 303—Ry. Com.

The applicants, who carried on the business of coal merchants at certain places situated on the system of the Great Eastern Railway Co., complained that the Midland Railway Co. had allowed to certain coal merchants, who were competitors in trade with the applicants, a rebate of 3*d.* per ton off the rates charged to such coal merchants for the carriage of coal from collieries situated on the system of the Midland Railway Co. to stations situated on the railway of the Great Eastern Railway Co., but had not allowed the applicants such rebate off the rates charged to them for the carriage of coal from collieries situated on the railway of the Midland Railway Co. to stations of the Great Eastern Railway Co., and the applicants alleged that thereby an undue preference had been given to the coal merchants to whom such rebate had been allowed over the applicants. The Midland Railway Co. admitted that they had allowed to certain coal merchants having coal depots on the system of the Great Eastern Railway Co., in respect of coal coming from collieries on the system of the Midland Railway Co., a rebate of 3*d.* per ton off the rate charged for the carriage of coal, but the Midland Railway Co. alleged that this was done only on condition that the coal merchants to whom such rebate was allowed sent in the course of a year from such collieries over the line of the Midland Railway Co. not less than a specified number of tons of coal, and also rendered the Midland Railway Co. certain services in paying carriage for such traffic, and that in consideration thereof the Midland Railway Co. were justified in allowing such rebate:—Held, that such circumstances did not justify any greater difference of charge being made by the Midland Railway Co. to the applicants and the other coal merchants than the sum of 1*d.* per ton. Ib.

Rebate on Sidings Rate—Onus of Proof—Evidence of Comparable Rates—Station Accommodation.—The applicants claimed under section 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, to be entitled to a rebate on the rates charged to them by the railway company, on the ground that the railway company provided no station accommodation for the applicants' traffic. The applicants consigned salt from their private sidings for carriage over the respondents' railway, and it was admitted that the railway company did not provide any station accommodation or perform any terminal services. The railway company denied that the rates charged included a station terminal at the initial end. The applicants contended that a presumption was raised that they were charged an initial station terminal by shewing—First, that several of the through rates were above the maximum, unless they included two terminals; and secondly, that the rates from the nearest station, which was within one mile of the applicants' sidings, for class B articles (among which salt would be classed) were lower than the special salt rates from the sidings, although the former were station-to-station rates and at the railway company's risk, the latter being at the applicants' own risk. It was admitted that no salt was in fact sent from the station, but only from the applicants' sidings:—Held, that there was no legal evidence that a second terminal was included in the special salt rates charged to the applicants, and that, where the rates were not above the maximum allowed for conveyance plus one terminal, the Court would not assume (in the absence of express evidence or admission) that an illegal and second terminal had been included in that rate:—Held, further, that express evidence ought to be given to shew that the terminal was included, when the Court was asked to act on the view that it was so included. Salt Union v. North Staffordshire Railway (No. 1), 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 179—Ry. Com.

Held (by the COURT OF APPEAL), that an applicant under section 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, must make out a prima facie case in support of the application, and that the applicants, by merely proving that they were charged the rates, and that the siding did not belong to the railway company, had not made out a prima facie case that the rates included a charge for station accommodation so as to place upon the railway company the onus of proving that the rates did not include a charge for station accommodation. Ib.—C.A.

Traders' Waggon—Railway Company exempted from Providing Them—Maximum Rates, including the Provision of Trucks by the Railway Company—Amount of Rebate.—Section 2 of the schedule to the North Staffordshire Railway Company's Order Confirmation Act, 1892, enacts that "the maximum rate for conveyance is the maximum rate which the company may charge for the conveyance of merchandise by merchandise trains; and, subject to the exceptions and provisions specified in this schedule, includes the provision of locomotive power and trucks by the company, and every other expense incidental to such conveyance not hereinafter provided for. Provided that—(a) . . . the company shall not be required to provide trucks . . . for the conveyance of . . . salt in bulk . . . ; (b) where, for the conveyance of merchandise other than merchandise specified in Class A of the classification, the company do not provide trucks, the rate authorised for conveyance shall be reduced by a sum which, for distances not exceeding fifty miles, shall, in case of difference between the company and the person liable to pay the charge, be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade. . . ." The difference under this section which had been referred by the Board of Trade to the Railway Commissioners for decision was as to the sum by which the rate authorised for the conveyance of salt in bulk by the railway company should be reduced, for distances not exceeding fifty miles, in respect that they did not provide trucks for the same:—Held, that the quantum of the rebate is a pure question of fact to be decided by the Commissioners as arbitrators, taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, and that prima facie where a railway company are not required to provide a trader with trucks, the rebate for a trader's truck should be determined with regard, not to the cost to the trader, but to the sum which the conveyance rate may be deemed to include for the provision of trucks. Salt Union v. North Staffordshire Railway (No. 2), 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 224—Ry. Com.

Increase of Coal Rates—Justification of Increase—Comparative Tables—Coal Waggon.—Section 1, sub-section 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, enacts that: "Where a railway company have either alone or jointly with any other railway company or companies, since the last day of December, 1892, directly or indirectly increased, or hereafter increase directly or indirectly, any rate or charge, then if any complaint is made that the rate or charge is unreasonable, it shall lie on the company to prove that the increase of the rate or charge is reasonable, and for that purpose it shall not be sufficient to shew that the rate or charge is within any limit fixed by an Act of Parliament or by any provisional order confirmed by Act of Parliament." Upon a complaint under the above section by colliery-owners that, whereas the rates and charges made by the railway company for the conveyance of coal were, prior to January 1, 1893, based and calculated upon the carriage of 21 cwt. to the ton, of which 1 cwt. was an allowance for "wastage," they were now based and calculated upon the carriage of 20½ cwt. to the ton, and that this admittedly resulted in an increase of 2½ per cent. upon the rate formerly charged to the applicants, and that such increase was unreasonable,—Held, that the railway company having shewn at least a proportional increase in the cost of working the traffic between the year 1877, when the original rates were fixed, and the year 1892, the increase of rate was reasonable; that the fact that since 1880 the railway company had supplied waggons for the mineral trade as carriers of minerals, for the use of which a separate rate was charged, did not necessitate the exclusion of this branch of their business from the general account (for purposes of comparison, in order to ascertain a reasonable conveyance rate), because the trader providing his own waggons was also benefited by the increased facility and greater economy with which the traffic was handled; and that the cost of providing relief men for mineral trains, which was necessitated by the shortened hours of labour, and the fact that such trains had to stand on one side for goods and passenger trains, was an item properly attributable to the mineral traffic, which must be worked subject to the ordinary conditions on a highway. South Yorkshire Coal Owners' Assurance Society v. Midland Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 28—Ry. Com.

Held, also, that a comparison of expenditure and receipts in any two years is a fair method of comparison where no special disturbing elements can be proved to exist. For a comparison based on train mileage to be of value, it must be shown that the conditions of working the traffic in the two compared years have remained substantially constant; which was not the case in the years 1877 and 1892, since in the latter year there was a larger proportion of long-distance traffic, a mile of which brought in a smaller rate and was traversed at less cost than a mile of short-distance traffic. Ib.

Indirect Increase of Rates and Charges—Charge for Accommodation after Conveyance—Siding Rent.—A railway company, being bound to give a reasonable time to the trader, after conveyance, to take delivery, prior to 1894 allowed the traders four clear days for that purpose, but calculated the four clear days not on one truck, but upon the average time that all the trucks of a particular trader occupied the railway company's sidings. After 1894 they allowed four days exclusive of the day of arrival, but calculated the time allowed on each truck and not on the average. This was complained of as an indirect increase of rate, which the railway company were called upon to justify, under section 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894:—Held, that there was no indirect increase of the tonnage rate, because, under the former system, no particular ton of coal would have had greater accommodation as regards time than under the new system. Manchester and Northern Counties Coal Traders' Federation v. Midland Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 121—Ry. Com.

Charge for Accommodation after Conveyance—Siding Rent—Liability as Carriers Ceasing.]

—Prior to February, 1895, the railway company's tonnage rates included the user of their sidings by the consignees (for coal trucks not belonging to the railway company) for an indefinite period. From March 1, 1895, the railway company made a charge of 6d. per truck per day as "siding rent" after four clear days had been allowed for the discharge of the coal. The applicants contended that this was an "indirect increase of a rate or charge" within the meaning of section 1 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, and had to be justified by the railway company. They further contended that the proposed charge was ultra vires as being a general condition applicable to the rates and charges authorised by the Railway Companies Rates, &c., Order Confirmation Act, 1892, and would require the sanction of Parliament:—Held, that the duty of a railway company as carriers ended after putting the merchandise in a position where the trader could take delivery, and leaving them there for such a reasonable time as would enable the trader, with ordinary appliances, to get his merchandise out of the truck. And that, although the convenience of the trader since March 1, 1895, had been curtailed, the four days was an attempt by the railway company to fix an extreme limit of time up to which they were content to bear the obligation of "carriers," and to deem it as covered by the conveyance rate; and that making a charge for something for which no charge had been made before (namely, warehouse accommodation) did not constitute an increase, direct or indirect, of any rate or charge. Manchester and Northern Counties Coal Traders' Federation v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 127—Ry. Com.

Held, further, that the charge was not ultra vires, it being authorised by sub-section 4 of section 5 of the Railway Companies Rates, &c., Order Confirmation Act, 1892, which gave the right to charge for "the detention of trucks or the use of any accommodation before or after conveyance beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the company to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery thereof." Ib.

Held, further, that the quantum to be paid by the trader to the railway company was a question expressly reserved for the consideration of an arbitrator, and must be decided on the facts proved in each particular case. Ib.

Classification of Merchandise—Pitwood Consigned at Measurement Weight—"Timber at measurement weight"—Rate Diminishing According to Distance—Conveyance over Different Railways—Recurring Maximum Charge.]—The Great Western Railway Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, confirmed and set out the classification of merchandise traffic and the schedule of maximum rates and charges of the railway. The schedule provided that weight, except as to stone and timber, when charged by measurement, should be actual weight. Measurement weight was estimated by allowing so many cubic feet to the ton, and was less than actual weight. In the classification of merchandise traffic, Class C included, among other items, "Pitwood, for mining purposes," and "Timber, actual machine weight"; and Class 1 included, among other items, "Timber, measurement weight." The rates in respect of Class C were lower than those in respect of Class 1. A timber merchant consigned by the railway a quantity of pitwood for mining purposes by measurement weight:—Held, that the pitwood was chargeable under Class 1. Great Western Railway v. Caswell & Bowden, 73 L. J. K.B. 834; [1904] 2 K.B. 508—Walton, J.

In the schedule of maximum rates and charges under the Great Western Railway Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, the rate per ton per mile for conveyance of merchandise of a given description on the railway was higher for the first twenty miles than for the next thirty miles. The schedule provided that any other railway company conveying merchandise on the railway should be entitled to charge and make the same rates as the Great Western Co. were authorised to make. The Great Western Co. carried a consignment of goods a distance of twenty-one miles, the first twenty miles being on their own railway and the remaining mile on another railway over which they exercised running powers:—Held, that they were entitled to charge the maximum rate applicable to the first twenty miles of a journey, not only in respect of the first twenty miles of the journey in question, but also in respect of the remaining mile. Ib.

Railway Commission.]—See RAILWAY.

Through Booking.]—Under section 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, the Railway Commissioners have power (upon proof that it is reasonable and in the interests of the public) to order through booking of both passengers and goods at the sum of the local rates charged on the two lines of railway constituting the through route. If the demand for such through booking is made bona fide by a member of the public, and a fortiori by a community, there is ipso facto a strong prima facie case of reasonableness and public interest (per COLLINS, J.). Didcot, Newbury, and Southampton Railway v. London and South-Western Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 9—Ry. Com.

An order by the Railway Commissioners for through booking is not a matter of right. Such an order necessarily involves an order for a through rate, although the through rate may be only the sum of the local rates of the several lines over which the traffic passes. Consequently an order for through booking can only be granted on the same considerations as would govern the granting of a through rate. Didcot, Newbury, and Southampton Railway v. Great Western Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 1—C.A.

Through Rates—Reasonable in the Interests of the Public—Comparison of Through Rates over Routes Composed of the Lines of Different Railway Companies.]—In allowing or fixing through rates the Railway Commissioners will consider all the circumstances of the case, and one of the circumstances is, what powers the particular railway companies whose lines are part of the through route have of demanding rates. Birmingham Corporation v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 62—Ry. Com.

On an application to allow a through rate, it was proved that there was in existence a rate arranged between the parties which was virtually a through rate, and which rate was much lower than the sum of the local rates over the lines which constituted the through route. The through rate applied for involved a still further reduction of about 6d. :—Held, that under these circumstances the onus was upon the applicants to prove that the through rate which they proposed was a just and reasonable rate. Ib.

The proposed rate was over a route composed of three lines, which carried for about six, forty-five, and twenty-five miles respectively of the route. It was proved that there was an alternative route which was composed of two lines, and which passed for the same short distance of six miles over the line, which was common to both routes, and the entire residue of seventy-five miles over that of another company, and that there was an existing rate by the alternative route of 6d. less than the existing rate over the route for which a through rate was proposed :—Held, that it did not follow that because the rate over the alternative route was reasonable, and was smaller in amount for a slightly longer distance, the existing rate over the route composed of three railways, five miles shorter, and which was 6d. higher, was unreasonable. Ib.

— Right to Apply for Exceptional Rates.]—A canal company authorised by Act of Parliament to construct railways on their quays and land, and to charge reasonable tolls and charges for the use of the same within a maximum fixed by their Railway Charges Confirmation Act, 1893, although they are under no obligation to admit the public as carriers upon their lines under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, are a "railway company" within the meaning of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, and, whether express powers of carrying upon their lines have been given them or not, are competent to propose through rates under the 25th section of that Act. Manchester Ship Canal v. Midland Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 54—Ry. Com.

When a railway company has agreed rates from a port to inland towns with other companies in their joint interest, such rates should not be treated as local rates of that company, so as to compel them to carry to the common point from another port at rates equal, distance for distance, to such agreed rates. Ib.

— Reasonable Route—Point of Exchange—Sending Company's Claim to Long Run.]—On an application for through rates, the fact that the station where it is proposed to exchange the traffic is not, in any reasonable sense, a practicable one for that purpose will go to shew that the proposed route is not a reasonable route within the meaning of section 25, sub-section 5, of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888. The Court will consider not only the public interest in a competitive route, but also the right of a railway company to a long run in respect of traffic originating on its own system. Plymouth, Devonport and South-Western Junction Railway v. Great Western Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 68—Ry. Com.

The Plymouth Co. applied, under section 25 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, for an order allowing through rates for goods traffic between the South-Western termini in London (Nine Elms and Waterloo) and Truro, Penzance, and other stations on the Great Western Railway in Cornwall, by way of Liddford and Plymouth North Road. The applicants' line was a double line twenty-two miles in length, which ran from Liddford (where it joined the South-Western Co.'s main line) to that company's station at Devonport, and was worked by the South-Western Co. From Devonport the South-Western Co. owned a junction line with the Great Western main line (from London to Cornwall), and they had running powers over the latter to the Plymouth North Road station. The proposed exchange of traffic between the two companies was to take place at Plymouth North Road station :—Held, that the proposed route with an exchange at Plymouth North Road station was not a reasonable route. Ib.

— Grouping London Stations—Termini a quo and ad quem the same—Competitive Company not Grouping.]—In applications under section 25 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, the Commissioners require evidence of public interest and reasonableness in favour of the proposed through rate and route adequate to outweigh the interference with the vested legal rights of railway companies. Didcot, Newbury, and Southampton Railway v. London and South-Western Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 9—Ry. Com.

The Didcot Railway Co. applied for through rates via their railway for traffic between Southampton and the Great Western Co.'s stations in London at Poplar and Smithfield. The proposed route was that by which the Commissioners had already allowed through rates for traffic between Southampton and the Great Western station at Paddington (see 9 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 210). The difference between that case and the present one was that in the former case traffic coming to Paddington could only be offered to the Great Western Co., whereas traffic coming to Poplar or Smithfield might also be offered to the South-Western Co., for that railway company, equally with the Great Western Co., received and delivered traffic at both of those places. Poplar traffic for either the South-Western Railway or the Great Western Railway passed over the North London Railway, and for haulage between Poplar and Acton (Great Western) and Poplar and Kew Bridge (South-Western) each railway company paid a toll of 3s. 3d. a ton. To provide for this payment the South-Western Co.'s rates by rail from Poplar to Southampton were higher than from Nine Elms. The Didcot Co. proposed that the through rates from Poplar to Southampton via the Great Western and Didcot Railways should be the same as were charged from Paddington, on the ground that the Great Western had made their local rates from Paddington applicable to Poplar, Smithfield, and their other London stations. Smithfield traffic for the Great Western Co. was carried by that company over the Metropolitan Railway under running powers at a cost of 10d. a ton for the use of the line. The South-Western Co. had a receiving office at Smithfield, and carted all their traffic to and from Nine Elms. The Didcot Co. proposed that the through rates from Smithfield, as compared with those from Paddington, should be 10d. more for Classes A and B and for certain articles carried at special rates, and for all other traffic should be of the same amount. The applicants' proposal was not only to convey traffic to and from Paddington by a route belonging to three different railway companies and sixteen miles longer than the South-Western route, at the Nine Elms rates (which were admittedly low on account of sea competition), but to carry the traffic to and from Smithfield and Poplar four and ten miles further respectively at the same rates.—Held, that the through rates for traffic from Poplar to Southampton via the Great Western and Didcot Railways should be of the same amount as the existing South-Western rates between those places. And that the through rates for traffic from Smithfield to Southampton via the Great Western and Didcot Railways should be of the same amount as the rates from Paddington, plus the cost of the conveyance of the traffic between Smithfield and Paddington. Id.

— Carriage over Lines of Different Companies—Carriage partly by Sea—Injury to Goods—Liability—Evidence.—Goods were received from a merchant in Manchester by the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Co., under a through-booking contract, to be carried for the plaintiff and to be delivered to him in Limerick. The goods were carried from Manchester to Limerick, and there delivered to the plaintiff under an arrangement made between the various carrying companies concerned, by which the freight was divisible amongst them in proportion to the mileage traversed by each, but was to be collected by the defendants from the consignee. The goods were injured in transit, but there was nothing to shew on what part of the journey the injury occurred. In an action to recover damages from the defendants for breach of contract to carry from Manchester to Limerick,—Held, that there was no evidence that the through-booking contract was made by the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway as agents of the defendants, and that therefore, in the absence of proof that the injury was done on the defendants' line, the defendants were not liable. Tuohy v. Great Southern and Western Railway, [1898] 2 Ir. R. 789—C.A.

— Line belonging to Dock Company—No Statutory Power of Railway Company to Run over Line.—The dock company are the owners of the Millwall Extension Railway, which runs through their docks from Millwall Junction on the Great Eastern Railway. At the southern end of the Millwall Extension Railway is a station called the South Dock station. The dock company applied for an allowance of through rates for goods by a route from the South Dock station over their railway and the railways of the respondents to stations on the Midland system, the proposed rates being so fixed and apportioned that the traffic proceeding inland from the docks might be relieved from the charge which, the applicants alleged, was imposed on it for cartage. The Railway Commissioners were of opinion that, as the respondent companies had no statutory right to carry goods by locomotive power over the applicants' railway, there was no power to make an order for a through rate, and, further, they were of opinion that the applicants' proposal that the traffic should be taken over by the respondents at the point of junction of the applicants' railway with the Great Eastern Railway would involve such difficulties in the carrying of it out as to render it impracticable in any business sense.—Held, that the Commissioners were right on both grounds. London and India Docks Co. v. Great Eastern Railway and Midland Railway, 20 T. L. R. 371—C.A.

— Workmen's Trains—Proper and Sufficient Workmen's Trains up to 8 a.m.—Reasonable Fares.—Section 8 of the Cheap Trains Act, 1893, empowers the Board of Trade, where it has reason to believe that proper and sufficient workmen's trains are not provided for workmen at reasonable fares and times between 6 p.m. and 8 a.m., to refer the matter to the Railway Commissioners when required to do so by the railway company. By the Great Eastern Railway (Metropolitan Station and Railways) Act, 1864, s. 80, the Great Eastern Railway are required to run one stopping train daily each way, not later than 7 a.m. inwards or earlier than 6 p.m. outwards, on the lines between Liverpool Street and Edmonton and Liverpool Street and Walthamstow respectively, "for artisans, mechanics and daily labourers, both male and female, and having business daily in London," at fares not exceeding 1d. for the journey each way. The Great Eastern Co. voluntarily extended the Edmonton service of trains to Enfield, and ran a frequent service of trains between the hours of 5 a.m. and 8 a.m. at cheap rates for the benefit of workmen and other persons residing on the Enfield, Walthamstow, and Stratford branches of the railway and having employment in London. These trains were of two kinds—namely, first, Cheap trains run between the hours of 5 a.m. and 6.47 a.m., the fare charged by these trains being 2d. for a return ticket, and the last of these trains being timed to arrive at Liverpool Street Station not later than 6.47 a.m. Secondly, Cheap trains, by which workmen are allowed to travel at half the ordinary return fares (with a minimum of 4d.), which are timed to reach Liverpool Street Station after 6.47 a.m. and before 8 a.m. Upon complaint that on the Enfield, Walthamstow, and Stratford branches of the Great Eastern Railway there were no trains provided for workmen at 2d. return fares, arriving in London later than 6.47 A.M., it was proved that the existing 2d. trains were overcrowded and could not accommodate all the workpeople requiring to come to London for their work, and that numbers of them had no alternative but to travel by the half-fare trains. It was also proved that the hours of labour have become later, in many cases not beginning until 8 A.M. or 9 A.M., so that workpeople, in order to have the benefit of the cheapest trains, had to travel by trains which brought them to London an hour, or even two hours, too soon. At the hearing, the railway company offered to add to the existing service of 2d. trains three new trains, which would be timed to arrive in London between 6.47 A.M. and 7 A.M.:—Held, that in addition to these trains, the railway company must run as an experiment at least two trains from Edmonton, two trains from Walthamstow, and one from Stratford, starting after 7 A.M. and arriving in London as near 8 A.M. as possible, at fares less than the half-fares charged at the present time, and that a reasonable fare to be charged by such trains would be 3d. return, except between Stratford and London, which should be 2d. return. London Reform Union and Great Eastern Railway, In re, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 280—Ry. Com.

As under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, railway companies obtain a partial remission of passenger duty on certain conditions, one of which is the running of workmen's trains, the question of whether there is a remunerative profit from the fares by such trains is not a matter which the Court will consider. Ib.

The fact that an improved workmen's train service might relieve a congested district in London by inducing workmen to reside outside the metropolis, does not justify the Commissioners in ordering such an improved service. Ib.

Proof by a railway company of no profit, or even a loss, on running workmen's trains, is not sufficient answer to a complaint of the non-provision of "proper and sufficient workmen's trains" under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883. Ib.

Semble, that where two railway companies maintain a through passenger service between their systems by agreement with each other, but have no statutory running powers over each other's lines, the Commissioners have jurisdiction to order a proper service of workmen's trains to be provided for that through service. Ib.

— Small Working-Class Population—No Profit to Railway Company—Running Powers by Agreement—Experimental Service.—The Railway Commissioners will not order workmen's trains to be run under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, unless there is proved to be in existence a class of workmen residing on the railway and requiring such a service—that is, they will not order trains to be run in advance of requirements. London Reform Union and Great Northern Railway, In re, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 293—Ry. Com.

— Early Trains for Postmen—Benefit and Cost not Commensurate—Insufficient Numbers.—The Court will only exercise their powers under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, where the demand for accommodation is sufficiently large to bear some relation to the difficulty of giving that accommodation, and where there is some comparison between the benefit which will be afforded by an order of the Court for the accommodation asked for and the cost to the railway company of giving it. Fawcett Association and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, In re, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 299—Ry. Com.

Semble, that persons employed in the postal service as letter sorters and postmen are "workmen" within the meaning of the Cheap Trains Act, 1883. Ib.

— Travelling on Public Service—Inspector of Weights and Measures—Police Officer.—An officer of the police, who holds the additional appointment of inspector under the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, when travelling by railway in performance of his duties as such inspector, is not entitled to travel at a reduced fare under section 6 of the Cheap Trains Act, 1883. Spencer v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, 67 L. J. Q.B. 465; [1893] 1 Q.B. 643; 78 L. T. 323; 46 W. R. 443; 62 J. P. 296—D. And see RAILWAY.

5. STATION ACCOMMODATION.

Station Accommodation and Terminal Services—Special Services at a Traders' Siding.—The applicants were the owners of a siding situated immediately to the north of the goods station at Panmure on the joint line of the Caledonian and North British Railway Companies, and about seventy-three chains from Carnoustie station and fifty-six chains from Barry station. The applicants complained, under section 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, that they were charged terminals for traffic to and from their works at Panmure Station, although the railway companies performed no terminal services and received and delivered the traffic on sidings not belonging to them. The applicants' allegation that their rates included charges for station accommodation and for terminal services was based on the fact that the rates for similar traffic from the two nearest stations to Panmure—namely, Carnoustie and Barry (where there were no private sidings and no traders performing terminal services for themselves)—were the same as those charged to the applicants, or differed in amount only in respect of difference of distance. The railway companies contended that what was not a charge for conveyance in the applicants' siding rates was a charge, not by way of terminals, as in the rates with which they were compared, but for services at or in connection with the sidings, such as marshalling, labelling, clerkage, providing sheets, &c., and that it cost them as much to render those services as it did to do the work which was done at such places as Carnoustie and Barry, and for which, when done, so far as it was not incidental to conveyance, terminals were allowed them. It was proved that whatever services the railway companies rendered at the applicants' private sidings at Panmure, they rendered also at or in connection with their own sidings at Carnoustie and Barry, and that there was nothing special or extra in them. And, further, that at Carnoustie and Barry they did a good deal besides, inasmuch as they provided a station and labour to load and cover:—Held, that the special services the applicants received at the hands of the railway companies were not a satisfactory reason for the same rates being charged at the applicants' private sidings at Pannure as were charged at Carnoustie and Barry, and that the applicants were entitled to have lower rates than the rates in force for similar traffic at Carnoustie and Barry. The extent to which they should be lower to be determined by the amount presumably charged for terminals at that end, ascertained on the principle adopted in Pidcock's Case (10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 150), less the reasonable sum that might be found due to the railway companies for special services under section 5 of the schedule to the Rates, &c., Order Confirmation Act. Tennant v. Caledonian Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 194—Ry. Com.

Where a railway company provide station accommodation, or perform terminal services, it is only reasonable to suppose that station and service terminals are equally with the charge for conveyance a component part of their rates. Ib.

Siding Rent—Reasonable Sum—Reasonable Time for Unloading—When Commences to Run.]—The Midland Railway Company's Rates &c. Order Confirmation Act, 1891, s. 5 of the schedule, provides that they may charge a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate for certain services rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, including (inter alia) the use or occupation of any accommodation before or after conveyance beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the consignee to take delivery of the merchandise, and for services rendered in connection with such use and occupation. The Midland Railway Co. claimed under this section the sum of 6*d.* per truck per day as siding rent, at Sheffield, after the expiration of four clear days allowed for unloading:—Held, that 6*d.* per truck per day was a reasonable sum to apply to all traders at Sheffield and similar places, though it would not necessarily apply to other places—e.g. rural stations—where the cost of the construction of sidings might be less, and the cost of working might be more, in proportion to the quantity of traffic; and where the loss of business by the blocking of the siding might be greater or less according to circumstances. Midland Railway v. Black, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 142—Ry. Com.

In ascertaining the "reasonable sum" to be charged under this section the cost of maintenance should only be considered where it exceeds that which would be incurred if delivery were taken within the four days, and only those services in excess of those which would be otherwise performed are to be taken into consideration. Likewise the cost of accommodation is only a factor in cases where extra accommodation has to be provided owing to the trader's habitual delay in unloading. Ib.

Held, further, that four days, exclusive of the day on which the notice of arrival was given, was a reasonable period for unloading; that although prima facie this time would not begin to run until the trucks were in the siding, handed over to the trader, ready for unloading, yet, if the trader were not ready to take delivery, the siding being blocked by him, the time ran from the moment the railway company were ready to send the trucks to the siding; while, if the railway company were in default, the trader would have his remedy under the contract for delivery. Ib.

Held, further, that the contention that when the railway company got the benefit of the expedition of traders in 90 per cent. of the traffic, which was unloaded within the four days, there should be some "set-off" to the traders as regards traffic detained after the four days, was untenable, since the period of four days was not a matter of right, and the character of the railway company would change after the four days had expired from that of a "carrier" to that of a "bailee," and that therefore the Court would not compel the railway company, directly or indirectly, to give the traders the benefit of a former system of "averaging" the number of days. Ib.

Siding "not belonging to the company"—Station Accommodation and Terminal Services—Clerkage—Signalling—Shunting—Unreasonable Delay in Forwarding Trucks.]—If the mode in which a junction with the siding of a private owner has been effected is such that a railway company need incur no greater expense in connection with it than is involved in stopping a goods train specially at the siding junction, and either uncoupling trucks there and depositing them in the siding clear of the points, or drawing out trucks ready marshalled and attaching them to the train, doing no work within the siding, and being paid for any special use of levers by signalmen in a signal box, there is then a mere delivery for which no extra payment is due. Portway v. Colne Valley Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 211—Ry. Com.

The applicants were the owners of a private siding near the Halstead station of the Colne Valley Railway Co. Partly from the siding having only one line for both outgoing and incoming trucks, and partly from its joining the main line at a very short distance from where that line crosses a street in Halstead, on the level, so bringing the case under the rules of the Board of Trade as to the shunting of trains over a level crossing, and engines standing across the same, it was not possible for a goods train to stop at the siding junction and for its engine to uncouple a truck and deposit it in the siding or to draw a truck out and unite it to the train. All trucks to or from the applicants' siding had to be taken into the goods yard at Halstead Station and there prepared for despatch or delivery, a process which involved extra hauling and the provision of standing room. In connection with the applicants' siding traffic the railway company had to specially provide points and signals, and the levers which worked them were only required for such traffic. The railway company charged the applicants, on traffic to and from their siding, rates the same in amount as the rates charged as station to station, or collected and delivered rates, as the case might be, on similar traffic using the Halstead station. Upon an application to the Commissioners under section 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, to determine what was a just and reasonable rebate to be made from the rates so charged to the applicants, the Court found that, in respect of the applicants' siding traffic, the Colne Valley and Halstead Railway Co. did not provide the accommodation nor render the services, or any of them, for which station and service terminals were chargeable, but that they rendered certain other services in respect of that traffic—namely, some clerkage, shunting and signalling, for which a payment ought to be made to them. The Court held that a reasonable and just allowance or rebate to be made from the rates charged to the applicants, in the circumstances above described, would be so much of each rate as is not applicable to, or charged for, conveyance, less the following sums: First a sum for clerkage equal to 30 per cent. of the charge the railway companies make in any rate as a station terminal at the Halstead end; secondly, a sum for shunting equal to the station terminal at the Halstead end; and thirdly, in respect of the cost of signals, being a cost bearing the same proportion to the cost of all the signals in the siding signal box as the number of siding levers bears to the whole number of acting levers in that box, multiplied in each case by the average number of times they are respectively daily worked, such sum as the cost so ascertained works out at per ton of the siding traffic. Ib.

Services Rendered at or in Connection with Sidings not Belonging to a Railway Company—Reasonable Charge for Station Terminal.—The tonnage rate authorised by section 2 of the Schedule to the Railway Rates and Charges Order Confirmation Act, 1892, is for conveyance by merchandise train and any work incidental to such conveyance, and for the performance of which it is reasonable to use the train engine (for example, when at a junction with the main line of either a station siding or a private siding, the train has to pick up or throw off trucks, the work of hauling or shunting the trucks over the points at the junction and over so much of the siding as the keeping of the main line clear of obstruction may require); but conveyance other than this off the main line does not come within section 2. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway v. Pidcock, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 150—Ry. Com.

A station terminal is for use of the accommodation or staff of a terminal station after conveyance is at an end; and goods arriving at a station to which they are consigned for delivery, and which upon arrival have to be hauled a greater or less distance to be in a position where they can be unloaded and delivery given, are liable to a terminal charge. Ib.

The respondents were the owners of a siding which had been held to be a siding not belonging to the railway company. The siding had no direct connection with the up and down main lines, being separated from them by the railway company's goods yard at Retford station. Traffic, therefore, to and from the siding had to pass over the station sidings, and the service of taking it across was done by the railway company. This service was claimed to be one performed "at or in connection with" the traders' siding, and the railway company asked to be allowed to charge for it the same sum that they charged as a station terminal to traders who came under section 3 of the schedule:—Held, that such service might be charged for under section 5 of the schedule, even though it was a service which was involved in delivery, and which the trader could not himself perform. Held, further, that the railway company being relieved, by the provision of the siding, from the expense of finding standing room for trucks and space for loading and unloading, three-fourths of the sum which they charged as a station terminal at their Retford station, in respect of merchandise similar to the respondents' and liable to such terminal charge, was a reasonable sum to be charged to the respondents for services rendered by the railway company at or in connection with the respondents' siding at Retford. Ib.

Sidings Rates—Rebate on—Evidence.—Where the consignor of merchandise received by a railway company at a siding not belonging to the company applies to the Railway and Canal Commissioners under section 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, to determine what is a reasonable and just allowance or rebate in respect that the railway company do not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services at the siding, it lies upon the applicant to make out a prima facie case in support of the application. Salt Union v. North Staffordshire Railway, 67 L. J. Q.B. 889; [1898] 2 Q.B. 435; 79 L. T. 16; 47 W. R. 4—C.A.

Per A. L. SMITH, L.J.—The applicant must shew that the rates charged to him include a charge for station accommodation or terminal services at the siding. Per RIGBY, L.J., and VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.—The applicant may prove his claim to a rebate independently of whether he is charged for the services or not. Ib.

Shunting—Signalling—Cost of Erecting Signal Cabins and Signals at Junction with Private Sidings.—A railway company cannot charge beyond the conveyance rate for anything done on their own lines which is probably incidental to conveyance or collection of traffic to or from private sidings, no matter how much the cost and trouble may be increased by the inconvenience of the sidings or the nature of the traffic, unless the defects or inconveniences are such as to relieve the railway company from their duty to deliver and collect. But a railway company may be entitled to make a service charge if they are required for the convenience of the siding owner to do work on his siding, and where they are so required, then, if by reason of the insufficiency of the siding, or otherwise, that work involves extra work on their own line, that extra work may be a ground for an extra charge. North Staffordshire Railway v. Salt Union, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 161—Ry. Com.

Reasonable Charge for Haulage—Sheeting—Marshalling—Time Occupied by Engine in Shunting Operations at Siding.—The railway company claimed to be entitled under section 5 of the schedule to their Railway Rates and Charges (No. 25) Order Confirmation Act, 1892, to charge Messrs. Cowan a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate for conveyance for services rendered by them to Messrs. Cowan at their request or for their convenience at or in connection with Messrs. Cowan's Low Mill sidings at Penicuik, and at or in connection with sidings not belonging to the railway company at Granton Harbour and Leith Harbour, but running into and connecting with their Granton station and their Leith goods station. Messrs. Cowan sent esparto grass in bales from Granton Harbour and Leith Harbour to their mills at Penicuik, connected by private sidings with the company's railway, the Low Mill siding where the esparto was delivered being about sixteen miles from the Leith and Granton stations. The rate charge was 5s. a ton, and the maximum charge for conveyance for that distance being 3s. 1d., the balance of the rate—namely, 1s. 11d.—was the charge for services other than conveyance. These services were—first, haulage over the harbour lines; secondly, use of Granton or Leith Docks station; and thirdly, services at the Low Mill siding. As to the first of these services it was proved that when a vessel arrived at the docks the esparto was loaded direct from it into the railway trucks by men employed and paid by the consignees, but the sheeting of the trucks was done by the railway company, and also the haulage of them by engine and horse-power over the harbour lines to their goods stations at Granton and Leith. The charge for this service was 6d. a ton. In this charge was included 1½d. per ton for the sheeting, being the full service terminal, and 1d. per ton for the supply of straw and the laying it in trucks to prevent injury to the esparto from dust and damp. The railway company alleged that as there was no obligation on a railway company to perform services outside its own line, the haulage they did on the harbour lines, which were not theirs, was not a service within section 5 of their Rates and Charges Act, 1892, and that they might charge what they pleased for doing it:—Held, that such service was within section 5, such haulage being not more either of an outside or a voluntary service than cartage or collection and delivery; and the haulage being a service at or in connection with a siding, it did not affect the question that the railway company might decline to perform it if they considered it unremunerative at the price fixed. Held, further, that 6d. per ton was a reasonable sum to be charged by the railway company to Messrs. Cowan for the haulage of trucks over the harbour sidings at Granton and Leith Harbours to the railway company's goods stations at Granton and Leith, and the sheeting of such trucks, and the supply and laying of straw in such trucks in respect of esparto traffic to their sidings at Penicuik. Cowan v. North British Railway, 10 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 169—Ry. Com.

(2) As to the second of these services, it was proved that after the trucks had been loaded and brought into the Granton or Leith station they had, before being sent away, to be made up into a train with other trucks, and the marshalling of them for that purpose constituted the entire service rendered within the station in connection with the harbour lines.

For such work the company claimed to charge 13½d. a ton, or three-fourths of their maximum station terminal:—Held, that marshalling after loading and before conveyance was one of the duties for which provision was made in the station terminal, and that some proportion of that terminal would be the payment for it. And that a sum not exceeding 9d. per ton would be a reasonable sum to be charged by the railway company to Messrs. Cowan for what was done by them in dealing with Messrs. Cowan's traffic at the company's goods station at Granton or Leith. Ib.

(3) As to the third of these services being a service performed by the railway company in respect of the delivery of Messrs. Cowan's traffic to their Low Mill siding, the junction with which was within a quarter of a mile of the Penicuik station, it was proved that esparto or other traffic arrived at this siding daily by one or more trains, and that the average number of trucks left per train was about seven; and that the goods engine drew up as it approached the junction, and its engine put into the siding the trucks that were destined for it; and in addition to putting them clear of the main line, it put them into whichever set of rails near the points it was convenient to Messrs. Cowan to have them. A note was then taken of the number and contents of each truck by a checker employed by the railway company. For esparto thus delivered the railway company's charge was 3½d. per ton, and this they contended was not more than the cost of the extra time their engine and men were employed, distributed over the tonnage carried, came to per ton. This extra time they reckoned at fifteen minutes per train, but it was proved that the actual length of the stops did not average four minutes, leaving eleven minutes for time lost or reduced speed before and after stopping:—Held, that a railway company were not entitled to make a special charge for time occupied in the stopping and again starting of a train, for it was part of the service of delivery, which was provided for in the rate for conveyance; nor on the same ground could they make a special charge for so much of the actual time the train was at a standstill as it took to uncouple and put trucks past the points. Held, further, that if the time a train was detained at Low Mill siding (while its engine was occupied in shunting Messrs. Cowan's traffic) exceeded four minutes, the railway company would be entitled to charge Messrs. Cowan for time over the said four minutes during which the railway company's engine was occupied in shunting such traffic at the rate of 7s. an hour. Ib.

6. ARBITRATION OF DIFFERENCES.

Action to Recover Charges—Railway—Regulation—Difference—Arbitration.—It is a condition precedent to the reference to an arbitrator of a case between a customer and the railway company, under the London and North-Western Railway Order Confirmation Act, 1891, that there should have arisen a difference between the parties before action brought. In the absence of such difference the ordinary Courts have jurisdiction, and the finding of fact by a County Court Judge is conclusive on all subsequent tribunals. London and North-Western

"Any difference"—Charges in Addition to Tonnage Rate—Reasonableness of Time Allowed Free of Charge.—By section 5 of the Midland Railway Order Confirmation Act, 1891, "any difference" arising thereunder is to be determined by an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade:—Held, that all matters material and incidental to such a difference are within the scope of the reference, and that the arbitrator in estimating the charges to be made for services in addition to those covered by the tonnage rate must take into consideration the reasonableness of the time allowed under the tonnage rate itself before the extra charges attach. London and North-Western Railway v. Donellan (67 L. J. Q.B. 681; [1898] 2 Q.B. 7) approved. Midland Railway v. Loseby, 68 L. J. Q.B. 326; [1899] A.C. 133; 80 L. T. 93; 47 W. R. 656—H.L. (E.)

Siding Rent—Jurisdiction of Courts.—Section 5 of a provisional order confirmed by the London and North-Western Railway (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, provides: "The company may charge for the services hereunder mentioned"—that is, amongst others, "the detention of trucks, or the use or occupation of any accommodation before or after conveyance, beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the company to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof . . . and services rendered in connection with such use and occupation"—"when rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, a reasonable sum, by way of addition to the tonnage rate. Any difference arising under this section shall be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade at the instance of either party." The railway company gave notice to a trader that four days would be allowed free of charge for the release of trucks consigned to him at one of their stations, and that after the expiration of the four days a charge of 6*d.* per day for every truck not so released and remaining at the station would be required. In an action by the company to recover the charge of 6*d.* per day in respect of trucks consigned to the defendant and remaining on the company's sidings beyond the limit of four days,—Held, that upon the true construction of the section in case of any dispute arising under it, the determination of the whole matter, and not merely of the reasonableness of the charges, was referred to the arbitrator, and that the jurisdiction of the Court to try the action was ousted. London and North-Western Railway v. Donellan, 67 L. J. Q.B. 681; [1898] 2 Q.B. 7; 78 L. T. 575—C.A.

CERTIORARI.

When Granted.—The writ of certiorari is the apt means for preventing the infliction or continuance of any wrong by any unwarranted assumption of jurisdiction. But the granting of the writ at the instance of a private person is a matter of discretion, and not ex debito justitiæ. Rev v. Londonderry Justices, [1905] 2 Ir. R. 318—C.A.

Auditor—Surcharge—Certiorari—Right of Court to Review Auditor's Decision on Fact.—The Court, upon an application for a writ of certiorari under section 247, sub-section 8 of the Public Health Act, 1875, by a person aggrieved by the disallowance of an auditor, has power to review the auditor's decision on the facts as well as on law. *Reg. v. Quarter Sessions—Affirmance of Conviction at Petty Sessions—Unspeakable Order—Trespass in Pursuit of Game.—Where, on appeal from a conviction at petty sessions for trespass in pursuit of game, the chairman and Justices at quarter sessions simply affirmed the conviction with costs,—Held, that certiorari would not lie to bring up to be quashed the order of quarter sessions. Jurisdiction of the King's Bench Division over an appellate order of quarter sessions, which neither recites the evidence on which it is founded nor states a Case, considered. *Rev v. Acquittal by Justices—Bias—Order—Voidable, not Void—Certiorari.—An order of acquittal made by a chairman and Justices of quarter sessions (assuming one of the Justices to have been biased) cannot be quashed on certiorari. The order of a biased tribunal is voidable only, not void. Rev v. Galway Justices (No. 2), [1906] 2 Ir. R. 499—K.B. D.

Charitable Motive Induced by Religious Sympathy—Proceedings to Obtain Custody of Third Persons.]—A charitable motive induced by sympathy with the religious views of another person the object of the charity is none the less such a charitable motive as comes within the recognised exceptions to the law against maintenance forbidding one person to support that other in his lawsuit. Holden v. Thompson, 76 L. J. K.B. 889; [1907] 2 K.B. 489; 97 L. T. 138; 23 T.L.R. 529—D.

Maintenance — Trade Union — Instigating Member to Bring Action for Libel—Reasonable and Probable Cause—Paying Costs of Action—Common Interest.]—The objects of a trade union, as stated in the rules, were the raising of funds for mutual benefit by the contributions of the members, which were to be applied (inter alia) to giving legal aid to members when necessity arose in their relation with employers; and in cases of a dispute arising between members and their employers, or unlawful treatment of members by their employers, the executive committee were, if they considered the merits of the case justified such a course, to provide legal aid for the members. A member of the union was dismissed by his employer without a week's notice, and in answer to a letter written to him by the general secretary of the union the employer stated that the member was discharged for dishonesty. The union took proceedings on behalf of the member to recover a week's salary in lieu of notice, and the employer paid the amount. The executive committee of the union then obtained the member's consent to bring an action for libel against the employer, founded upon his letter to the general secretary, and brought an action and employed their own solicitors, whose costs they paid. The action was dismissed with costs. The employer sued the union to recover his taxed costs of the action for libel:—Held, that the union had instigated the plaintiff to bring the action, for which there was no reasonable or probable cause; that the union had wrongfully maintained the plaintiff in the action, having no common interest; and that therefore the union were liable. Semble, there was nothing in the rules of the union to justify the action; but even if there was, the rules could not justify an act which would be wrongful if done by an individual. *Greig v. 1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Charitable Gift—Secret Trust.]—A testator's wishes relating to the use of his property for the benefit of the public, communicated to his devisee in his lifetime and accepted by him, will not be enforced as a secret charitable trust where the true intention was not to impose a binding obligation, but to invest the devisee with the same freedom and irresponsibility in carrying out the testator's wishes which the testator himself exercised in his lifetime, making him as it were the alter ego of the testator. Pitt-Rivers, In re; Scott v. Pitt-Rivers, 71 L. J. Ch. 225; [1902] 1 Ch. 403; 86 L. T. 6; 50 W. R. 342; 66 J. P. 275—C.A.

Conditional Gift—Perpetuity.]—An immediate gift to charity is valid, although the particular application of the fund directed by the will may not of necessity take effect within any assignable limit of time, or may never take effect at all except on the occurrence of events in their essence contingent and uncertain; while, on the other hand, a gift in trust for charity which is conditional upon a future and uncertain event is subject to the same rules as any other estate depending on its coming into existence upon a condition precedent. Swain, In re; Monckton v. Hands, 74 L. J. Ch. 354; [1905] 1 Ch. 669; 92 L. T. 715—C.A.

Where, subject to a prior life interest, a testator's residuary real and personal estate is by the will devoted to charity as from the testator's death, a direction to postpone the payment of the charitable gift until the formation of a reserve fund, directed without any limit of time to be accumulated out of income as an increment to the charitable fund, is not a condition precedent to the charitable gift coming into effect so as to render the gift void as a perpetuity. Martin v. Mangham (13 L. J. Ch. 392; 14 Sim. 230) and Chamberlayne v. Brockett (42 L. J. Ch. 368; L. R. 8 Ch. 206) followed and applied. Ib.

Bequest without Reference to Age or Poverty—Perpetuity—Condition.]—The testator made the following gifts: "I bequeath to the Vintners' Company . . . the portrait of" a named person "to be hung up by them in a conspicuous part of their common hall and always retained in that position. And upon condition that they accept the said bequest of the said portrait with the obligation aforesaid I bequeath to the said company the sum of 4,000*l.* . . enjoining the said company out of the income of the said sum of 4,000*l.* to keep in due and proper repair the said portrait, cleaning and re-gilding its frame not less than once in every four years, the surplus of the said income to be applied . . . for the benefit of individuals" answering a particular description without any reference to age or poverty, "and if applied by way of annuity, no single annuity to exceed 50*l.* per annum":—Held, that the gift of the picture was valid, the condition imposed being a condition subsequent, but that no part of the gift of the 4,000*l.* legacy could be supported as a charitable gift, and therefore it failed wholly, as infringing the rule against perpetuity. Gassiot, In re; Fladgate v. Vintners' Co., 70 L. J. Ch. 242—Cozens-Hardy, J.

2. WHAT IS.

Royal Theatrical Fund.—The Royal General Theatrical Fund Association is a charity. Sir G. JESSEL's decision to that effect in Spiller v. Maude (32 Ch. D. 158*n*) approved of. That case was not overruled or intended to be overruled by Cunnack v. Edwards (65 L. J. Ch. 801; [1896] 2 Ch. 679). Lacy, In re; Royal General Theatrical Fund Association v. Kydd, 68 L. J. Ch. 488; [1899] 2 Ch. 149; 80 L. T. 706; 47 W. R. 664—Stirling, J.

"Charitable and benevolent" Institutions—Validity.—A bequest in trust for such "charitable and benevolent" institutions as certain persons shall determine is a good bequest. Sutton, In re; Stone v. Att.-Gen. (54 L. J. Ch. 613; 28 Ch. D. 464), followed. LORD COTTENHAM's interlocutory, disapproved in Ellis v. Selby (4 L. J. Ch. 69; 1 Myl. & Cr. 286) of Jemmit v. Verril (Amb. 585*n.*), not adopted. Best, In re; Jarvis v. Birmingham Corporation, 73 L. J. Ch. 808; [1904] 2 Ch. 354; 53 W. R. 21—Farwell, J.

"Charitable, educational, or other institutions of the town of K."—Testator by his will bequeathed a fund "upon trust for such charitable, educational, or other institutions of the town of K., and also for such other general purposes for the benefit of the town of K., or any of the inhabitants thereof, as my trustees shall in their absolute uncontrolled discretion think fit." And he desired, without in any way binding his trustees thereto, that the following institutions should be carefully considered by them in such distribution—namely, first the K. Memorial Hospital; secondly, the K. Grammar School; and thirdly, the K. Public Free Library:—Held, that the benefits conferred by the gift were limited to general and public purposes of the town of K. and the persons dwelling in that town, and that the whole of the gift was a valid charitable gift. Dolan v. Macdermot (L. R. 5 Eq. 60; L. R. 3 Ch. 676) followed. Allen, In re; Hargreaves v. Taylor, 74 L. J. Ch. 593; [1905] 2 Ch. 400; 93 L. T. 597; 54 W. R. 91; 21 T. L. R. 662—Swinfen Eady, J.

"In charity or works of public utility"—Uncertainty—Bequest "for the benefit or hospitality" of company.—A testator bequeathed to the company of C. and the company of A. the sum of 5,000*l.* each, to be invested in such securities as the master and court of assistants of such companies might select, the revenue to be expended at the option of the master and court of such companies, as to two-thirds in "charity or works of public utility," and as to the remaining one-third for "the benefit or hospitality of the respective companies":—Held, that "or" was used disjunctively, and that the whole of the two-thirds might be applied for purposes which were not charitable, and therefore that the gift failed as to two-thirds. But, held, the gift of one-third was a gift of income for the absolute benefit of the companies, and that they were absolutely entitled to one-third. Langham v. Peterson, 87 L. T. 744; 67 J. P. 75—Swinfen Eady, J.

For such Charitable, Benevolent, or Religious Objects as Trustees Select.—A testatrix directed that the residue of her estate should be applied by her trustees "at their discretion from time to time towards such charitable, benevolent, or religious objects or purposes within the city of Aberdeen as they themselves shall institute or select":—Held, following Blair v. Duncan (71 L. J. P.C. 22; [1902] A.C. 37) and Grimond v. Grimond (74 L. J. P.C. 85; [1905] A.C. 124), that the direction was void for uncertainty. Shaw's Trustees v. Esson's Trustees, 8 F. 52—Ct. of Sess.

Gift to such Charitable Institutions as Trustees may Determine—Pure and Impure Personality—Proceeds of Sale of Real Estate.—Where under the will of a person dying before the passing of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, a mixed fund, consisting of pure and impure personality and the proceeds of sale of real estate, is given to trustees to apply to such charitable institutions and objects as they may determine, and in such manner as they may think fit, the gift is a valid gift to the trustees of both the pure and impure personality and the proceeds of the sale of the realty, and confers on them a power to appoint to any charitable object that they think fit. If the trustees appoint to objects that can take the property in question, the appointment will be valid; but if they appoint to objects which cannot take—e.g. if they appoint impure personality to institutions not exempted from the provisions of the Charitable Uses Act, 1735—the appointment will to that extent fail. Lewis v. Allenby (L. R. 10 Eq. 668) discussed. Piercy, In re; Whitwham v. Piercy, 67 L. J. Ch. 297; [1898] 1 Ch. 565; 78 L. T. 277; 46 W. R. 503—C.A.

Quære, per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., whether if the trustees appointed to objects which could not take, that would be an exercise of their power in such a sense that they could not subsequently appoint to objects that could take. Ib.

"Such charitable or public purposes as my trustee thinks proper."—A bequest to be "applied for such charitable or public purposes as my trustee thinks proper" is too vague and uncertain for any Court in England or Scotland to administer as a charitable gift. Blair v. Duncan, 71 L. J. P.C. 22; [1902] A.C. 37; 86 L. T. 157; 50 W. R. 369—H.L. (Sc.).

Bequest to Vicar and Churchwardens—To be Applied “as they shall in their sole discretion think fit”.—A testatrix gave a legacy of 400*l.* to the vicar and churchwardens of Kingston “to be applied by them in such manner as they shall in their sole discretion think fit”.—Held, that the gift was not void for uncertainty, but was a good and valid charitable gift to the parish for ecclesiastical purposes. Thorner v. Wilson (28 L. J. Ch. 145; 4 Drew, 350) followed. Garrard, In re; Gordon v. Craigie, 76 L. J. Ch. 240; [1907] 1 Ch. 382; 96 L. T. 357; 23 T. L. R. 256—Joyce, J.

“Charitable or religious institutions and societies”.—Selection of Objects by Trustees—Uncertainty.—A bequest to trustees to divide a testator’s residue among such “charitable or religious institutions and societies” as they might select, held void for uncertainty. Grimond (or Macintyre) v. Grimond, 74 L. J. P. C. 35; [1905] A. C. 124; 92 L. T. 477; 21 T. L. R. 323—H. L. (Sc.)

“For the charitable purposes agreed upon between us”.—Evidence Limiting Trust—Admissibility.—A testatrix by her will gave a sum to C. “for the charitable purposes agreed upon between us.” C. gave evidence that the testatrix had told him that she intended to leave him a legacy, the income of which he was to apply for certain charitable purposes during his life, and he was to dispose of the principal after his death as his own property. C. did not claim any beneficial interest in the legacy.—Held, that C.’s evidence was admissible to show the charitable purposes intended, but not to limit the gift to the income only of the legacy during his life, which was in contradiction of the will, and that a scheme must be directed for the whole legacy. Huxtable, In re; Huxtable v. Crawford, 71 L. J. Ch. 876; [1902] 2 Ch. 793; 87 L. T. 415; 51 W. R. 282—C. A.

For “rebuilding and equipment of hospital”.—“Under the direction of my executors”.—Building nearly Completed before Death of Testatrix—Validity of Gift—Cy-près.—A testatrix gave a legacy “towards the rebuilding and equipment” of a hospital “to the satisfaction and under the direction” of her executors. At the death of the testatrix the hospital was almost entirely rebuilt, though not equipped. The directors did not at any time direct the rebuilding or equipment.—Held, that the executors could not give directions for works already completed, but that if they gave their assent to proposed works of which they had a general knowledge they might apply the legacy towards such works when properly executed. Unite, In re; Edwards v. Smith, 75 L. J. Ch. 163; 54 W. R. 358; 22 T. L. R. 242—Kekewich, J.

Held, also, that “equipment” meant everything required to convert an empty building into a hospital. Ib.

Held, also, that, no limit of time being fixed, the discretion of the executors remained exercisable until the hospital was fully rebuilt and fully equipped. Ib.

Leasehold House given to Trustees to Carry on School—House for Storage and Distribution of Books to Publishers.—A bequest to trustees of a leasehold house, where the testatrix had established a school for religious teaching and elementary education, the expenditure on which exceeded the fees, with a direction to the trustees to carry on the school, held to be a good charitable gift. A bequest to trustees of a leasehold house, which had been used by the testatrix and which was to be used by the trustees for the storage of books, written by certain persons, the house being in the occupation of a person who lived there rent free in consideration of his distributing the books to the publishers when required for sale, with a direction to the trustees to pay the rent of the house, held not to be a good charitable gift. Hawkins, In re; Walrond v. Newton, 22 T. L. R. 521—Swinfen Eady, J.

“Ecclesiastical charity”.—Parish Councils—Appointment of New Trustees—“Church or denomination”.—“Members thereof as such”.—Church of England—Churchwardens.—The words “as such” in section 75, sub-section 2 (e) of the Local Government Act, 1894, shew that no charity is an “ecclesiastical charity” within that clause unless, upon the true construction of the instrument of endowment, its benefits are exclusively confined to members of a particular church or denomination. Ross’ Charity, In re; Perry Almshouses, In re, 68 L. J. Ch. 66; [1899] 1 Ch. 21; 79 L. T. 366; 47 W. R. 197; 63 J. P. 52—C. A.

Section 14, sub-section 2 of the Local Government Act, 1894, applies to the case of a non-ecclesiastical charity, the endowment of which is vested in churchwardens alone. Ib.

“Ecclesiastical charities” under the Local Government Act, 1894, are not confined to charities for the spiritual or religious benefit of a church, but include eleemosynary charities. Ib.

A rentcharge payable to churchwardens to be laid out by them for the benefit of six widows of the parish “whom they should judge the properest objects to receive the same, with preference to those who, not being disabled by infirmity or sickness, were most constant in their attendance on the public service of the church,” is not an “ecclesiastical charity” within section 75, sub-section 2 of the Local Government Act, 1894, and the parish council has power to appoint new trustees of it in the place of the churchwardens. Ib.

An endowed charity for poor aged persons “who shall have attended Divine service at the church of the parish of their respective residences every Sunday for the last five years, and been partakers of the Holy Communion, and lived a godly, righteous, and sober life to the glory of God’s holy name,” is an “ecclesiastical charity” within section 75, sub-section 2 of the Local Government Act, 1894, and the power to appoint trustees thereof is not vested in the parish council. Ib.

To Christian Brethren.—A bequest of “100*l.* sterling to the Christian Brethren, in trust of A. B. and C. D. one year after my death,” is a valid charitable gift. Brown, In re; Paden v. Finlay, [1898] 1 Ir. R. 423—M. R.

Old and Worn-out Clerks of Firm.]—A gift to form a fund for the purpose of pensioning off the "old and worn-out clerks" of a firm is a good charitable bequest, and the Court will direct a scheme for its administration. Gosling, In re; Gosling v. Smith, 48 W. R. 300—Byrne, J.

Home of Rest for School Teachers.]—A gift for the support of a Home of Rest for Lady Teachers, in which each lady is to pay a small sum for board and lodging, is a good charitable bequest. Estlin In re; Prichard v. Thomas, 72 L. J. Ch. 687; 89 L. T. 88—Kekewich, J.

Corps of Commissionaires—"To aid in purchase of barracks or in any other way beneficial to the corps"—Voluntary Association—Charity—Perpetuity.]—A gift to a perpetual institution not charitable is not necessarily bad. The gift is good if it is not subject to any trust that will prevent the existing members of the association from dealing with it as they please, or if it can be construed as a gift to or for the benefit of the individual members of the association. If the gift is one which by the terms of it, or which by reason of the constitution of the association in whose favour it is made tends to a perpetuity, the gift is bad. Clarke, In re; Clarke v. Clarke, 70 L. J. Ch. 631; [1901] 2 Ch. 110; 84 L. T. 811; 49 W. R. 628—Byrne, J.

The Corps of Commissionaires is a voluntary association with a somewhat special constitution for the benefit of able-bodied and disabled soldiers and sailors alike, which is mainly supported by the subscriptions of the members and intended for their benefit; and although there are funds appropriated to the benefit of the corps which, taken separately, may be considered as charities, the corps as at present constituted would not appear to be a charity within the legal meaning of that expression. Id.

A gift to the committee for the time being of the corps "to aid in the purchase of their barracks or in any other way beneficial to that corps" is good on the ground either that some of the objects of the corps are charitable, or else that it does not tend to a perpetuity, inasmuch as the committee for the time being of the corps can deal with it in any way they please for the benefit of the corps. Dictum in Cocks v. Manners (40 L. J. Ch. 640; L. R. 12 Eq. 574) approved and applied. Dutton, In re; Peake, ex parte (48 L. J. Ex. 350; 4 Ex. D. 54); Amos, In re; Carrier v. Price (60 L. J. Ch. 570; [1891] 3 Ch. 159); Clark's Trusts, In re (45 L. J. Ch. 194; 1 Ch. D. 497); Thomson v. Shakespear (29 L. J. Ch. 276; 1 De G. F. & J. 399); and Carne v. Long (29 L. J. Ch. 503; 2 De G. F. & J. 75) discussed and distinguished. Id.

To Persons Named "or their successors"—Charitable Institutions—Official Position.]—A testator who died in 1886, and whose estate consisted of realty and chattels real only, bequeathed legacies to M. D., H. M., and A. C., "Nazareth House Hammersmith, or their successors," to E. M. and M. L., "of the Convent of the Assumption Wellington Road Bromley by Bow or their successors," and to other individual legatees, each described as of a certain charitable institution, or his successor." At the date of the will and the death of the testator the various legatees were to the testator's knowledge members and holders of official positions in the respective communities mentioned.—Held, that the legacies were given to the legatees as holders of offices in and for the benefit of the associations in which they held office, and that, as the purposes of those associations were charitable, the gifts were indistinguishable from the gift "to the Sisters of the Charity of St. Paul at Selley Oak" in Cocks v. Manners (40 L. J. Ch. 640; L. R. 12 Eq. 574), and were void. Delany, In re; Conoley v. Quick, 71 L. J. Ch. 811; [1902] 2 Ch. 642; 87 L. T. 46; 51 W. R. 27—Farwell, J.

"Missionary objects"—Uncertainty—Power of Selection—Nature of Missionary Work of Donee of Power.]—A testatrix directed her trustees to pay trust moneys to M., to be applied by him "for such missionary object or objects at home, abroad, or in the colonies as he shall in his absolute discretion select." M. was known by the testatrix to have been engaged in assisting Christian missions in foreign countries and abroad.—Held, that the Court was entitled to have regard to the nature of the work of M., and, that being so, that the testatrix had used the word "missionary" in its popular sense, and the gift was not void for uncertainty. Scott v. Brownrigg (9 L. R. Ir. 246) not followed. Kenny, In re; Clode v. Andrews, 97 L. T. 130—Warrington, J.

Local or Scottish Charitable Institutions—Selection—Uncertainty.]—A testator gave his whole estate to certain named trustees, and to any other persons whom he might afterwards appoint, or who might be assumed into the trust, and to the acceptors and survivors, and to the heirs of the longest liver of them as trustees, and to the assignees of the said trustees or their forebears, and, after reciting that it was his wish to bestow the residue of his estate "in the form of donations and bequests of a benevolent and charitable nature," he bequeathed legacies to certain charitable institutions in Glasgow, and thereafter directed his trustees to realise the whole of his estate at such time as they might think proper, and "at any time or times, or from time to time, as and when the said residue or any part thereof becomes available, as they may deem proper, to pay over or divide the said residue, or any part or parts thereof, to or amongst such local or Scottish charitable institutions and schemes already constituted, or which may hereafter be constituted . . . as they may select, or any one or more of such institutions and schemes, and that at such time, in such manner, or in such proportions, all as they in their absolute discretion may deem proper"—Held, that the bequest of residue was not void for uncertainty. Dick's Trustees v. Dick, [1907] S. C. 953—Ct. of Sess.

Bequest to Regiment—Officers' Mess—Gift for Maintenance of Library—Efficiency of Army—Public Benefit—Relief of Taxation.]—A bequest to the officers' mess of a particular regiment for the maintenance of a library for the use of the officers of the mess for ever is a good charitable gift within the Statute of Elizabeth, on the ground that, the mess being an integral part of the regiment, the gift was directly a public benefit by increasing the efficiency of the army, in which the public is interested, not only financially, but also for the safety and protection of the country. Quære, whether the gift might not also be supported as charitable within the statute on the ground that it would be in relief of taxation in so far as applied to the maintenance of the officers' mess. Good, In re; Harington v. Watts, 74 L. J. Ch. 512; [1905] 2 Ch. 60; 92 L. T. 796; 53 W. R. 476; 21 T. L. R. 450—Farwell, J.

Gift of Houses for Use of Former Officers during their Life—Perpetuity.—A gift of houses for the use of old officers (that is, ex-officers) of a regiment at a small rent during their life is void for perpetuity. Good, In re; Harington v. Watts, 74 L. J. Ch. 512; [1905] 2 Ch. 60; 92 L. T. 796; 53 W. R. 476; 21 T. L. R. 450—Farwell, J.

Vegetarian Society—Food Reform.—A gift by will of a sum of money to certain persons, to be applied as they might in their absolute discretion think best "in furtherance of the principles of food reform as advocated by the vegetarian societies of Manchester and London,"—Held, a good charitable gift. Cranston, In re ([1898] 1 Ir. R. 431), followed. Slatyer, In re; Howard v. Lewis, 21 T. L. R. 295—Joyce, J.

The objects of Vegetarian Societies may be fairly described as charitable within the principle of deceased cases. Cranston, In re; Webb v. Oldfield, [1898] 1 Ir. R. 431—C.A.

Burial Grounds Provided for Members of Society of Friends—Bequest of Money to Keep in Order such Grounds—Advancement of Religion.—A gift of money for the purpose of providing or of keeping in good order a burial-ground, although that burial-ground may not be a parish churchyard, and although it may be connected with the meeting-house of or for the benefit of members of a particular religious community, may be supported as a good charitable gift as being one for the advancement of religion. A bequest, therefore, of money for the purpose of keeping in good order certain burial-grounds provided for the Society of Friends, and in particular the grave of the testator's late wife, which was in one of the grounds, is a good charitable gift. The direction as to the grave of the testator's wife only imposes a special obligation ancillary to the repair of the graveyards, and does not create a separate trust. Income Tax Commissioners v. Pemsel (61 L. J. Q.B. 265; [1891] A.C. 531) applied. Vaughan, In re; Vaughan v. Thomas (83 Ch. D. 187), considered and explained. Manser, In re; Att.-Gen. v. Lucas, 74 L. J. Ch. 95; [1905] 1 Ch. 68; 92 L. T. 79; 53 W. R. 261—Warrington, J.

Advowson—Gift to Church Patronage Trust—Object of Trust to Present Fit Persons to Livings—Application for Leave to Retain Property.—Trusts declared concerning an advowson under which there are no cestuis que trust, except by inference the public, and where the trusts are in substance merely that the legal owners of the advowson, their heirs and assigns, shall take care to present fit and duly qualified persons to the living as vacancies occur—which is the duty imposed by the law on every owner of an advowson—are not good charitable trusts. The intention of the creator of the trusts to improve by that means the choice of the parson to be presented to the living is not sufficient to make them charitable trusts. The observations of the Lords Justices in Hunter, In re; Hood v. Att.-Gen. (66 L. J. Ch. 545; [1897] 2 Ch. 105), to the supposed effect that trusts of an advowson directed to narrowing the choice of clergymen to be presented to the living to men holding particular religious views in the Church of England were good charitable trusts, discussed, and the case on that ground distinguished. Church Patronage Trust, In re; Laurie v. Att.-Gen., 73 L. J. Ch. 712; [1904] 2 Ch. 643; 91 L. T. 705; 53 W. R. 85; 20 T. L. R. 713—C.A. Affirming, 73 L. J. Ch. 77; [1904] 1 Ch. 41; 89 L. T. 505; 52 W. R. 106; 68 J. P. 64; 20 T. L. R. 52—Buckley, J.

Semble, that if the trust had been to present a person of a particular type of religious thought within the pale of the Church of England there would have been a charitable trust within the Act. Ib. (Per Buckley, J.)

Purchase of Advowsons or Presentations—No Trust Declared of such Purchase—Uncertainty—Failure of Gift.—Where, in a testamentary bequest, charitable purposes are mixed up with other purposes of so indefinite a nature that the Court cannot execute them, or where the description includes purposes which may or may not be charitable, and a discretion is vested in the trustees, the whole gift fails for uncertainty. Hunter v. Att.-Gen., 68 L. J. Ch. 449; [1899] A.C. 309; 80 L. T. 732; 47 W. R. 673—H.L. (E.)

Peal of Bells—Bequest to Ringers.—A bequest to the ringers for the time being of the parish church of C. who should ring a peal of bells from six to seven in the forenoon on each 29th of May, in commemoration of the happy restoration of the monarchy to England is a good charitable gift. Pardoe, In re; McLaughlin v. Att.-Gen., 75 L. J. Ch. 455; [1906] 2 Ch. 184; 94 L. T. 567; 54 W. R. 561; 22 T. L. R. 452—Kekewich, J.

Maintenance of Headstones.—A bequest for the erection and maintenance of headstones to the graves of any persons who at their death were resident as pensioners in the almshouses at C., and who should be buried in the churchyard of C., is a good charitable gift. Manser, In re; Att.-Gen. v. Lucas (74 L. J. Ch. 95; [1905] 1 Ch. 68), applied. Ib.

Such "public charities and institutions" as Trustees should think Worthy—Uncertainty.]—A bequest of residue in trust for "such public charities and institutions or for such charitable purposes for the public advantage or benefit" as the trustees should in their absolute discretion consider worthy and fitting objects to receive the same is a good charitable gift. Grimond v. Grimond (74 L. J. P.C. 35; [1905] A.C. 124) distinguished. Ib.

Residue to be Divided amongst such Charitable Institutions Connected with County of L. as Trustees think Expedient—Uncertainty.—A testator directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate in such proportions as they might consider proper "amongst such charitable institutions connected with the county of Lanark as they may consider expedient":—Held, that the bequest was not void for uncertainty. Cleland's Trustees v. Cleland, [1907] S.C. 591—Ct. of Sess.

Trust for Support and Education—Objects to have Specified Names—Uncertainty.—A testator devised all his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust "to pay towards the support and education in Ireland of any Roman Catholic boy or boys, man or men, of the surname of O'Laverty or Laverty, O'Lafferty or Lafferty, being between the ages of eleven years complete and twenty-three years complete, until such boy or man shall have obtained a trade or profession, such sums as said trustees may think proper." Absolute discretion was given to the trustees as to the selection of recipients and the discontinuance of any payment to them for their "support or education." They were also empowered to accumulate and invest the interest, the profits of which were to be applied "in the same manner as those of the original shares or funds—viz. for the support of boys or men of the above-mentioned surnames, under the circumstances before mentioned":—Held, that the gift was not charitable, and therefore failed. Laverty v. Laverty, [1907] 1 Ir. R. 9—Barton, J.

Bequest for Relief of Class who have Shewn Sympathy in Pursuit of Science—Uncertainty.—A testator directed his trustees to employ the residue of his estate "in instituting and carrying on a scheme for the relief of indigent bachelors and widowers, of whatever religious denomination or belief they may be, who have shewn practical sympathy, either as amateurs or professionals, in the pursuits of science in any of its branches, whose lives have been characterised by sobriety, morality, and industry, and who are not less than fifty-five years of age, or of aiding any scheme which now exists or may be instituted for that purpose":—Held, first, that the bequest was charitable; and secondly, that it was not void for uncertainty. Murdoch's Trustees v. Weir, [1907] S.C. 185—Ct. of Sess.

Direction for Erection of Statues and Towers—Encouragement of Young and Rising Artists.—A testator directed the income of his heritable estate to be used in erecting—first, statues of himself and other members of his family, and secondly, artistic towers, on his estates, declaring that his wish was to encourage young and rising artists, and that for that purpose prizes were to be given for the best plans of the proposed statues and towers:—Held, that this was not an educational or charitable bequest. McCaig v. Glasgow University, [1907] S.C. 231—Ct. of Sess.

Gift for Repair of Inclosure Round a Grave.—Bequest of 50*l.* to be invested and the dividends to be applied in keeping the inclosure round a grave in order and repair held to be void. Toole v. Hamilton, [1901] 1 Ir. R. 383—M.R.

Repair of Churchyard—Validity—Mortmain—Act of Parliament—Implied Repeal.—The gift by a testatrix of "any little money left" for the repair of a churchyard is a valid charitable bequest of her residue under the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, and is not limited to the sum of 500*l.* by virtue of the Gifts for Churches Act, 1803. Douglas, In re; Douglas v. Simpson, 74 L. J. Ch. 196; [1905] 1 Ch. 279; 92 L. T. 78; 21 T. L. R. 140—Kekewich, J.

Legatee to Give Undertaking to Keep Burial Vaults in Order.—Bequest of 500*l.* to the treasurer of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, at L., for the benefit of the poor of L., "on condition that the committee of said society shall undertake in writing to my executors to have the railing and iron-work of the two vaults in St. L.'s cemetery . . . painted once in every three years."—Held, a valid bequest. Roche v. McDermott, [1901] 1 Ir. R. 394—M.R.

"Religious purposes."—A testator bequeathed to his trustees a sum of money, upon trust, to invest it, and apply the income for such religious purposes as his trustees and the Bishop of C. for the time being should, in their uncontrolled discretion, think fit. By a clause in the will immediately preceding this bequest, the testator bequeathed a like sum of money to his trustees for the benefit of such charitable institutions connected with the counties of C. and D., as his trustees and the Bishop of C. for the time being should in their uncontrolled discretion think fit, irrespective of creed:—Held, that the words "religious purposes" meant religious purposes which were charitable, and that the bequest was not void for uncertainty. Arnott v. Arnott, [1906] 1 Ir. R. 127—M.R.

Grimond v. Grimond (74 L. J. P.C. 35; [1905] A.C. 124) is a decision upon Scotch law, and does not affect the rule laid down in White v. White (62 L. J. Ch. 342; [1893] 2 Ch. 41) and earlier cases, that a bequest for a religious purpose is prima facie a bequest for a charitable purpose. Ib.

Political and Religious Objects Combined—Validity.—A devise for "the furtherance of Conservative principles and religious and mental improvement" is a valid charitable gift. Scowercroft, In re; Orinrod v. Bishop's Itchington (Vicar), 67 L. J. Ch. 697; [1898] 2 Ch. 638; 79 L. T. 342—Stirling, J.

Voluntary Association—Inn of Chancery—Property Held to Intent it should always be used as Inn of Chancery.—By a deed dated in 1618, after a statement that the messuage known as Clifford's Inn had been for many years theretofore used "as an Inn of Chancery for the furtherance of the study and practiss of the Comon Lawes of this Realme of England," and that the grantors had an honourable intent and care that it should continue to be so used, the same messuage "principally for that purpose and consideration," and in consideration of 600*l.* paid to the grantors by the Society of Clifford's Inn, was assured to the use of certain named members of the society to the intent that the same messuage should retain its ancient name and "be employed as an Inn of Chancery for the good of the gentlemen of that Societe and the benefytt of the common welthe as aforesaid":—Held, that the property was subject to a charitable trust, and could not be sold by the members of the society for their own benefit. Smith v. Kerr, 71 L. J. Ch. 369; [1902] 1 Ch. 774; 86 L. T. 477—C.A.

Inn of Chancery—Proceeds of Sale—Settlement of Scheme—Dependency of Inn of Court—Clifford's Inn—Inner Temple.—Upon the application of the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple to intervene and attend all proceedings connected with the settlement of a scheme relating to the trust fund which had arisen from the sale of Clifford's Inn, on the ground that Clifford's Inn was a dependency of the Inner Temple and had been under the control of that society in all educational matters for several centuries,—Held, that, on the evidence before the Court, the Inner Temple had no paramount right to be regarded as persons in the position of trustees of the fund, with power to administer it as they thought fit, and further that no useful purpose would be served by the Court exercising its discretion in favour of the Inner Temple and granting the application. Smith v. Kerr (No. 2), 74 L. J. Ch. 763—Farwell, J.

"Charitable or Emigration uses."—See Sidney, In re; Hingeston v. Sidney, 77 L. J. Ch. 296; [1908] 1 Ch. 488—C.A.

Devise—"Charitable or other purpose."—See Harbison, In re; Morris v. Larkin, post, WILL.

3. MORTMAIN—INTEREST IN LAND.

Gift of Land by Will—Trust for Sale—"Land."—A testator gave all his real and personal estate upon trust for conversion, the income to be paid during the lifetime of his wife to her and to certain charities, the estate to be ultimately divided between the charities. He directed that no part of his freeholds or leaseholds should be sold during his wife's life without her consent:—Held, that the reversionary interest given to the charities was not "land" within the meaning of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, but that the immediate terminable interest in the income of land was; and, consequently, that the latter interest, not having been sold within a year of the testator's death (and no application for an extension of time having been made within the year), had vested by force of the Act in the official trustee of charity lands. Ryland, In re; Roper v. Ryland, 72 L. J. Ch. 277; [1908] 1 Ch. 467; 88 L. T. 456; 51 W. R. 345—Byrne, J.

Personal Estate arising from Land—Power of Trustees to Retain Land Unsold after Expiration of Year.—Where real estate is devised to trustees on trust for sale, and the proceeds directed to be paid to a charity, "land" has not been "assured by will to or for the benefit of any charitable use" within the meaning of section 5 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, the charity taking no benefit in anything except "personal estate arising from land." Consequently sections 5 and 6 of the Act do not apply, and the trustees are not obliged to apply to the Court under section 5 to extend the time for sale beyond the period of one year from the testator's death. Sidebottom, In re; Beeley v. Waterhouse, 71 L. J. Ch. 662; [1902] 2 Ch. 389; 87 L. T. 57; 50 W. R. 611—C.A. s.p. Wilkinson, In re; Esam v. Att.-Gen., 71 L. J. Ch. 663n; [1902] 1 Ch. 841; 87 L. T. 40—Kekewich, J.

A charity cannot be relieved by means of a devise on trust for sale from the provisions of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Acts, 1888 and 1891, against the holding of land by charities. The trustees cannot postpone the sale indefinitely and hold the land for the benefit of the charity. They must sell within a reasonable time from the death of their testator unless they get the leave of the Court under its general jurisdiction to postpone the sale. Sidebottom, In re; Beeley v. Waterhouse, supra.

The provisions of section 8 of the Act of 1891 as to the retainer by a charity of land assured by will for the benefit of any charitable use do not apply to land devised on trust for sale for the benefit of a charity. Ib.

Bequest to be Laid Out in Purchase of Land and Erection thereon of Model Dwellings to be Let to Poor at Low Rents—"Charitable uses."—A testator, who died in 1900, devised and bequeathed his residuary real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to sell and convert and to stand possessed of the proceeds upon trust from time to time to purchase land in populous places and to erect upon the land so purchased model dwellings, and to let the same to the poor at low rents:—Held, that the testator had manifested a general charitable intention to provide model dwellings for the poor, and therefore that the effect of striking out the direction to purchase land in accordance with section 7 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, was not to put an end to the whole charitable trust. Held, therefore, that the residuary gift was valid. Sutton, In re; Lewis v. Sutton, 70 L. J. Ch. 747; [1901] 2 Ch. 640; 85 L. T. 411; 66 J. P. 39—Buckley, J.

The words "the charitable uses" in section 7 of the Act of 1891 have the same meaning as the words "the purposes of the charity" in section 8 of the Act. Ib.

Semble, the Working Classes Dwellings Act, 1890, is not an Act dealing with charity matters. Ib.

Devise for Sale—Extension of Time—Jurisdiction of Court.—The Court has jurisdiction under section 5 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, to extend the time for the sale of land devised by will to a charity for a reasonable period beyond the period of one year limited by that section; and the interests of the charity with regard to the present and probable future value of the land may be taken into consideration in determining as to the exercise of the jurisdiction. Sidebottom, In re; Beeley v. Sidebottom, 70 L. J. Ch. 448; [1901] 2 Ch. 1; 85 L. T. 366—C.A.

Condition Precedent—Perpetuity—Statutes of Mortmain.—A testator, who died in March, 1894, by his will dated in July, 1893, after devising his residuary real estate to trustees upon trust for sale, and to hold the proceeds upon the trusts declared of his residuary personal estate, gave the sum of 10,000*l.* to his trustees upon trust to transfer the same to trustees to be appointed by them, or the trustees for the time being of his will (such appointed trustees to be not less than three or more than six in number), to be held by them upon trust, "as soon as any land shall at any time be given or obtained for the purpose, to employ the same in erecting almshouses," in a certain parish for the deserving poor of that parish, without regard to religious denomination, and in making weekly or other periodical allowances to the inmates of such almshouses; and he empowered the trustees so appointed, in conjunction with the trustees of his will, to make rules for the regulation and maintenance of such almshouses. And, after giving other charitable and general legacies, the testator gave all his residuary personal estate to his trustees upon trust for sale and conversion, and to pay debts and legacies, and hold the residue of the moneys upon trust, to pay or transfer the same to trustees to be nominated and appointed by the trustees of his will, upon trust, "as soon as any land shall at any time be given or obtained for the purpose, to employ the same in erecting and maintaining" a certain orphanage or institution; and the will contained directions for the management and regulation of such institution:—Held, that the language of the will did not constitute a condition precedent to the gifts, but was introduced for the purpose of mere machinery so as to avoid the provisions of the Statutes of Mortmain; and that the principle to be applied to the present case was that explained in Chamberlayne v. Brockett (L. R. 8 Ch. 206). Held, therefore, that without prejudice to any question, if land could not be obtained, there must be a declaration that the sum of 10,000*l.* and the residue were well given to charities; and that special trustees thereof must be appointed as directed by the will, and liberty given to apply. Gyde, In re; Ward v. Little, 79 L. T. 261—C.A.

Money to Found a School—Validity of Gift.—A testator by his will directed his trustees to lay out and employ the residue of his estate in founding at a certain town a school for all trades connected with the building and fitting out of steam and sailing ships:—Held, that the gift involved the acquisition of land and the building thereon of a school-house, and was therefore void. Hopkins v. Phillips (3 Giff. 182) followed. Vere, In re; Carter v. Brown, 22 T. L. R. 273—Swinfen Eady, J.

Gift to Charity of Interest and Remainder in Impure Personalty—Change of Investment to Pure Personalty before Falling into Possession—Failure of Gift.—By his will, made in 1889, a testator gave to a charity property, including his interest in remainder, expectant on the determination of his parents' life interests, in the trust funds comprised in their marriage settlement. He died in 1890. At the date both of his will and of his death 500*l.*, part of the trust funds, was properly invested on mortgage of real estate; but in 1902, when the life interests determined, the 500*l.* had been called in and was represented by a sum of Consols:—Held, that, as regards the 500*l.*, the testator was disposing of an interest in land, although his interest was in remainder, and that the gift to the charity therefore failed as regards this sum. Prichard's Settlement, In re; Playne v. Twisden, 88 L. T. 197—Joyce, J.

Parties to Summons—Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891.—On a summons under section 8 of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, to sanction the retention of land for the purposes of a charity after the expiration of the year from the testator's death, the Official Trustee of Charity Lands, and not the Charity Commissioners, should be made a defendant. Church Patronage Trust, In re; Laurie v. Att.-Gen., supra. (Per Buckley, J.)

4. FAILURE OF OBJECTS.

Gift of Land for a College—Change of Circumstances—Scheme—Cy-près—Land Claimed as Reverting to the Crown.—Where there is an immediate gift for charitable purposes, the gift is not rendered invalid by the fact that the particular application directed cannot immediately take effect within any definite limit of time, or may never take effect at all. Wallis v. Solicitor-General for New Zealand, 72 L. J. P.C. 37; [1903] A.C. 173; 88 L. T. 65—P.C.

In an action for the administration of the trusts of a settlement not void on the face of it, a defendant cannot in his defence impeach the settlement itself; if he desires to have it set aside he must attack it openly by action or counterclaim. Id.

In 1848 leading natives of New Zealand gave land to the bishop for the establishment of a college. The cession was unreservedly sanctioned by the Governor, and in 1850 a Crown grant, with a plan, was issued. No college, however, was built, and the land was let, and its rents and profits accumulated. The neighbourhood having become unsuitable for a school or college, the trustees in 1897 prepared a scheme and communicated with the law officers. The Solicitor-General declined to approve the scheme, on the ground that Ministers desired to consult Parliament on the subject of such trusts. Nothing, however, having been done, the trustees applied to the Court for the approval of the scheme. The Solicitor-General opposed, claiming that the property had reverted to the Crown, and, in the alternative, submitted a scheme which ignored the original trusts. This scheme was rejected, and a fresh scheme was adopted by the Court and assented to by the trustees. The Solicitor-General appealed, contending that the cy-près doctrine was not applicable. The COURT OF APPEAL allowed the appeal, and held that the land had reverted to the Crown, on the grounds—first, that her late Majesty had been deceived in the grant; and secondly, that the trust had come to an end. Decision of the COURT OF APPEAL reversed on both grounds. Id.

Gift to a School—Discontinuance of Weekday School—Continuance as Sunday School—Lapse—Construction of Will.—A testatrix by her will gave "to St. Andrew's School, Heybridge, Essex, 400*l.*" among other charitable legacies. The school had been founded by her brother many years prior to her death by a deed-poll, whereby he had voluntarily, "and more especially for promoting the welfare of the inhabitants of the parish," granted the site and schoolhouse to the vicar of the parish for the time being as trustee upon trust for educational purposes, the religious part to be according to Church of England principles. An elementary day school was carried on there until September, 1900, when the Board of Education refused to recognise it, and it remained closed on weekdays for nine months, when the managers of another elementary day school obtained leave to use it at a nominal rent for an infants' school. The testatrix died in February, 1905. Throughout the whole of these periods of time the school was used continuously on Sundays only as a Sunday school under the control of the vicar of the parish:—Held, that the school had not wholly ceased to exist, and that therefore the gift had not lapsed. Waring, In re; Hayward v. Att.-Gen., 76 L. J. Ch. 49; [1907] 1 Ch. 166; 95 L. T. 859—Kekewich, J.

Repair of Roads—Roads Taken Over by Local Authority.—Where a testator has given the income of a fund for the charitable object of maintaining a road, the object of the charity does not fail because the road has been taken over by a county council or other local authority who are bound to maintain it. The local authority are entitled to have such income paid to them to be applied in maintaining the road. Att.-Gen. v. Day, 69 L. J. Ch. 8; [1900] 1 Ch. 31; 81 L. T. 806; 64 J. P. 88—North, J.

Church of England School—"Supported by voluntary subscriptions"—"Becoming subject to the control of a school board"—Local Education Authority.—A testator, who died in 1891, bequeathed bank shares to the managers for the time being of a Church of England elementary school, on trust to apply the income towards the annual expenses of the school so long as it should be "supported by voluntary subscriptions as now and heretofore in addition to the Government grant," but in the event of it "ceasing to be so supported or becoming subject to the contrl of a school board," then to the vicar and churchwardens of the parish for repair or improvement of the fabric of the church. The school stood on private land, and had been provided by voluntary effort. Up to the testator's death it had been supported by voluntary subscriptions, but mainly by him, in addition to the Parliamentary grant and an endowment. Since his death there had been no voluntary subscriptions, the endowment, together with the trust fund and the Government grants, being substantially sufficient for carrying on the school. The managers had, however, incurred a small debt of 60*l.*, for which they were liable to their bankers. Upon a summons taken out after the passing of the Education Act, 1902, to determine whether the trust was still available for the benefit of the school, or whether the gift over had taken effect,—Held, upon the construction of the will and the Act, that the school had neither ceased to be supported by voluntary subscriptions nor become subject to the control of a school board, and that the gift over had not come into effect. Beard, In re; Butlin v. Harris, 73 L. J. Ch. 176; [1904] 1 Ch. 270; 90 L. T. 274; 52 W. R. 312; 68 J. P. 141; 2 L. G. R. 320; 20 T. L. R. 163—Byrne, J.

Bequest of Annuity for Support of National Schools—Trust Deed—Gift over if Funds Necessary for Carrying on Schools should be Raised under Powers of any Act of Parliament—Perpetuity.—A testatrix, who died in 1900, by will dated in 1891 bequeathed to her trustees a sum sufficient when invested to produce a yearly sum of 20*l.*, and she directed them to pay such yearly sum to the treasurer for the time being of certain National schools so long as they should be carried on under the conditions contained in a deed of trust dated in 1873 and the funds necessary for so carrying them on should be supplied by voluntary contributions, and she declared that the bequest should not take effect but should be null and void in certain events—inter alia, if the funds necessary for carrying on the school should be raised under powers for that purpose contained in any then present or future Act of Parliament, and that upon the happening of such event the payment of the yearly sum should cease, and the fund purchased should fall into her residuary estate. By the deed of 1873 it was declared that the schools should be conducted according to the principles and designs of the National Society. Subject to certain superintendence by the principal officiating minister of the parish, the control and management of the schools and premises and the funds and endowments thereof were vested in and exercised by a committee consisting of such minister and certain other persons being communicants:—Held, first, that on the coming into operation of the Education Act, 1902, the schools ceased to be any longer carried on under the conditions contained in the trust deed of 1873; and secondly, that, as regarded the gift over, there was no infringement of the rule against perpetuities, for the Court was entitled to look at the will in order to ascertain whether the event had happened on which the yearly sum was to cease and determine; that on the coming into operation of the Act of 1902 the event contemplated by the testatrix had happened; and that therefore the fund producing the yearly sum fell into the residue. Randell, In re; Randell v. Dixon (57 L. J. Ch. 899; 38 Ch. D. 213), followed. Blunt's Trusts, In re; Wigan v. Clinch, 74 L. J. Ch. 33; [1904] 2 Ch. 767; 91 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 152; 68 J. P. 571; 2 L. G. R. 1295; 20 T. L. R. 754—Buckley, J.

5. ADMINISTRATION.

Elementary School—Endowments—Transfer of Income to School Board—Transfer of Corpus to Official Trustees—Action for Account—Certificate of Charity Commissioners—"Relief sought adversely to any Charity."—Where by an arrangement under section 23 of the Elementary Education Act, 1870, the income of an endowment of an elementary school is transferred for the benefit of a school board, the latter becomes a cestui que trust of a charitable trust; and if after such transfer the corpus of the endowment is transferred to the official trustees of Charitable Funds, who thereafter receive the income, the certificate of the Charity Commissioners under section 17 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, is necessary before proceedings can be taken by the school board against the official trustees for an account of the income received by them and for execution of the trust, as such relief is not sought adversely to the charity within the meaning of section 17. Llanbadarn-fawr School Board v. Official Trustees of Charitable Funds, 70 L. J. K.B. 307; [1901] 1 K.B. 430; 84 L. T. 311; 49 W. R. 363—C.A.

Inhabitants of "Parish"—Several Townships—Separate Rating—Separate Overseers and Churchwardens—Exemption from Church Rates.—The primary meaning of the word "parish" is the ancient ecclesiastical parish. Where the parish originally included several townships the fact that some of these townships have from time immemorial maintained their own churches, been exempt from church rates for the maintenance of the mother church, and appointed their own churchwardens, does not prove that such townships are not included in the parish or that the inhabitants thereof are not entitled to share in a charity for the poor of the parish. Sandbach School and Almshouse Foundation, In re; Att.-Gen. v. Crewe, 70 L. J. Ch. 604; [1901] 2 Ch. 317; 84 L. T. 815; 49 W. R. 647—Farwell, J.

The fact that a township is separately rated to the poor is in cases within the Poor Relief Act, 1862 (which provides for the appointment in certain cases of separate overseers for each township), of no weight as evidence that it is a separate parish. Ib.

(a) CY-PRÈS DOCTRINE.

Charitable Gift—Benefit of Inhabitants.—A testatrix bequeathed 3000*l.* "for the benefit of the Mann Institute." There was no legally constituted charity of this name capable of receiving a legacy; but the testatrix had erected a building, known by this title, on land of her own, with a view to benefiting the inhabitants of the parish, and had leased it out at nominal rents, partly for the purpose of public meetings, partly for the purpose of a working men's club. This building, however, at the time of her death, remained the property of the testatrix:—Held, that the intention to benefit the inhabitants of the parish was a charitable purpose with which the actual uses to which the building had been hitherto put were in no wise inconsistent. Held, also, that the legacy was given in pursuance of this general charitable intention, and must therefore be applied under the cy-près doctrine in the furtherance of similar ends. Mann, In re; Hardy v. Att.-Gen., 72 L. J. Ch. 150; [1903] 1 Ch. 232; 87 L. T. 734; 51 W. R. 165—Farwell, J.

Gift to Non-existent Charity—General Charitable Intention—"Charitable institution."—Where a gift is made to a charitable institution which has never had any existence, the Court, which always favours charities, is more ready to infer a general charitable intention than the contrary, and will lay hold of even small indications on the face of the will as shewing that the testator intended that the gift should be for a purpose rather than for a person, namely, the particular charity mentioned. Clergy Society, In re (2 K. & J. 615), and Maguire, In re (39 L. J. Ch. 710; L. R. 9 Eq. 632), followed. Davis, In re; Hannen v. Hillyer, 71 L. J. Ch. 459; [1902] 1 Ch. 876; 86 L. T. 292; 50 W. R. 378—Buckley, J.

Testatrix bequeathed a number of pecuniary legacies to various blind, orphan, deaf and dumb, sick, and other charitable institutions, including a legacy of 500*l.* to the "Home for the Homeless," and directed that in case of doubt as to the charitable institutions intended to be benefited the decision should rest absolutely with her executor. And she declared that the residue of her estate should be rateably divided among the various "charitable institutions" which were beneficiaries under her will. No charitable institution known as the "Home for the Homeless," or bearing any similar title, existed at the date of the will or previously thereto. Held, that, having regard to the position in which the gift occurred in the will with reference to the other gifts, and to the provision as to the decision of the executor in cases of doubt, the testatrix had shown a general charitable intention, and that the legacy of 500*l.* was therefore effectual. Held also, that the institution or authority which would take and give effect to the legacy was within the words "charitable institutions" in the gift of the residue, and would be entitled to a rateable proportion of it under the residuary gift. Ib.

Voluntary School—Church of England School Closed for Want of Funds—Charity—Cy-près—Scheme—Lease to Local Education Authority.—A building held on trust to carry on a Church of England school was closed in 1882, there being no need for such a school in the parish:—Held, on action brought for administration of the trusts, that an enquiry whether the building could be used for the purpose of a Church of England school should be directed, and that, if upon enquiry it was found that it was not practicable to so use the building, then a scheme should be settled to carry out the trusts cy-près. Such a scheme might properly provide for the letting of the building for a limited period to the local education authority for use for educational purposes. Att.-Gen. v. Edalji, 97 L. T. 292; 5 L. G. R. 1085; 71 J. P. 549—Swinfen Eady, J.

(b) SCHEME.

Endowed School—Right of Appeal—Persons "directly affected" by Scheme.—The right of appeal to the Queen in Council, given by section 39 of the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, against any scheme passed under the Act to "any person or body corporate directly affected by such scheme" is confined to those who have a personal and individual interest as distinct from the general interest which appertains to the whole community among whom the endowment works. Colchester Grammar School, In re, 67 L. J. P.C. 86; [1898] A.C. 477; 78 L. T. 509—P.C.

The mere fact that the petitioners have boys at the school does not constitute such an interest, as section 13, which deals with vested interests, provides only for the vested interests of boys who were on the foundation when the Act passed—namely, August 2, 1869. Ib.

Petitioners other than those described in section 39 may make representations to the Education Department or to the Houses of Parliament, but they cannot appeal to the Queen in Council. Ib.

Home for Nurses—Supply of Nurses to Hospital—Private Nursing—Preponderating Control in Management of Home.—As the outcome of a public appeal "to provide a means of training nurses in connection with Westminster Hospital for that charity in the first instance and later for nursing in private families," and of subsequent efforts, a freehold house was purchased and opened as the home of the institution, the property being vested in trustees. Differences afterwards arose between the home and the hospital as to the supply, &c. of nurses, and eventually the hospital authorities obtained the permission of the Charity Commissioners to bring the question before the Court. They submitted a scheme, settled by the Attorney-General, which was framed to secure as the primary object of the home the supply of a staff of nurses for the hospital and afterwards the provision of private nurses, the result of the scheme as proposed being to give the preponderating control of the affairs of the home to the hospital authorities. The Court sanctioned the scheme. Westminster Training School and Home for Nurses, In re, 20 T. L. R. 694—Kekewich, J.

Nomination of Almoner—Refusal by Council to accept Nominee—Scheme—Jurisdiction of Charity Commissioners—Mandamus.—The refusal by the governing body of a charity, managed under a scheme authorised by the Charity Commissioners under the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, to accept the nomination of a person to be a member of the council of that governing body, such nomination being required by the scheme, is not "a question affecting the regularity or the validity of any proceedings under the scheme" to be determined by the Charity Commissioners. An application for a mandamus to the Charity Commissioners to hear and determine such a matter is not a just and convenient course; the proper remedy is by an application, with the sanction of the Attorney-General, to a Judge at chambers under section 28 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853. Reg. v. Charity Commissioners, 66 L. J. Q.B. 321; [1897] 1 Q.B. 407—D.

Endowed School—Endowments excepted by the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, s. 14, sub-s. 1—Scheme—Donation Governors—Jurisdiction.—The object of section 14, sub-section 1 of the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, is to give effect to the intention of charitable donors of endowments made less than fifty years before the passing of the Act by preserving such endowments intact from any interference by the Charity Commissioners under the Act, and the Act with respect to such endowments leaves the jurisdiction of the Court wholly unaffected. Att. Gen. v. Christ's Hospital Governors, 65 L. J. Ch. 646; [1896] 1 Ch. 879—Chitty, J.

To sanction without the consent of the existing governing body of a charitable trust a scheme which ousts the governing body from its right of administering the trust, where the trust remains and is capable of being effectuated, and no breach of trust is shewn, is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. Id.

6. TRUSTEES.

Ecclesiastical Charity.—J. S., by his will made in 1558, directed his executors to erect an almshouse for ten poor persons, and gave his executors the rents of certain real estate for five years after his death, for the purpose of founding and maintaining the intended almshouses, and gave his residue to his executors on condition that they should procure the creation of a corporation to enable the corporators to take on themselves his real estate "for the finding of such poor persons." Some time after the death of the testator legal proceedings were taken and the money recovered from the executors was invested in lands at M. A deed was executed declaring the trusts of the property to be for the relief of poor, lame, and impotent people dwelling within A., "or otherwise to employ the same for the raising and maintenance of a school according to the statute in that behalf made so as and where the same should be thought convenient by the greatest number of inhabitants being also the most chargeable to the relief of the poor" until a charter of incorporation should be obtained. Until 1818 the income was applied in aid of the rates for the relief of the poor. In 1818 the vestry of A. resolved to erect a school, and since 1819 the rents of M. were applied in supporting the school which was then erected. The governors of the school, who were trustees, now retired, and the parish council appointed new trustees in their place. The churchwardens now petitioned against the decision of the Charity Commissioners that the parish council had power to appoint. They said in 1819 the income had been definitely appropriated to educational purposes, and trustees of the income of a permanent endowment of a school were in the same position as trustees of a school. Secondly, it was said that the charity was ecclesiastical:—Held, that section 66 of the Local Government Act, 1894, did not include trusteeship of property temporarily devoted to the use of the school. Held also, that the charity was not ecclesiastical. Spendliffe's Charity, In re, 83 L. T. 498—Cozens-Hardy, J.

Discretion of Trustees—New Trustees Appointed by the Court—Funds in Court—Jurisdiction to settle Scheme—Payment out of Court.—Where on the construction of a will the Court was of opinion that the original trustees who had been appointed had an absolute discretion as to the charitable objects and purposes to which the testator's property was to be applied by them, and that a similar discretionary power was vested in new trustees who had been appointed by the Court, it was held, on an application by such new trustees for payment out to them of funds in Court which they intended to apply to certain specified purposes, that while the Court possessed in such cases jurisdiction to settle a scheme, it would not, where intervention was unnecessary for the protection of the property, interfere with the discretionary power of the trustees, and that accordingly the funds should be paid out to them. Warren v. Clancy, [1898] 1 Ir. R. 127—C.A.

Power to Borrow—Overdraft at Banker's—"Charge" on Charity Estate.—The borrowing of money by trustees of a charity by means of an overdraft at their bankers is a "charge" of the charity estate within the meaning of section 29 of the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855, though the transaction is not carried out by means of any written document; and it cannot be lawfully made without the authority of an Act of Parliament or a Court of competent jurisdiction, or under a scheme, or with the approval of the Charity Commissioners. Fell v. Charity Lands (Official Trustee), 67 L. J. Ch. 385; [1895] 2 Ch. 44; 78 L. T. 474; 62 J. P. 804—C.A.

7. CHARITY COMMISSIONERS.

Power to Sell—Mission to the Jews—Voluntary Contributions—Purchase of Freehold House out of Donation—Conveyance to Trustees for Purposes of Mission—Power of Sale in Trust Deed—Proceeds to be Invested as Capital—Consent of Charity Commissioners to Sale.—A freehold house was in 1884 purchased by the founder of a Mission to the Jews out of money given to him in that year without any direction as to the particular charitable application of the money. The house was conveyed to him in fee-simple absolutely, and was used by him as a home for Jewish children. The mission was supported by voluntary subscriptions, and had no endowment. In 1885 the founder conveyed the freehold house, together with other property of the mission, to trustees upon trust that the same should be occupied and used for the purposes of the mission, the general or fundamental objects or purpose of which were described in a schedule to the trust deed. A power of sale was by the deed given to the trustees, and they were directed to invest the net proceeds of sale as capital. They were desirous of selling the freehold house:—Held, that the freehold house was an "endowment" within the meaning of section 66 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and that the charity was not within the exemption in section 62 as a charity wholly maintained by voluntary contributions, because it had under the trust deed property used for the purposes of the charity, although not actually producing income; and that even if it were a mixed charity it was not within the exemption, for by the terms of the deed the property could no longer be legally applied as income; and that consequently the trustees could not sell the freehold land without the approval of the Charity Commissioners under section 29 of the Charitable Trusts (Amendment) Act, 1855. Clergy Orphan Corporation, In re (64 L. J. Ch. 66; [1894] 3 Ch. 145), distinguished. Att.-Gen. v. Mathieson, 76 L. J. Ch. 682; [1907] 2 Ch. 383; 97 L. T. 450; 23 T. L. R. 754—C.A.

—Voluntary Contribution—Vendor and Purchaser—Sale of Charity Land—Consent of Board of Education.—An educational society which was ordinarily maintained out of—first, voluntary contributions; secondly, payments by or for scholars; thirdly, grants from the Board of Education; and fourthly, grants from local education authorities out of local rates, purchased land in 1886, and paid the purchase money partly out of voluntary subscriptions and partly out of the proceeds of a bazaar organised in 1886 for the purpose of putting the society in funds to enable it to discharge the debt owing in respect of the purchase price:—Held—first, that the property had been purchased with money which was applicable both as to capital and interest for general purposes, and was, under section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, exempt from the jurisdiction or control of the Board of Education; secondly, that the society was a society wholly maintained by voluntary contributions within the meaning of section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853. The property could therefore be sold without being subject to the provisions of section 29 of the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855. Society for Training Teachers of the Deaf and Whittle's Contract, In re, 76 L. Dispute as to Objects—Decision of Charity Commissioners—Final Determination.—A question having arisen as to whether the income of a local charity was or was not exclusively applicable for church purposes, a letter was sent to the Charity Commissioners by the chairman of the parish council setting forth his contention upon the subject. The Commissioners, after receiving a report, wrote a letter in which they gave their opinion upon the question raised:—Held, that the letter constituted a determination within the meaning of the Local Government Act, 1894, s. 70, sub-s. 2, which, not having been appealed from within three months, was conclusive. Att.-Gen. v. Hughes 81 L. T. 679; 48 W. R. 150—Cozens-Hardy, J.

Lands Dedicated by Deed—Question as to the Person Entitled—Summons by Trustee—Charity Commissioners—Consent to Application Unnecessary—Construction.—Where there is a question as to lands, whether they are held upon charitable trusts or not, the trustee may apply to the Court to have the question determined without first obtaining the consent of the Charity Commissioners. Shum's Trusts, In re; Prichard v. Richardson, 91 L. T. 192—Farwell, J.

Sanction to Mortgage of Charity Lands—Consent of Charity Commissioners—"Endowment"—Funds Derived from "Voluntary Contributions"—"Cathedral, collegiate, chapter, or other schools."—The proviso at the end of section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853 (which exempts certain charities therein enumerated from the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners), "that the said exemption shall not extend to any cathedral, collegiate, chapter, or other schools," does not exclude all schools from the exemptions in the section, but only cathedral, collegiate, chapter, and other schools of a similar kind. Stockport Ragged, Industrial, and Reformatory Schools, In re, 68 L. J. Ch. 41; [1898] 2 Ch. 687; 79 L. T. 507; 47 W. R. 166—C.A.

An industrial school whose income is derived partly from voluntary contributions and legacies, and partly from Government grants, contributions from school boards, and other public authorities, and which is possessed of land in the occupation of the school, is, as regards leasehold land with buildings erected thereon partly by means of savings of income, within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners, and their consent is necessary to an application to the Court for leave to mortgage such land. Ib.

Royal Charter—Power of Sale—“Scheme legally established”—Land Registry—Entry of Restriction—Consent of Charity Commissioners to Alienation.—A hospital, incorporated under Royal charter and possessing thereunder full powers of management and an express power of sale, is not formed under “a scheme legally established” within the meaning of those words in section 29 of the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855, and must be entered in the Land Register with the restriction that no disposition of the estate of the hospital is to be registered without the consent of the Charity Commissioners, on an order of the Registrar. Mason’s Orphanage and London and North-Western Railway’s Contract, In re (65 L. J. Ch. 32, 439; [1896] 1 Ch. 54, 596), followed. Att.-Gen. v. National Epileptic Hospital, 73 L. J. Ch. 677; [1904] 2 Ch. 252; 91 L. T. 63; 20 T. L. R. 592—Kekewich, J.

Sale of Chapel—Consent of Charity Commissioners—Voluntary Contributions.—The trustees of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Connexion sold a chapel which was conveyed to them by an indenture dated October 31, 1879, to hold unto and to the use of themselves, their heirs and assigns, upon trust for the Connexion, and also upon trust to sell, exchange, mortgage, demise, or let the chapel; and it was declared that the trustees should hold the proceeds of sale upon trust for the Connexion. The consideration-money of the conveyance of October 31, 1879, was paid by the vendors out of moneys which they had borrowed on promissory notes signed by some of them, the principal and interest of which was afterwards paid out of a fund formed by voluntary contributions subsequently made or collected by members of the congregation.—Held (it being admitted that the proceeds of sale were applicable as income), that the money raised for the purchase of the chapel was not a donation or bequest unto and in trust for the charity, but was raised by voluntary contributions, and as such came within the exceptions in section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, and the consent of the Charity Commissioners to a sale was unnecessary. Harding and Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Trustees, In re, 92 L. T. 641—Buckley, J.

Registration under Companies Acts—Land Registry—Restriction—“Endowment”—Disposition of Property—Consent of Charity Commissioners.—Under its memorandum of association a charitable society incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890, had full power to purchase, lease, and acquire real or personal property, erect and maintain buildings, and sell, exchange, or deal with all its property. Appeals were from time to time made for donations to special objects of the charity, including one for the completion of new headquarters of the society. A large sum was obtained, and leasehold premises acquired. Upon an application to register the society as proprietor of these leaseholds under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897,—Held, that the subscribers to the headquarters must be taken to have known that their contributions, although primarily applicable to this particular object, were given for the general purposes of the society, and that there was no intention to take the money out of the control of the managing body; that there was no such “endowment” within the meaning of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, s. 66, as rendered the society amenable to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners; that the society could therefore deal with the property within the powers of the memorandum of association, and was entitled to be registered in respect of the leaseholds without any restriction to the effect that no disposition of the land was to be registered without the consent of the Charity Commissioners. Church Army, In re, 75 L. J. Ch. 467; 94 L. T. 559; 23 T. L. R. 428—C.A.

Administration—Petition—Consent of Charity Commissioners—Exemption—“Any cathedral or collegiate church.”—The phrase “any cathedral or collegiate church” in section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, does not extend so as to include an endowment, indirectly connected with the cathedral church, but over which the dean and chapter have not any control; which does not form a portion of the capitular estates; and which is not held by them upon any trusts. Dod’s Charity, In re, 74 L. J. Ch. 260; [1905] 1 Ch. 442; 92 L. T. 260; 53 W. R. 314; 21 T. L. R. 242, 452—Swinfen Eady, J.

The minor canons of Chester Cathedral were entitled, independently of the dean and chapter, to the income of certain lands, the legal estate of which was not vested in the dean and chapter. The dean and chapter, however, were indirectly interested in this trust, in so far as every increase in the income of the trust relieved them, pro tanto, in their statutory duty of maintaining the income of the minor canons at a certain level:—Held, that this trust was not covered by the exemption in section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and that it was necessary, accordingly, for the dean and chapter, under section 17, to obtain the certificate of the Charity Commissioners before they would be entitled to present a petition for the administration of the trust. Ib.

Power to Alter Rules—Fundamental Objects—General Meeting—Resolution—Validity.—Where a club was instituted, according to rule 2 of its body of rules, for the purpose of providing a ground for pigeon-shooting, polo, and other sports, and was managed by a committee under the rules, one of which required that any alteration of the rules should be adopted at a general meeting by a two-thirds majority, it was held that pigeon-shooting was not a fundamental object of the club, and that it was competent for the requisite majority to pass a resolution that pigeon-shooting should be discontinued, and thus to authorise the committee to discourage that particular sport. Thellusson v. Valentia (Viscount), 76 L. J. Ch. 465; [1907] 2 Ch. 1; 96 L. T. 657; 23 T. L. R. 455—C.A.

—Increase of Subscription—Dissentient Member—Injunction.—Where the rules of a club contain no express provision for the making of amendments or alterations therein, the majority of members assembled in general meeting have no inherent authority, against the wishes of the minority, to alter the rules forming the written contract by which the members are bound; and a dissentient member, who has declined to pay an increased subscription, imposed at a general meeting, and who has been consequently posted as in default, will be entitled to an injunction to restrain the committee of the club from excluding him from its privileges. *Harington v. 2. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Colonial Laws—Repugnancy.—The “repugnancy to the laws of England,” which by the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865, makes colonial legislation void, is repugnancy to such Imperial legislation only as by express terms or necessary intendment is made applicable to the colony, and does not otherwise restrict the powers of a Colonial Legislature. Reg. v. Marais; Marais, Ex parte, 71 L. J. P.C. 32; [1902] A.C. 51; 85 L. T. 363—P.C.

(1) EAST AFRICA.

Zanzibar—Exterritoriality—Land Abroad Compulsorily Acquired by British Government—Ascertainment of Price—British or Local Law

—Judicial Notice of Foreign Law.—By the Zanzibar Order in Council, 1884, British subjects in civil and criminal matters are to have their cases tried by their own Consuls. In bankruptcy or on death their property is to be administered according to British law, and their houses may not be entered by the Zanzibar authorities without the Consul's permission:—Held, that these privileges do not confer on land purchased by a British subject the character of absolute extraterritoriality, and that the incidents of such land are governed by the law of its site. Consequently, when the land is compulsorily taken by the British Government under the Indian Land Acquisition Act, 1894, the owner is not entitled to compensation for the value of the buildings erected, without lawful authority, on behalf of the Government thereon, before the notice to treat, that being the rule of the Mohammedan law which prevails in Zanzibar. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs v. Charlesworth, Pilling & Co., 70 L. J. P.C. 25; [1901] A.C. 373; 84 L. T. 212—P.C.

Although by virtue of the treaty grant the British Sovereign becomes an authority in Zanzibar, exercising powers independently of the Sultan, Zanzibar remains foreign territory, and the British Sovereign acts in all respects as a Zanzibar authority; and a British Judge acting within these limits is a Zanzibar Judge, and bound to take judicial notice of the Zanzibar law, and not to treat that law as mere matter of evidence. Ib.

The Indian Land Acquisition Act, 1894, provides that land required by the Government is to be taken at its market value on a given day, and that the Court is not bound to give more because the object for which it is taken is likely to increase the value, or less because the same object is likely to add to the value, of the owner's remaining land:—Held, that the probable effects of a railway are not to be taken into consideration, except to the extent to which it is shewn that such speculations had actually affected the market price. Ib.

(a) CAPE COLONY.

War Contribution.—3 Edw. 7 c. 27 is the South African Loan and War Contribution Act, 1903.

Crown Liabilities Act, 1888.—The Crown Liabilities Act, 1888, of the Cape of Good Hope, which gives power to sue the Prime Minister, does not confer the power on any Court of making a declaration of right against the Crown. Cook v. Sprigg, 68 L. J. P.C. 144; [1899] A.C. 572; 81 L. T. 281—P.C.

Deed of Family Arrangement—Prohibition of Alienation — Fideicommissum Conditionale — Mortgage.—A husband and wife, who were married in community, in an instrument dated 1881 declared to have bequeathed a sixth share of a farm to a son “for the sum of 300*l.* sterling with interest at six per cent. per annum, but after the death of the first dying of us the interest shall be decreased to three per cent. The said ground shall never be sold or parted with in favour of a stranger, but shall permanently remain among legal heirs. This bequest shall be attached to the deed of transfer." This document was treated not as a bequest, but as a contract for sale, and the father and son made the declaration required by law of purchasers and sellers, and paid the transfer duty. The land was demarcated, and possession taken by the son. After the father's death his executors executed a transfer acknowledging the payment of the purchase-money. The son executed mortgages of the property, and the mortgagees had notice of the instrument of 1881:—Held, that the mortgages being mere charges, not passing the dominium, were not a breach of the prohibition of alienation in the instrument of 1881, inasmuch as the charge imposed by a mortgage can only be enforced by a judicial sale, and until such sale the property cannot be said to have been sold or disposed of. Josef v. Mulder, 72 L. J. P.C. 50; [1903] A.C. 190; 88 L. T. 72—P.C.

Insolvency—Secured Creditors—Registration—Preference.—By the law of the Cape of Good Hope the priorities of secured creditors in an insolvency are determined not by the dates of execution and registration of the several securities, but by the dates of the actual debts under such securities. Thus, a security earlier in point of date, but under which no advance has been made, must give place to one which was later, but given for an actual advance. Standard Bank of South Africa v. Heydenrych, 76 L. J. P.C. 73; [1907] A.C. 336; 97 L. T. 148; 23 T. L. R. 679—P.C.

Land—Title—Terms of Grant—Boundary—Diagram—Inconsistency between Grant and Diagram.—Where a diagram attached to a grant of land contradicts the unambiguous text of the title it must give way to the text; and although by proclamation before a title can be granted there must be a diagram, the proclamation gives the diagram no independent authority as limiting the terms of the grant. Horne v. Struben, 71 L. J. P.C. 88; [1902] A.C. 454; 87 L. T. 1—P.C.

Lands for Railway Purposes—Claim to take—Compensation—Construction of Statute.—It is a sound canon of construction that an intention to take away property without compensation should not be imputed to a legislature unless it be expressed in unequivocal terms. (Western Counties Railway v. Windsor and Annapolis Railway, 7 App. Cas. 178, followed.) Where it appeared that road commissioners claimed to expropriate without compensation the respondent's land for railway purposes on the ground that section 11 of Act IX. of 1858 effected a transfer to them of the rights derived by the Government from the Proclamation of 1813, and extended those rights so as to be applicable to the present case, — Held, that section 11 must receive a strict construction. Its language was satisfied by the transfer of the existing powers without any extension thereof. It would require a more direct expression of intention to create such a new power of expropriation for railway purposes without compensation as was claimed. Commissioner of Public Works (Cape Colony) v. Logan, 72 L. J. P.C. 91; [1903] A.C. 355; 88 L. T. 779—P.C.

(b) NATAL.

Contract—Fraud inducing Contract—Roman Law—Actio doli—Time within which Action must be brought.—Although by the strict Roman law a person induced by fraud to enter into a contract is put to his election between an actio redhibitoria to set aside the contract and an actio quanti minoris for the difference between what he ought to have had and what he has had—a limit of time for bringing either action being imposed—an actio doli will still lie after the lapse of such time, where the same fraud which has induced the contract has operated to deprive the plaintiff of his other remedies. Douglas v. Sander, 71 L. J. P.C. 91; [1902] A.C. 437; 86 L. T. 633; 50 W. R. 676—P.C.

Quare, whether an action of deceit in Natal is restricted by the conditions stated in the text of the Roman law. Ib.

Court—Special—"Acting" Judge—Jurisdiction.—An "acting" Judge appointed by the Governor at the request of the Chief Justice under the Natal Special Court Act, 1900, s. 28, is a Judge of the Supreme Court during the currency of his commission. Reg. v. Marais; Marais, Ex parte, 71 L. J. P.C. 32; [1902] A.C. 51; 85 L. T. 363—P.C.

Husband and Wife—Community of Goods—Post-nuptial Contract—Registration.—The effect of section 7 of Law 22 of 1863 (Natal), which provides that persons married in South Africa may, by registration, bring themselves within that law and thereby prevent community of goods attaching to their marriage, is imperative for all purposes, and a post-nuptial contract and bond executed in pursuance thereof purporting to abolish community of goods between the spouses parties thereto, held, in the absence of registration, to be inoperative. Taylor v. Sturrock, 69 L. J. P.C. 29; [1900] A.C. 225; 82 L. T. 97—P.C.

Joint Will of Spouses—Construction.—By a joint will husband and wife, between whom community of goods subsisted, provided that as soon as convenient his estate and effects should be realised, and as soon as might be after the testatrix's death certain specific legacies should be paid, and the residue of her effects, should she survive the testator, divided; but that in the event of her predeceasing her husband the residue should be divided as soon as convenient after the testator's death. The wife survived the husband. There were no specific legacies, and the wife gave a life interest to her husband in her residue:—Held, that the husband's legacies were not postponed until after the death of the testatrix, but were payable immediately. Ib.

Land—Fraudulent Sale—Title of Unregistered Purchaser to Sue to Set Aside.—The Roman-Dutch law of Natal, which requires proof of dolus to set aside a completed purchase in favour of an earlier contract, is practically the same as the English law relating to similar questions. S. sold a piece of land in Natal to the respondent, and received the purchase-money and handed over the title deeds, but the respondent's title was never registered in Natal, and no formal transfer to him was made. S. died, and the appellant Crowley, professing to act as S.'s executor, sold the land to the other appellant, under an order of the Court which was improperly obtained by the suppression of material facts:—Held, that, although by the law of Natal a purchaser of land is not considered to be the owner until a regular legal transfer has been made to him, but only to have a contractual claim against the vendor, yet that the respondent was in a position to bring an action to set aside the sale. Crowley v. Bergtheil, 68 L. J. P.C. 81; [1899] A.C. 374; 80 L. T. 428—P.C.

Licensing Law—Decision of Town Council—Appeal—Certiorari.—It is not sufficient to sustain an application for a writ of certiorari to bring up, for the purpose of quashing, an order of the town council, to whom alone an appeal is given by statute from the decision of the licensing officer, that such officer is also clerk to the town council, not being a member thereof. Vauda v. Newcastle Corporation, 68 L. J. P.C. 39; [1899] A.C. 246; 79 L. T. 600—P.C.

Lunatic—Power of Attorney—Mortgage Bond Executed under Power of Attorney—Act done before Official Declaration of Insanity—Ignorance of other Party to Contract.—By the Roman-Dutch law, which prevails in Natal, the acts of an insane person, even before he has been judicially declared to be insane or a curator appointed, are absolutely void and not merely voidable, and are not made valid by ignorance of the insanity on the part of the person with whom the lunatic purported to deal. But a person may become a negotiorum gestor for a lunatic without any mandate, and may recover all sums legitimately expended on behalf of such lunatic. Molynaux v. Natal Land and Colonisation Co., 74 L. J. P.C. 108; [1905] A.C. 555; 93 L. T. 59; 21 T. L. R. 645—P.C.

Mines—Royalties—Coal Mines Worked before Mines Act, 1899.—No royalty is due to the Crown in respect of coal raised after the passing of the Natal Mines Act, 1899, from collieries owned and worked under legislative authority before the passing of the Act. Dundee Coal Co. v. Minister of Agriculture of Natal, 75 L. J. P.C. 90; [1906] A.C. 511; 95 L. T. 316—P.C.

By section 2 of the Natal Mines Act, 1899, the repeal thereby effected of earlier laws and proclamations is not to affect any right, title, interest, or privilege acquired under any such law or proclamation. By section 25 mining is prohibited from Crown lands unless they be registered under the Act or otherwise lawfully held under previous laws or proclamations. Section 41 imposes a royalty on minerals extracted from Crown lands under licences granted in accordance with the Act, and section 42 extends the liability to private lands:—Held, that the appellants, who were owners of mines before the Act of 1899, and whose title was affirmed by previous legislation, were not liable to pay any royalty under the Mines Act, 1899. Ib.

Will—Construction—Bequest to Children—

Substitution—Fideicommissum.—The rule of Roman law in force in the colony of Natal, that where a parent has appointed children or remoter descendants as heirs, and directed that on their death their share should go over to another, such going over or substitution is subject to the tacit condition that the deceased child left no issue, is confined to the case of fideicommissary substitutions, and has no application to direct or ordinary substitution. Galliers v. Rycroft, 69 L. J. P.C. 124; [1901] A.C. 130; 83 L. T. 179—P.C.

A testator gave all his estate to his wife for the benefit of herself and his children during her life, and after her death directed that the same should be equally divided among his children, or such of them as might then be alive. One of the sons died before his mother, leaving a wife (to whom he left all his property) and one son:—Held, that neither the wife nor the son's son was entitled to the son's share, which was to be equally divided among the testator's other children. Ib.

(c) TRANSVAAL.

Judgment of High Court before Annexation—Appeal.—Section 16 of the Proclamation (Transvaal) No. 14 of 1902 gives no right of appeal where none existed before, and no appeal is allowed to the Supreme Court of the Transvaal from a decree of the High Court of the Republic from which at the time there was no appeal to any higher tribunal. African Gold Recovery Co. v. Hay, 73 L. J. P.C. 108; [1904] A.C. 438; 91 L. T. 214; 20 T. L. R. 598—P.C.

Patent—Jurisdiction.—The Transvaal Patent Act, No. 6 of 1887, gave jurisdiction to the High Court of the late Republic to order the cancellation of a patent in an action to which the Attorney-General was not a party. Ib.

Patent Cancellation.—The High Court of the Transvaal Republic had power under the Transvaal Patent Act, No. 6 of 1887, ss. 29 to 31, to cancel a patent in an action to which the Attorney-General was not a party. Ib.

Mining Claim—Rules and Regulations of Company—Prospecting Licence—Registration—Forfeiture.—The mining rights conferred by a certificate of registration of the appellant company held not to be equivalent to a lease of the block referred to in the certificate or to fall under any category known to the Roman-Dutch law, but to be simply a matter of contract. Although under the prospecting licence, which is the first step in the acquisition of mining rights, no rent is payable, and Rule 8 only provides for forfeiture, on breach of the conditions, of the licence and the rights acquired thereunder, and there is no express rule imposing forfeiture for non-payment of rent, yet such forfeiture is necessarily implied, and particularly in rule 51, which enables the resident manager to condone a forfeiture "on payment of all rents, dues, fees and fines then due." Tati Concessions v. Hepple, 74 L. J. P.C. 92; [1905] A.C. 139; 92 L. T. 245; 21 T. L. R. 260—P.C.

Proclamation of Sovereignty, 1891—Concessions by Native Chiefs before Proclamation—Concessions Court—Power to Modify Previous Concessions.]—The appellants were the holders of a concession granted by native chiefs to their predecessor in title. The concession gave to the grantee the right to search for and win precious stones, gold, silver, platinum, and other minerals, over an area or areas chosen by the grantee not exceeding in the aggregate four hundred square miles. The grantee, in consideration of the punctual payment of rent and royalty, was to be "entitled to convert to his own use all precious stones and all minerals whatsoever found within the limits of the concession or demise." By proclamation of 1891, the territory in which the concession lay, up to that time a protectorate only, was annexed to the Crown. In 1893 the Bechuanaland Concessions Court was constituted to decide upon "the validity and scope" of concessions by native chiefs made before 1891. The Court allowed the appellants' claim "subject to all laws and regulations" in force in the territory. Those laws and regulations were contained in a proclamation of 1889, which excluded the right to precious minerals. The Supreme Court held that the appellants were not entitled to the precious minerals:—Held, that the decision operated as a modification and not an extinction of the concession, and was within the powers of the Court; that the right to prospect was not exclusive, and could be exercised effectively though not exclusive, and that the right to other than the precious minerals was not affected. Yilander Concessions Syndicate v. Cape of Good Hope Government, 76 L. J. P.C. 47; [1907] A.C. 186; 96 L. T. 275; 23 T. L. R. 298—P.C.

73 and 74 of the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act, 1900, have not deprived and do not authorise the Commonwealth Parliament to deprive the subject of the right to appeal to his Majesty in Council, theretofore possessed, from decisions of the Courts of the several States. Webb v. Outtrim, 76 L. J. P.C. 25; [1907] A.C. 81; 95 L. T. 850; 23 T. L. R. 147—P.C.

An officer of the Commonwealth is liable to assessment in respect of his official salary for income tax imposed by the Legislature of the State in which he is resident. D'Emden v. Pedder (1 Comm. L. R. 91) and Deakin v. Webb (1 Comm. L. R. 585) overruled. Ib.

Commonwealth Customs—Breaking of Customs Seals.]—By section 127 of the Commonwealth Customs Act, 1901, ships' stores are only to be used (except as prescribed) for passengers and crew and for the ship's service after her departure from her last port of departure in the Commonwealth, and a penalty is attached to breach of the section. By section 192 goods sealed by a Customs officer are not to be opened without authority, and if a ship enters a port with such seal broken the master is liable to a penalty. Where such seals are broken between the arrival of a vessel in one port and her arrival in another, both penalties are incurred, whether or not they were broken in territorial waters or on the seas. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. v. Kingston, 72 L. J. P.C. 123; [1903] A.C. 471; 89 L. T. 222; 9 Asp. M.C. 433—P.C.

Customs and Excise Duties—Imposition—Exclusive Powers of Commonwealth Parliament—Powers of State Parliaments—Preference of One State over Another.]—By section 51 of the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act, 1900, the Commonwealth Parliament has powers with respect to taxation, but not so as to discriminate between States or parts of States. By section 90: "On the imposition of uniform duties of customs the power of the Parliament to impose duties of customs and of excise . . . shall become exclusive . . . and all laws of the several States imposing duties of customs and excise . . . shall cease to have effect." By section 99: "The Commonwealth shall not . . . give preference to one State or any part thereof over another State or any part thereof":—Held, that the Parliament can make a Tariff Act retroactive and impose duties from the date of the preceding resolution; that section 90 does not prohibit the Parliament from imposing duties of Excise until uniform duties of Customs have been imposed; that there is no inconsistency in the co-existence of Excise duties imposed by the Commonwealth and similar duties imposed by the States even in the interval between the resolution passed by the Commonwealth Parliament and the Act giving effect thereto. By section 5 of the Excise Tariff, 1902, no duties are to be imposed on goods on which Customs or Excise duties have been imposed by State legislation or on which no Excise duty was in any State previously payable:—Held, that this constituted no discrimination between the States within the meaning of sections 51 and 99 of the Commonwealth Constitution Act, the inequality arising not from the action of the Parliament, but from the inequalities of the duties previously imposed by the States themselves. Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving, 75 L. J. P.C. 54; [1906] A.C. 360; 94 L. T. 387; 22 T. L. R. 405—P.C.

(b) NEW SOUTH WALES.

Bankruptcy—Annulment of Act of Bankruptcy—Evidence—Rules.]—The statutes of New South Wales empower a Judge in his discretion to refuse to follow up an act of bankruptcy by issuing a sequestration order, but give him no jurisdiction to annul an act of bankruptcy or to declare that it was never committed. King v. Henderson, 67 L. J. P.C. 134; [1898] A.C. 720; 79 L. T. 37; 47 W. R. 157—P.C.

The power of the Court to frame rules is limited to rules "for the purpose of regulating any matter under" the principal Act. The 51st rule, which purports to confer a power to annul an act of bankruptcy, is no such "regulation," and is ultra vires. Ib.

Civil Servant—Pension—Service Continuous or Interrupted.]—To entitle a Civil servant to a pension under the New South Wales Civil Service Act, 1884, continuous service is not necessary, and two periods separated by an interval may be counted together to ascertain the amount to be allowed. But the service must be salaried, and persons employed by the Government and paid separately for each piece of work are not entitled to reckon, for purposes of pension, the period of such employment. Walker v. Simpson, 72 L. J. P.C. 58; [1903] A.C. 208; 88 L. T. 306—P.C.

Crown Lands—Conditional Purchase—Non-fulfilment of Conditions—Forfeiture.]—The Crown Lands Act, 1884, which repealed certain previous legislation, provided that complaints or questions as to the non-fulfilment of conditions attached to conditional purchases should, after enquiry, be reported upon by local land boards to the Minister. Section 20 provided that the decision on such questions by the boards should, after investigation in open Court, unless appealed from, be final. The Crown Lands Act, 1889, established a Land Court for the hearing of appeals and for other purposes:—Held, that the Act of 1889 did not take away the power of the Minister to declare a forfeiture, and that the land board had no judicial discretion to refuse to decide in favour of a forfeiture, as the question was one purely of fact. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales v. Walters, 67 L. J. P.C. 36; [1898] A.C. 460; 78 L. T. 272—P.C.

— Forfeiture — Provisional Reversal — Appeal—Special Case.] The provisional reversal under section 3 of the Crown Lands Amendment Act, 1891, of a forfeiture of a conditional purchase of lands under the Crown Lands Act, 1884 (though itself subsequently revoked), prevents the lands from being dealt with as Crown lands after the date of such provisional reversal till its revocation. A decision of the Supreme Court upon a Special Case stated by the local Court, on an appeal from a local Land Board, under the Crown Lands Act, 1889, is final and conclusive, and the question cannot be re-opened in any subsequent proceedings between the VOL. I.

parties. Garnsey v. Flood, 67 L. J. P.C. 131; [1898] A.C. 687; 78 L. T. 803—P.C.

— Application for Additional Conditional Purchase—Reservation for a Public Purpose—Reservation for Specified Purposes—Invalidity of Application.]—By the Crown Lands Act, 1884, s. 102, where land is reserved by notification for a public purpose, and such notification is revoked, such land is not to be sold until sixty days after the revocation. By the Crown Lands Act, 1895, ss. 10 and 11, notification of the setting apart of lands for holdings of a specified character is not to prevent such lands from becoming available for certain applications made within forty days of the notification:—Held, that there is no inconsistency between the two statutes, as they deal with reservations of land for different purposes; and lands released under section 102 of the Act of 1884 and set apart under the Act of 1895, s. 10, are subject to the double disability, and not available for applications until after the expiration of the sixty days under the former Act. Colless v. Minister of Lands (68 L. J. P.C. 9; [1899] A.C. 90) followed. New South Wales Minister for Lands v. Harrington, 68 L. J. P.C. 60; [1899] A.C. 408; 80 L. T. 604—P.C.

— Occupation Licence Renewal—Erroneous Notice of Non-Renewal—Subsequent Invalid Leases.]—The appellant, the holder of occupation licences of Crown Lands, applied to the Minister for Lands for a re-appraisal of the areas comprised in the licences. Before the re-appraisal a notification was published that where licence fees had not been paid within sixty days thereof licences should be deemed not to have been renewed, and the appellant's licences were specified at the old rates; and after the expiration of the sixty days the Minister inserted by error a notice in the Gazette that the appellant's licences had not been renewed. Subsequently, and before the Minister's approval of the re-appraisal, the appellant paid the licence fees at the old rates into the Treasury to a suspense account. The new appraisements were made and accepted by the Minister, who also approved the reversal of the "non-renewal" of the licences. Later, a notice appeared in the Gazette of the new appraisements, and the appellant, who had remained in possession, paid the difference between the old and the revised licence fees. After the Minister's approval, but before the publication in the Gazette, the respondent applied for and obtained annual leases of part of the appellant's holding:—Held, that the respondent's leases were invalid, as the lands were already under lease or licence within the meaning of the Crown Lands Act, 1884, when they were granted; that the notice in the Gazette announcing the new appraisements was the first and only notice which complied with the requirements of section 81, sub-section 2 of that Act, and that the appellant could not be treated as in default until after sixty days from the date thereof; that the 29th section of the Act of 1889, requiring that pending re-appraisal the previous fee should be paid, had no application to a re-appraisal made at the will of the Minister; and that by the Act of 1891, ss. 3 and 6, the Minister might reverse or waive any forfeiture already incurred. O'Keefe

v. Malone, 72 L. J. P.C. 73; [1903] A.C. 365; 88 L. T. 644—P.C.

— Reservation by the Crown—Effect of Subsequent Grant by Crown without Reservation.—In 1830 the “Trustees of the Clergy and School Lands in the Colony of New South Wales,” a body incorporated by royal charter, conveyed to D., the predecessor in title of the respondents, thirty-six acres of land expressed to be bounded “by the water of Port Jackson Harbour.” In the grant, however, of the land by the Crown to the corporation there was an exception of so much thereof “as may be within 100 feet of high water mark”; and this grant and exception were recited in the conveyance to D. The corporation having been dissolved, the Crown in 1840 granted the land—stated to be thirty-six acres—to the respondents’ predecessor in title. There was no mention in the grant of the exception of the hundred feet of sea-front, and if that space had been excepted the land would have been less than thirty-six acres:—Held, that the respondents were entitled to the land without exception of the sea-front, as the grant of 1840 was so worded as to remove the doubt as to D.’s title to the land as far as the water’s edge. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales v. Dickson, 73 L. J. P.C. 48; [1904] A.C. 273; 90 L. T. 213—P.C.

— Crown Lease—Joint Lessees—Abandonment by One of Interest in the Lease—Conduct Amounting to Agreement or Licence.—The respondent was one of three lessees of a mining lease. He acquired the interest of one of his co-lessees, and the third, in a letter which was proved by secondary evidence, said “I am out of it,” and in a subsequent letter, referring to a notice of cancellation for non-observance of the terms, wrote, “I am not able to do anything.” The respondent succeeded in avoiding cancellation, and subsequently found all the money for working the mine, which he sold:—Held, that there was such evidence of abandonment of interest by the co-lessee as amounted to an agreement or a licence, and that the respondent was entitled to the whole of the purchase-money. Palmer v. Moore, 69 L. J. P.C. 64; [1900] A.C. 293; 82 L. T. 166—P.C.

— Suspension of Pastoral Lease—Amount of Compensation.—The power of suspension of a lease or licence of Crown lands conferred by section 13 of the Mining Act, 1874, is unrestricted, and is solely vested in the Governor acting under the advice of responsible ministers. During suspension all the rights of the lessee or licensee are in abeyance, and the lessor, unfettered by the lease, is entitled to resume possession. Cook v. Ricketson, 70 L. J. P.C. 113; [1901] A.C. 588; 85 L. T. 1—P.C.

The compensation payable to a lessee or licensee in case of suspension is limited to a remission of rent, there being no provision under this Act for cases in which such compensation would be inadequate. Ib.

— “Leasehold area”—“Resumed area”—Preferential Occupation Licence.—Section 5 of the Crown Lands Act, 1895, provides that after the expiration of a pastoral lease, the lands theretofore subject to such a lease shall become a “resumed area” on notification, and not before, in the Gazette to that effect, and shall cease to be a “leasehold area.” Colless v. New South Wales Minister for Lands, 68 L. J. P.C. 9; [1899] A.C. 90; 79 L. T. 505—P.C.

The appellant, who had been in occupation of a pastoral holding, but whose tenancy had expired, did not seek a renewal of his tenure, but obtained from the Crown a preferential occupation licence, under which he continued to occupy. Two days before the appearance of a notification under section 5 he applied for a conditional lease:—Held, that the land was not then available as a resumed area for the purpose of the application; that the application was not valid, and did not constitute a continuing offer capable of subsequent acceptance; and that the grant of a preferential occupation licence did not operate to convert a “leasehold area” into a “resumed area.” Ib.

— Land Appeal Court—Jurisdiction—Special Case—Appeal to Supreme Court.—By the Crown Lands Act, 1889, it is enacted that whenever a question of law arises in a case before the Land Court, that Court shall, if required by any of the parties, or may of its own motion, state a Case for decision by the Supreme Court. By the Rabbit Act, 1890, jurisdiction is conferred on the Land Court and Local Land Boards, and the procedure under that Act is, as far as possible, to follow the provisions of the Crown Lands Acts:—Held, that it is the duty of the Land Court to hear and determine a Special Case stated under the Rabbit Act, and if such Special Case does not state the question of law with sufficient precision, to remit it to the Land Court for amendment. Hill v. Dalgety, 67 L. J. P.C. 67; [1898] A.C. 343; 77 L. T. 541—P.C.

— Powers of Local Land Boards—Jurisdiction of Land Appeal Court—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court—Case Stated on Points of Law.—The decision of a Land Board on questions of fact referred to it by the Minister for Lands is subject only to appeal to the Land Appeal Court. Such appeal is a re-hearing on which fresh evidence may be admitted, and the Court has power to reject irrelevant evidence and to draw inferences of fact. Minister for Lands v. Wilson, 70 L. J. P.C. 100; [1901] A.C. 315; 84 L. T. 242—P.C.

The Minister for Lands has power to direct any local Land Board, whether within or outside the district in which the land in question is situated, to conduct an enquiry into any matters in question, and to order such enquiry to be held wherever he pleases. Ib.

— Limitation of Actions—Nullum Tempus Act—Application to Colony.—The Nullum Tempus Act, by which the Crown is disabled from suing or impleading any person in respect of lands or hereditaments where the right of the Crown has not first accrued within sixty years next before the commencing of such suit, is, by virtue of the Australian Courts Act, 1828, s. 24, by which “all laws and statutes in force within the realm of England” are to be applied in the Courts of New South Wales and Van Diemen’s Land, in force in New South Wales. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales v. Love, 67 L. J. P.C. 84;

Lunatic—Petition in Lunacy—Substituted Service of Petition—Service on Master in Lunacy—Dispensation from Examination of Lunatic.]—The effect of section 106, sub-section 2 of the New South Wales Lunacy Act, 1893, is that where personal service of a petition for a declaration of lunacy cannot be effected or is inexpedient, substituted service may be effected, either in manner prescribed by the Rules of Court or, in special circumstances, as may be ordered by the Court, and when such circumstances exist service on the Master in Lunacy is sufficient. The Court has jurisdiction under section 110 of the Act to dispense with any examination of the lunatic in cases where it would be inexpedient to examine him. McLaughlin, In re, 74 L. J. P.C. 70; [1905] A.C. 343; 92 L. T. 670; 21 T. L. R. 521—P.C.

Miner's Right—Application for a Lease—Interlocutory Injunction to Restrain Interference with such Right.]—Where a plaintiff has exercised a definite statutory right to apply for a lease, he is entitled to an injunction to restrain operations which may have the effect of injuring or destroying the subject-matter of his application while it is still pending. Croudace v. Zobel, 68 L. J. P.C. 47; [1899] A.C. 258; 79 L. T. 602—P.C.

—Practice—Appealable Value—Evidence of Value.]—The Mining Act, 1874, of New South Wales gives by section 115 a right of appeal from the District Court to the Supreme Court in cases where the amount involved is not less than 500*l.*—Held, that this right of appeal is not lost by the failure of the appellant in the Warden's Court or in the Mining Appeal Court to adduce evidence of value. The Supreme Court has itself jurisdiction to institute enquiry and decide on the evidence before it. Scully v. Murn (14 N.S.W. Rep. 289) overruled. Falkners Gold-Mining Co. v. McKinnery, 70 L. J. P.C. 116; [1901] A.C. 581; 85 L. T. 361—P.C.

Municipality—Contract—Disability of Civic Officer—Supply of Material to Undertaker—"Knowingly engaged or interested in"—Penalty.]—A municipal official who, without concert or previous arrangement, supplies materials to an undertaker, who uses them in the execution of a contract with a municipal body, is not "directly or indirectly or . . . knowingly engaged or interested in" such contract, so as to be liable to the penalty imposed by 2 Edw. 7, No. 35, s. 24. Norton v. Taylor, 75 L. J. P.C. 79; [1906] A.C. 378; 94 L. T. 591; 70 J. P. 433; 22 T. L. R. 450—P.C.

—Cost of City Improvements—Annual Payments over a Period of Years—Ascertainment of Persons Liable.]—By the Sydney Corporation Act, 1879, the "owner" of property for rating purposes is defined as "The landlord or person at the time receiving the rent for any premises whether on his own account or otherwise, or who shall claim to be the owner." By the Moore Street Improvement Act, 1890, the assessment book was to specify the amount which every owner of property within the improvement area would be required to pay "in respect of his property," and the powers and provisions of the Act of 1879 were made applicable. The owners of property within the improvement area were to contribute not less than half the cost of the improvements, and the repayment of such cost was to be spread over a period of not more than one hundred years and of not less than fifty years:—Held, that the persons liable were the owners for the time being, and that the charge was not a personal charge on those who happened to be owners at the time when the assessment was made. Sydney Municipal Council v. Terry, 76 L. J. P.C. 65; [1907] A.C. 303; 97 L. T. 146—P.C.

—Municipal Abattoirs and Sale-yards—Imposition of Fees—Private Slaughter-house—By-law.]—Section 139 of the Sydney Corporation Act, 1879, by which, when municipal sale yards are established and by-laws made, the council may impose fees "in respect of any cattle intended for slaughter, yarded, or brought for sale by auction to any sale yards or premises in the city of Sydney or within the distance of 14 miles therefrom," does not apply to a person bringing his own cattle to his own private yard and lawfully killing them there. Sydney Municipal Council v. Austral Freezing Works, 74 L. J. P.C. 33; [1905] A.C. 161; 92 L. T. 280; 21 T. L. R. 295—P.C.

Public Works—Land Compulsorily Taken—Arbitration—Compensation Awarded—Trial by Jury—Costs.]—Where arbitrators have made an award for compensation in respect of land compulsorily taken, and the constructors by whom compensation is to be paid require a trial by a jury, and the jury award a sum less than the amount given by the arbitrators, though greater than that offered by the constructors, the landowner must, under section 116, sub-section 2 (b) of the Public Works Act, 1900, pay the costs both of the arbitration and award and of the action. Pacific Co-operative Steam Coal Co. v. Railway Commissioners of New South Wales, 73 L. J. P.C. 86; [1904] A.C. 795; 20 T. L. R. 718—P.C.

—Compulsory Acquisition of Property—Part of a House.]—Section 131 of the Public Works Act, 1900, which provides that in case of compulsory purchase of any house or other building or manufactory no party shall be required to sell a part only if he is willing and able to sell and convey the whole, is equally applicable whether the property is acquired by Gazette notification or by notice to the parties. Williams v. Permanent Trustee Co., 75 L. J. P.C. 48; [1906] A.C. 249; 94 L. T. 354; 22 T. L. R. 363—P.C.

—Compulsory Purchase of Land—Valuation—Application to Court—Costs.]—By section 99 of the Public Works Act, 1900 (New South Wales), where land is taken compulsorily for public purposes and the Minister and the claimant do not agree, the claimant may bring an action against the Minister for compensation. If the amount recovered be a sum equal to or less than the amount of valuation notified to the claimant, the latter is to pay the costs of the action; but if it is a greater sum the costs are to be paid by the Minister. Minister for Public Works v. Hart, 73 L. J. P.C. 53; [1904] A.C. 259; 90 L. T. 104; 20 T. L. R. 213—P.C.

Land of the respondents was taken by official notification, which stated the compensation assessed by the Government valuers; the respondents asked for an addition to the sum in respect of an omitted item. No further valuation or official notification was made, but in a letter from the department the Minister's approval of a further payment was expressed. The respondent refused the offer and applied to the Court, which assessed the compensation at the amount of the increased offer of the Minister:—Held, that there was no statutory obligation to make a second valuation, that there was a sufficient though informal notification of the further offer, and that the respondents must bear the costs of the proceedings. Ib.

Real Property—Interest in Land.]—The term "interest in land" in the Real Property Act, 1862, includes equitable as well as legal interests, and for the purpose of enforcing a remedy against the assurance fund provided by the Act the equitable interest may be enforced although the legal claim is barred by limitation. Williams v. Papworth, 69 L. J. P.C. 129; [1900] A.C. 563; 83 L. T. 184—P.C.

Revenue—Income Tax—Income Earned Within Colony—Process of Production.]—Victoria companies with their head offices at Melbourne held lands in the colony of New South Wales, on which they conducted mining operations. Neither company made any contracts for sale in New South Wales, but both companies made net profits to a large amount. By the New South Wales Land and Income Tax Assessment Act, 1895, income tax is assessable on income (i.) "Arising or accruing to any person wheresoever residing from any profession, trade, employment or vocation carried on in New South Wales." (iii.) "Derived from lands of the Crown held under lease or licence." (iv.) "Arising or accruing . . . from any other source whatsoever in New South Wales." But by section 27 (iii.) no tax was to be payable on income earned outside the colony:—Held, that the companies were liable to income tax in the colony, as some of the processes in the production of the income—namely, the extraction of the crude ore from the soil and its conversion into a merchantable product—were carried on in New South Wales. Tindal, In re (18 N.S.W. L. R. 378), overruled. Commissioners of Taxation v. Kirk, 69 L. J. P.C. 87; [1900] A.C. 588; 83 L. T. 4—P.C.

Mode of Assessment—Company Holding Investments, but not Trading in Colony.]—By the Victorian Income Tax Act, 1895, s. 2, the word "person" includes every company except a company whose head office or principal place of business is in the colony, and the word "company" includes every corporate body howsoever or wheresoever incorporated or situated. By section 10 companies not having their principal office or place of business in the colony are to be assessed on the proportion of their total dividends represented by the amount of their receipts or assets and liabilities in the colony:—Held, that a company not trading in the colony, but holding investments therein, is taxable, not under section 10, but on the full income of their Victorian investments, that section being applicable by clear implication, only to companies carrying on trade in the colony. Scottish Provident Institution v. Commissioner of Taxes, 70 L. J. P.C. 50; [1901] A.C. 340; 84 L. T. 241—P.C.

The holding of investments is not the trade of an insurance company, but a necessary incident of every business. Ib.

Compulsory Return of Income—Assessment by Commissioners in Default of Return.]—By the combined effect of the Land and Income Tax Assessment and of the Income Tax Acts, 1895, a tax is imposed on all incomes exceeding 200*l.*, incomes below that amount not being made liable to income tax. The Commissioners were to give notice requiring all persons liable to taxation to "furnish returns for the purpose of assessment of Land and Income Tax." By a regulation having the force of law "every person in receipt of income within the meaning of the said Acts" is required to make a return. If any person makes default in furnishing such return the Commissioners may make an assessment "of the amount on which, in their judgment, tax ought to be charged":—Held, that a return must be made of income whether or not it exceeded 200*l.*, and that in the absence of such return the Commissioners were entitled to make a default assessment. Commissioners of Taxation v. Mooney, 76 L. J. P.C. 64; [1907] A.C. 342; 97 L. T. 189; 23 T. L. R. 670—P.C.

In a case where the income was less than 200*l.*, and a default assessment had been made, ordered that the assessment should be reduced to a nominal amount, and that the appellants should pay the respondent his costs of appeal to the King in Council, as between solicitor and client. Ib.

Mutual Insurance Company—Exemption.]—A mutual insurance company, carrying on business with strangers for gain, and having no connection with Victoria except as owning property in the colony, is not entitled to the exemption given by the Income Tax Act (Victoria), 1895, s. 7 (e), to "all trusts, societies, associations, institutions, and public bodies not carrying on any trade or not being engaged in any trade for the purposes of gain to be divided among the shareholders or members thereof." The exemptions given by the Act to the bodies therein specified are confined to such bodies as are acting in and for the colony. England v. Webb, 67 L. J. P.C. 120; [1898] A.C. 758; 79 L. T. 131—P.C.

Deductions—Land Held under Lease from the Crown—Land Tax—Exemptions.]—The lessee of Crown lands which are exempt from land tax is not entitled to a deduction from income tax in respect of a sum representing the fair rental value of such land and the improvements thereon, such sum not being comprised among "Losses, outgoings including interest and expenses actually incurred . . . in the production of his income," and the only exemptions being in respect of land subject to land tax. Commissioners of Taxation v. Antill, 71 L. J. P.C. 81; [1902] A.C. 422; 86 L. T. 783—P.C.

The mode of assessing income tax under the Act is wholly different from that which prevails in the United Kingdom, inasmuch as, instead of collecting the tax under different schedules, the Act requires inclusive returns of income arising from any kind of property except land subject to land tax. Ib.

— Land Tax—Exemption—Lands Used in Connection with Public Charitable Purposes—Glebe Land Let on Building Leases.—Crown lands vested in trustees for parochial church purposes, partly let on building leases and partly waste, are not “used in connection with” public charitable purposes within the meaning of section 11, sub-section 5 of the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act (New South Wales), 1895, the exemption thereby conferred being confined to land in the actual use and occupation of the charitable body and not extending to the rents and profits derived from such land. The trustees having parted with the use and occupation of the land let on lease and of the waste lands there is no use or occupation for any purpose. Commissioners of Taxation v. St. Mark's Glebe Trustees, 71 L. J. P.C. 99; [1902] A.C. 416; 86 L. T. 629; 51 W. R. 33—P.C.

— Partial Exemption from Taxation—Ascertainment of Taxable Amount—Deduction of Outgoings.—By the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act, 1895, s. 28, every taxpayer is entitled to deduct from the taxable amount of his income “losses outgoings . . . actually incurred . . . in the production of his income.” By section 17, sub-section II., certain exemptions are granted from income tax:—Held, that, in order to ascertain the taxable amount the taxpayer is entitled to deduct the losses and outgoings necessary to produce his whole income, and not that part only which is subject to taxation. New South Wales Commissioners of Taxation v. Teece, 68 L. J. P.C. 8; [1899] A.C. 254; 79 L. T. 601—P.C.

— Probate Duty—“Intent to evade the payment of duty”—Liability of Simple Contract Debt to Duty.—The motive to evade payment of death duties is not the same thing as “intent to evade the payment of duty,” which, under section 115 of the Victorian Administration and Probate Act, 1890, makes gifts or assignments made by the donor during his life liable to duty on his death. The section applies only to transactions which are colourable and not real gifts. Simms v. Registrar of Probates (69 L. J. P.C. 51; [1900] A.C. 323) approved. Payne v. Regem, 71 L. J. P.C. 128; [1902] A.C. 552; 87 L. T. 84; 51 W. R. 351—P.C.

A statutory mortgage of land in New South Wales, held by a person domiciled in Victoria, is a simple contract debt in the latter colony, and there liable to probate duty. Ib.

— Excess of Assessment—Application for Refund—Mandamus—Delay.—A mandamus will not be granted for the purpose of recovering an excess of duty paid to the revenue, where there has been unreasonable delay in the application from the date at which it was ascertained that the amount charged was in excess of what was due. Broughton v. New South Wales Commissioner of Stamps, 68 L. J. P.C. 36; [1899] A.C. 251—P.C.

— Special Power of Appointment by Will.—Probate duty is not, under the Stamp Duties Act of New South Wales, payable on property appointed in exercise of a special testamentary power, such property not forming part of the testator's estate or being liable to his debts. Commissioners of Stamp Duties of New South Wales v. Stephen, 73 L. J. P.C. 9; [1904] A.C. 137; 89 L. T. 511; 20 T. L. R. 63—P.C.

— Sugar Duty—“Molasses, refined, in bond.”—A process which simply removes foreign impurities from an article without producing any change in the article itself is not a process of refining for the purpose of differential duties as between the refined and the unrefined article. Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Att.-Gen. for Victoria, 70 L. J. P.C. 75; [1901] A.C. 544; 84 L. T. 787—P.C.

— Wharfage and Tonnage Rates—Expired Crown Leases—Payments made Pending Applications for Renewal—Interest in Land.—The Sydney Harbour Trust Act, 1900, s. 68, authorises the Commissioners to collect “at any wharf” vested in them “wharfage and tonnage rates according to the provisions contained in the Wharfage and Tonnage Act of 1880 and Acts amending the same.” The Act of 1880 authorised rates on two kinds of wharfs only:—Held, that the Act of 1900 was not so limited, but extended to every kind of wharf. Lukey v. Sydney Harbour Trust Commissioners, 73 L. J. P.C. 66; [1904] A.C. 382; 90 L. T. 743; 20 T. L. R. 532—P.C.

By section 27 of the Harbour Trust Act lands within the boundaries of the port were vested in the Commissioners “subject to the interest of any persons in such lands existing at the time of the passing of this Act”:—Held, that payments of money as “rent” after the expiration of leases and pending the decision of applications for renewal did not create an interest in the land. Ib.

— Local Government—Rating—Gas Mains—Sewered and Unsewered Property.—By section 5, sub-sections 1 and 3 of the Melbourne and Metropolitan Board of Works Act, 1897, property which, or any part of which, abuts on a street in which sewers have been laid, and any property, whether so abutting or not, which is connected with a sewer of the Board, is deemed to be a “sewered property.” By section 8, sub-section 6, a certain rate is to be levied on “sewered property,” and a certain lower rate is to be levied on unsewered property:—Held, that gas mains, inasmuch as they did not abut on a street in which sewers had been laid, were not sewered property, but were liable to be rated as unsewered property (there being only two categories recognised by the Act), and that the circumstance that they were not in their nature capable of deriving the same benefit from sewers as inhabited houses was no ground for relieving them from rates altogether and placing them in a new category not recognised by the Act. Melbourne Board of Works v. Metropolitan — Vermin Destruction—Vermin-proof Gates—Power of Landowners to Erect.—By section 428 of the Local Government Act, 1890, the council of every municipality, except as thereafter or in any other Act of Parliament provided, is to keep roads open and free from obstruction. By sections 45 and 46 of the Vermin Destruction Act, 1890, shire councils may obtain loans for enclosing lands with a continuous wire netting or vermin-proof fence for the benefit of owners desiring assistance. Such lands form "special areas." By section 58 of the Vermin Destruction Act, owners may, with the consent of the shire council, enclose their land with a vermin-proof fence, having, when enclosing any road, swing gates covered with wire netting:—Held, that, notwithstanding section 428 of the Local Government Act, vermin-proof swing gates may be put across roads other than main roads by owners of land, whether adjoining owners or single owners, with the consent of the shire council, whether such lands are in special areas or not. King v. Cheyne, 69 L. J. P.C. 136; [1900] A.C. 622—P.C.

— Appeal to County Court—Rating Appeal—Power to State a Case for the Supreme Court.—By the Justices Act, 1890, s. 139, the Court of general sessions is in any case of appeal, if so required by any party to proceedings, to state the facts specially for the determination of the Supreme Court thereon, "any Act to the contrary notwithstanding." By the Local Government Act, 1890, s. 277, an appeal is given to the Court of General Sessions for any cause, and its decision is to be "final and conclusive on all parties." By the Local Government Act, 1891, s. 60, all rate appeals are transferred from the general sessions to the County Court, whose decision is to be "final and conclusive on all points"; and section 61 applies to rate appeals all the provisions of other Acts, and gives to County Courts all powers and jurisdictions possessed by Courts of general sessions "subject to the provisions of this Act":—Held, that the Local Government Acts did not take away from the County Court the power to state a Case possessed by the Court of general sessions. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. Fitzroy Corporation, 70 L. J. P.C. 1; [1901] A. C. 153; 83 L. T. 442—P.C.

Lunacy—Habeas Corpus—Right to a Jury.—In the Colony of Victoria an alleged lunatic has no right either on an application for a habeas corpus or under the sections of the Lunacy Act, 1890, relating to discharge, to have the question of his sanity ascertained by a jury. Gregory, Ex parte, 70 L. J. P.C. 19; [1901] A.C. 128; 83 L. T. 441—P.C.

Public Officers—"Officers' quarters"—Deductions for Rent.—The deductions from salary in respect of rent for the use as a residence of any Government building, authorized by section 186 of the Public Service Act (Victoria), 1890 (No. 1133), cannot be made in the case of public officers whose duties necessitate their residence on Government premises. Rex v. Fisher; Rex v. Bull, 72 L. J. P.C. 45; [1903] A.C. 158; 88 L. T. 74—P.C.

Tramway Company—Tramways Trust—Licences for Tramcars, Drivers, and Conductors—Liability of Company.—By its Act of 1883 the appellant company was authorised to make and work tramways with the consent of the local authorities affected. By an agreement scheduled to the Act municipal corporations were empowered to unite themselves into a trust, which was to exercise the powers of the constituent corporations. The trust was authorised to borrow money for the construction of a tramway which was to be let to the company for a term of years, the company to pay the interest and sinking fund, to keep the tramway in repair, and at the end of the term to restore it to the trust in good working order. The company was to provide the cars and pay the drivers and conductors. It was, however, to "be liable to no other payment to the trust or to the several corporations represented thereon for proportion of profits or otherwise howsoever except for municipal rates":—Held, that these words of exemption applied only to the tramway and not to the cars, which belonged not to the trust, but to the company, and that the latter was liable to pay the corporation licences for the cars, their conductors and drivers. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. Kidney. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. City of Melbourne, 74 L. J. P.C. 66; [1905] A.C. 358; 92 L. T. 584; 21 T. L. R. 425—P.C.

Trust—Trustee Company—Breach of Trust—Improper Investment.—The proviso in section 384 of the Companies Act, 1890, of Victoria, which empowers a trustee company to deposit any moneys of which it has control with any banking company or corporation fulfilling certain conditions, does not authorise such deposit as an investment, or enable a trustee company to deposit trust moneys with a bank in any case in which an individual trustee would not be justified in employing a banker. Perpetual Executors and Trustees Association v. Swan, 67 L. J. P.C. 141; [1898] A.C. 763; 79 L. T. 148—P.C.

— Paid Trustee—Breach of Trust—Liability when Acting Honestly.—The position of a joint-stock company which is paid for acting as trustee is widely different from that of a gratuitous trustee, and the difference must be taken into account in any claim for relief from the consequences of a breach of trust, although the company may have acted honestly and reasonably, and under professional advice. National Trustees, Executors, and Agency Co. of Australasia v. General Finance Agency, 74 L. J. P.C. 73; [1905] A.C. 373; 92 L. T. 736; 54 W. R. 1; 21 T. L. R. 522—P.C.

Section 3 of the Trusts Act (Victoria), 1901, gives no absolute right to relief in cases where a trustee, though guilty of a breach of trust, "has acted honestly and reasonably." It only empowers the Court to grant such relief in a proper case. Ib.

The cestui que trust is not debarred from relief by having accepted and acted upon an erroneous statement of law made by the trustee where both have been under a common mistake. Ib.

(c) QUEENSLAND.

Succession Duty—Retrospective Character—Construction.]—The Queensland Succession and Probate Duties Act Amendment Act, 1895, by which duty is chargeable in respect of all property within the colony, although the testator or intestate was not domiciled there, does not apply to the property of a person dying before the Act came into operation. Harding v. Queensland Commissioners of Stamps, 67 L. J. P.C. 144; [1898] A.C. 769; 79 L. T. 42—P.C.

The Succession and Probate Duties Act, 1892, which is modelled on the English Succession Duty Act, 1853, must be construed on the analogy of English decisions, in which it has been held that such duties are not chargeable on the property, locally situated in the United Kingdom, of persons not domiciled therein. Id.

Suit Pending when Act Passed taking away Right of Appeal—Act not Retrospective.]—Although the right of appeal from the Supreme Court of Queensland to his Majesty in Council given by the Order in Council of June 30, 1860, has been taken away by the Australian Commonwealth Judiciary Act, 1903, s. 39, sub-s. 2, and the only appeal therefrom now lies to the High Court of Australia, yet the Act is not retrospective, and a right of appeal to the King in Council in a suit pending when the Act was passed and decided by the Supreme Court afterwards is not taken away. Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving, 74 L. J. P.C. 77; [1905] A.C. 369; 92 L. T. 738; 21 T. L. R. 513—P.C.

(d) SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Revenue—Succession—Non-testamentary Disposition—Covenant to Pay—“With intent to evade Payment of Duty.”]—By section 16 of the Succession Duties Act, 1898, a “deed of gift” is to include every non-testamentary disposition of property to take effect during the donor's lifetime. By section 17, property given under any such deed is, if the donor dies within three months of its date, to be chargeable with duty; and by section 27, if any person makes any kind of non-testamentary disposition, whether in writing or otherwise, of any property “with intent to evade the payment of duty,” property taken thereunder is to be liable to double duty. By a deed poll dated January 10, 1896, a man who died on December 25, 1897, covenanted to pay among his children 200,000*l.* and to pay interest thereon quarterly in advance at the rate paid by the Associated Banks in Adelaide on deposit at three months, provided such interest should not be less than 1*l.* 10*s.* per cent. Interest at 1½ per cent. was regularly paid until the testator's death:—Held, that there was, within the meaning of the statute, no intention to evade payment of duty, and that no duty was chargeable. Simms v. Registrar of Probates, 69 L. J. P.C. 51; [1900] A.C. 323; 82 L. T. 433—P.C.

(e) VICTORIA.

Book Debts—Unregistered Deed—Subsequent Registered Deed—Inconsistency—Construction.]

—The effect of section 3 of the Book Debts Act (Victoria), 1896, by which “no assignment or transfer” of book debts is valid unless registered, is only to invalidate the assignment and not to invalidate or affect the recitals and covenant for payment in an unregistered deed. National Bank of Australasia v. Falkingham, 71 L. J. P.C. 105; [1902] A.C. 535; 87 L. T. 90—P.C.

By a registered deed one of the respondents was declared to be liable in the books of the appellant bank, in a sum of money, and the firm of which he was a member were indebted in another sum, and he, “as to his said indebtedness,” and the firm, “as to their said indebtedness,” assigned certain moneys in the hands of the appellant bank:—Held, that there being no surplus to distribute the bank was entitled to repay itself the debt of the individual partner without ascertaining the value of his share in the partnership. Id.

Supply of Electricity—Uniformity of Charge.]—Provisions in an Act of Parliament regulating the supply of electricity which require uniformity of treatment towards all classes of customers are not inconsistent with the existence of two systems of charge, either of which every customer is free to adopt. Att.-Gen. for Victoria v. Melbourne Corporation, 76 L. J. P.C. 91; [1907] A.C. 469; 97 L. T. 500; 23 T. L. R. 753—P.C.

(f) WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Mining Lease—Statutory Forfeiture—Notice.]—By clause 70 of the Regulations of 1892 then in force under the Goldfields Acts, 1836 and 1895, each application for the forfeiture of a lease was to be heard by the warden in open Court, and his report on evidence taken to be forwarded immediately to the Minister for the decision of the Governor-General:—Held, that the Governor-General's decision to cancel a lease was not operative until it was communicated to the lessee or the land declared vacant by some other overt act of the Governor. Minister of Mines v. Harney, 70 L. J. P.C. 38; [1901] A.C. 347; 84 L. T. 369—P.C.

Patent—Colonial Registration of British or Foreign Patent—Prior Publication or User—Amendment of Specification—Renewal Fees.]—Section 49 of the West Australian Patent Act, 1888, which provides that registration of a British or foreign patent in the mode prescribed shall have the effect of the grant of original letters patent, merely affords a machinery for the protection of patents so registered, but is subject to all the incidents and conditions applicable to letters patent. Thus common knowledge, user, or publication outside the colony subsequent to the date of the original patent, but prior to the registration, avoids the registration, except so far as they may be grounds of objection applicable to the original letters patent. Australian Gold Recovery Co. v. Lake View Consols, 70 L. J. P.C. 14; [1901] A.C. 142; 83 L. T. 541—P.C.

The renewal fees charged by the Second Schedule of the Act on letters patent are not payable in respect of the letters of registration. Id.

The recording by the Registrar of Patents in the colony of an amendment of a British specification has not the effect of an amendment of the specification in letters of registration of the British patent. Ib.

Registration of Titles—Wrongful Issue of Certificate—Liability of Registrar—Damages.]—

By a deed of feoffment in 1841 land was conveyed to trustees in trust for a married woman, her heirs and assigns, to her use, purposes, and designs as she should from time to time direct, and upon further trust in case of her death to grant and assign the same to such persons as she should appoint by will:—Held, that the trustees took the legal estate in fee, and that the special trust was not inconsistent with, but ancillary to the equitable fee-simple vested in the woman and secured to her the enjoyment of the property during her life and the power of disposing of it after her death. Spencer v. Registrar of Titles, 75 L. J. P.C. 100; [1906] A.C. 503; 95 L. T. 317—P.C.

By an indenture of 1842 the property was mortgaged by a deed ineffectual to pass the equitable fee, but passing the legal estate to the mortgagee. In 1846, by settlement on her second marriage, the property was conveyed upon trusts ultimately for sale and for the children of the marriage. The settlement was registered in the Office of Registration of Deeds in 1847. In 1848, by a deed, to which the husband and wife, the feoffment trustees, the feoffor, and the intending purchaser were parties, the mortgagee by the direction of the husband and wife, the husband by the wife's direction, the trustees at her request, and the feoffor conveyed the property to the purchaser to uses equivalent to the fee-simple. The deed was registered, and after the passing of the Transfer of Land Act, 1874, a certificate of title was given to the purchaser. The husband survived his wife and died in 1903. The appellant was their child:—Held, that the certificate had been wrongly issued to the purchaser, that the interests of the persons entitled in remainder under the settlement were unaffected by the conveyance, that the appellant's title to sue only commenced in 1903 when the trust for sale came into operation, and that he was not disqualified from recovering damages as trustee and beneficiary under the settlement by section 211 of the Western Australian Land Transfer Act, 1893. Ib.

5. BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.

(a) DOMINION OF CANADA.

Aliens, Expulsion of.]—Section 6 of the Alien Labour Act, 1897, whereby, in cases to which the Act is applicable, the Attorney-General of Canada is empowered to cause the arrest of an alien immigrant and his return to the country whence he came, is within the powers of the Dominion Parliament; and the fact that extra-territorial constraint must be exercised in effecting such expulsion does not invalidate the warrant authorising the same. Att.-Gen. for the Dominion of Canada v. Cain; Same v. Gihula, 75 L. J. P.C. 81; [1906] A.C. 542; 95 L. T. 814; 22 T. L. R. 757—P.C.

Appeal—Petition of Right.]—An appeal lies to her Majesty from a decision of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada upon a petition of right. Reg. v. Demers, 69 L. J. P.C. 5; [1900] A.C. 103; 81 L. T. 795—P.C.

— Supreme Court of Canada—Admiralty—

Right to Appeal to the King in Council.]—By virtue of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, an appeal lies without leave from the Supreme Court of Canada in Admiralty cases, notwithstanding section 47 of the Canadian Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, 1875, by which the judgment of the Supreme Court is in all cases to be final and conclusive, subject to the exercise of the Royal prerogative. Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co. v. Cape Breton Steamship (Owners), 76 L. J. P.C. 14; [1907] A.C. 112; 95 L. T. 896; 23 T. L. R. 185—P.C.

— Practice.]—No appeal is allowed from the Supreme Court of Canada to the King in Council except by special leave, and such leave will not be granted "save where the case is of gravity involving matter of public interest or some important question of law, or affecting property of considerable amount, or where the case is of some public importance or of a very substantial character." Prince v. Gagnon (8 App. Cas. 103) approved. Clergue v. Murray, 72 L. J. P.C. 99; [1903] A.C. 521; 89 L. T. 373—P.C.

Where a litigant elects to go to the Supreme Court of Canada, having his choice whether he will go there or not, the Judicial Committee will not give him special leave except under special circumstances. Ib.

Concessions—Concurrent, by Corporation.]—A corporation granted a permission to certain persons to erect poles for the establishment of a system of electric light under certain specified conditions. Subsequently, by a by-law, confirmed by an Act of Parliament, the corporation granted to another person an exclusive privilege to construct an electric railway, and also for thirty-five years to establish a system of lighting and heating by electricity or otherwise; and the exclusive rights thus given were to be such as the city "possesses and as it has the right to grant this day." In an action by the latter person to obtain the revocation of the previous licence,—Held, that the by-law and confirmatory Act were not ultra vires, as the scheme which they authorised was a purely local undertaking and within the competence of the Provincial Legislature under section 92 of the British North America Act, 1867. Held, also, that the two concessions were not necessarily incompatible. The first was revocable at the city's pleasure, but not otherwise; and the second only amounted to an undertaking by the city not to convert the permission given by the first into a right. Hull Electric Co. v. Ottawa Electric Co., 71 L. J. P.C. 58; [1902] A.C. 237; 86 L. T. 208—P.C.

Copyright—Works of Art—Extension of English Copyright to Colonies.]—The Copyright (Works of Art) Act, 1862, conferring on British subjects and persons resident in British dominions copyright in pictures, drawings, and photographs, is not applicable to any part of the British dominions outside the United Kingdom. Graves v. Gorrie, 72 L. J. P.C. 95;

[1903] A.C. 496; 89 L. T. 111; 52 W. R. 113—P.C.

The Canada Copyright Act, 1875, does not make the Canadian Act set out in the schedule an Imperial Act applicable to Canada. Copyright in Canada can only be obtained for paintings, drawings, and photographs by complying with the laws of that country. Graves v. Gorrie, 72 L. J. P.C. 95; [1903] A.C. 496; 89 L. T. 111; 52 W. R. 113—P.C.

Company—Liquidation—Action Brought on Behalf of Company—Liquidators Suing in the Wrong Form—Amendment.]—Under the Canadian Winding-up Act, 1886, and the Code of Civil Procedure a company in liquidation retains its corporate powers, including the power to sue, but such powers must be exercised through the liquidator under the authority of the Court, and the liquidator must join the company with himself in the action. But if the liquidator sues in his own name without joinder of the company, the Court has ample powers of amendment under articles 516 and 518 of the Code, which ought to be exercised. Kent v. La Communauté des Sœurs de Charité de la Providence, 72 L. J. P.C. 61; [1903] A.C. 220; 88 L. T. 275—P.C.

Courts—Provincial—Jurisdiction.]—The sale of land situated in one province cannot be conducted nor can possession be given by a Court in another province. Nor has either the Supreme Court of Canada or her Majesty in Council sitting in appeal any wider jurisdiction. Great North-West Central Railway v. Charlebois, 68 L. J. P.C. 25; [1899] A.C. 114; 79 L. T. 35—P.C.

Customs—Import Duties—Date of Importation.]—The time at which, under the Customs and Tariff Acts of Canada, goods for the purposes of custom duties are imported is when they are landed and delivered to the importer or to his order, or when they are taken out of warehouse, if, instead of being delivered, they have been placed in bond. Canada Sugar Refining Co. v. Reg., 67 L. J. P.C. 126; [1898] A.C. 735; 79 L. T. 146—P.C.

Certain duties on sugar were imposed by the Tariff Act, 1895, which came into force on May 3, 1895. By the Customs Act, 1886, s. 25, the master of a vessel as soon as she is anchored or moored is to make a report of the goods on board to the collector. By section 31, if any vessel calls at a port of entry, but it is intended to convey its cargo to any other port, duties are to be paid, not at the first port, but at that at which the goods are to be landed. By section 34 every importer is to make due entry of the goods and land the same. By section 150 the importation is defined to have been completed from the time the vessel came within the limits of the port at which the goods ought to be reported. The appellants' vessel called at North Sydney on her way to Montreal on April 29, 1895. On May 2, before the arrival of the vessel, the appellants made entry at the Montreal Customs House of the goods, and a landing warrant was issued for the landing thereof duty free. On May 14, however, the collector of customs cancelled the free entry and claimed duty:—Held, that the importation was not effected before May 3, as the report referred to in section 150 means the report to be made by the master under section 25, completed by the entry to be made by the importer under section 34. Id.

—Ship—Goods Subject to Import Duties—Registration.]—A foreign-built ship, which is made liable under the heading "Goods subject to duties" by item 409 in the schedule to the Customs Tariff (Canada) Act, 1897, is imported when it enters a Canadian port or harbour; and the imposition of the duty is not inconsistent with the registration sections of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, which are made applicable to the whole of the British dominions. Algoma Central Railway v. Regem, 72 L. J. P.C. 108; [1903] A.C. 478; 89 L. T. 109; 9 Asp. M.C. 431—P.C.

Debt—Notice of Transfer—"Signification"—Notarial Act.]—Notice of the sale or transfer of a debt, accompanied by a copy of the transfer, is sufficient "signification" within the meaning of article 1,571 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, without the intervention of a notary. The institution by the transferee of an action against the debtor to recover the debt is of itself a sufficient signification of the act of sale, and there is nothing in the Code which requires signification of the sale and a delivery of a copy of the act of sale to be made at one and the same time. Bank of Toronto v. St. Lawrence Fire Insurance Co., 72 L. J. P.C. 14; [1903] A.C. 59; 87 L. T. 462—P.C.

Extradition—Offences—Habeas Corpus—Warrant of Arrest—Release by Judge of One District of Prisoner Arrested in Another.]—By chapter 95, section 28 of the Consolidated Statutes of Lower Canada—incorporating section 27 of the Habeas Corpus Act of Lower Canada, 1857 (23 Vict. c. 57)—whenever a writ of habeas corpus has been refused by a Judge, no fresh application for the writ, unless new facts are stated, is lawful before such Judge or before any other Judge. The respondents were arrested for extradition offences by warrant of a Commissioner whose jurisdiction extended beyond the district to which he was assigned. Whilst temporarily in another district the respondents' discharge from custody was ordered by a Judge of that district:—Held, that the Judge had no jurisdiction to order such discharge. United States of America v. Gaynor, 74 L. J. P.C. 44; [1905] A.C. 128; 92 L. T. 276; 21 T. L. R. 254—P.C.

Gifts Inter Vivos—Validity.]—Article 762 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, by which gifts inter vivos made during the supposed mortal illness of the donor are void whether or not followed by his death, "unless circumstances tend to render them valid (si aucunes circonstances n'aident à les valider)", does not apply to a case in which a testator was suffering for a protracted period from maladies which went on increasing in severity until the moment of death. Archambault v. Archambault, 71 L. J. P.C. 131; [1902] A.C. 575; 87 L. T. 404—P.C.

Indian Reserves—Proprietary Rights of Province—Choice of Lands Appropriated.]—Section

91, sub-section 24 of the British North America Act, 1867, by which the Parliament of Canada has exclusive legislative authority over "Indians and Lands reserved for the Indians," does not vest in the Government of the Dominion any proprietary rights in such lands or power by legislation to interfere therewith in infringement of the proprietary rights of the province in which the lands are situated. Ontario Mining Co. v. Seybold, 72 L. J. P.C. 5; 87 L. T. 449—P.C.

The choice and location of lands to be appropriated as Indian Reserves can only be effected by the joint action of the Provincial and Dominion Governments. But when such lands are surrendered by the Indians, the result is to vest them in the Crown for the beneficial use of the province whose grantees' title prevails over the title purported to be granted by the Dominion. St. Catherine's Milling and Lumber Co. v. Reg. (58 L. J. P.C. 54; 14 App. Cas. 46) followed. Ib.

Unauthorised Acquiescence of Officials.]—A province cannot be bound by the unauthorised acts of officers of departments. Ib.

Husband and Wife—Rights of—Separation as to Property—Mortgage of Wife's Property—Money Used for Husband's Purposes—Validity of Mortgage.]—The words "for her husband" in article 1,301 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, which invalidates any obligation binding her separate property "for her husband," mean generally in any way for the husband's purposes as distinguished from those of the wife, and ignorance on the part of the obligee cannot avail him if in fact she bound herself for her husband. Trust and Loan Co. of Canada v. Gauthier, 73 L. J. P.C. 5; 89 L. T. 453—P.C.

Insolvency—Preferential Creditor—Builder's Privilege.]—The privilege of a builder as a preferential creditor of an insolvent estate constituted by the Code of Lower Canada, and the amending statutes, dates only from registration effected under article 2,103; and where work was completed during the currency of 57 Vict. c. 46, but in respect of which there was no registration until after the commencement of 59 Vict. c. 42, the privilege is governed by the provisions of the later statute, which limits its duration to one year. Banque d'Hochelaga v. Stevenson, 69 L. J. P.C. 139; [1900] A. C. 600; 83 L. T. 235—P.C.

The hypothecary privilege conferred by article 2,013 (l) in 59 Vict. c. 42 only arises on notice given to the proprietor in virtue of article 2,013 (g) in 59 Vict. c. 42, and registered according to article 2,103 of the original Code. Ib.

Lakes, Rivers, Harbours, Fisheries—Respective Rights of Dominion and Provinces.]—Whether a lake or river in Canada be vested in the Crown as represented by the Dominion or as represented by the province in which it is situated, it is equally Crown Property, and the rights of the public in respect of it, except as modified by legislation, are precisely the same. Att.-Gen. for Canada v. Atts.-Gen. for Ontario, Quebec, and Nova Scotia, 67 L. J. P.C. 90; [1898] A.C. 700; 78 L. T. 697—P.C.

There is a broad distinction between proprietary rights and legislative jurisdiction, and the latter may be vested in the Dominion Parliament without the transfer of any proprietary rights. Whatever proprietary rights were at the passing of the Dominion Act, 1867, possessed by the provinces, remain vested in them, except such as are by any of its express enactments transferred to the Dominion. Ib.

By the 108th section of the Act the public works and property of each province enumerated in the 3rd schedule are to become the property of the Dominion; the fifth item of the schedule being "Rivers and Lake Improvements." The true construction of this item is that the improvements only, and not the whole of the rivers, became vested in the Dominion. Ib.

In the same schedule "Public Harbours" are vested in the Dominion. That term includes whatever may be properly designated as a "harbour," and is not confined to those parts on which public works had been executed. But it does not follow that the foreshore on the margin of a harbour necessarily forms a portion thereof. That depends on the circumstances of each case. Holman v. Green (6 S. C. R. 707; 2 Cart. 147) overruled on this point. No proprietary rights, but only legislative jurisdiction, is conferred on the Dominion in relation to fisheries by the 91st section, although the power to legislate enables the Legislature to some extent to affect proprietary rights. Within such legislative power is the imposition of a tax by way of licence as a condition of the right to fish. Ib.

In so far as section 4 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 95, empowers the grant of fishery leases in property not belonging to the Dominion, but to the provinces, it was ultra vires. Ib.

The Ontario Legislature had jurisdiction to enact section 47 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, c. 24, except in so far as it relates to land in the harbours and canals, if any of the latter be included in the words "other navigable waters of Ontario." Ib.

On the true construction of section 91 of the British North America Act the enactment of fishery regulations is within the exclusive competence of the Dominion Legislature, although the legislation of provincial legislatures is not necessarily incompetent merely because it may have relation to fisheries. Ib.

The Dominion Parliament had jurisdiction to pass the Act entitled "An Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable rivers." Ib.

Mining—Placer Miners—Renewal of Grants—Mining Regulations.]—Under section 20 of the Statute Regulations made under the Dominion Lands Act, 1886, a placer miner holds on renewal under an annual grant in substitution for, not in continuation of, his original grant, and he has no absolute, but only a preferential, right to renewal. Chappelle v. Regem; Rea v. Chappelle; Carmack v. Regem; Tweed v. Regem, 73 L. J. P.C. 18; [1904] A.C. 127; 89 L. T. 513; 20 T. L. R. 74—P.C.

A renewal grant issued during the currency of an existing grant is liable to be affected by regulations not in force at the time of renewal, but coming into operation before the expiry of the existing grant. Ib.

The imposition by the Governor in Council of a percentage to be paid by a placer miner on the proceeds realised from his claim is not contrary to the terms of the grant giving the miner the exclusive right to such proceeds, or a tax requiring the authority of Parliament. It is a reservation out of the grant which it was competent for the grantor as owner in fee to make. Ib.

The condition expressed in section 91 of the Act that every order and regulation made by the Governor in Council shall have effect only after the same has been published for four successive weeks in the Canada Gazette is not fulfilled by publication in four successive weekly issues when the period of four weeks from the first issue has not expired. Ib.

Parliament—Dominion—Jurisdiction—Fore-shore—Harbour.—By section 108 of the British North America Act, 1867, public harbours in each province are within the legislative powers of the Dominion Parliament, and where a fore-shore is used for a harbour it must, in accordance with Att.-Gen. for Canada v. Att.-Gen. for Ontario, Quebec, and Nova Scotia (67 L. J. P.C. 90; [1898] A.C. 700), be regarded as part of a harbour. Att.-Gen. for British Columbia v. Canadian Pacific Railway, 75 L. J. P.C. 38; [1906] A.C. 204; 94 L. T. 295; 22 T. L. R. 330—P.C.

Provincial Crown Lands.—Under sections 91 and 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, which give the Dominion Parliament legislative authority over railways and other works extending beyond the limits of a province, the Dominion Parliament may dispose of provincial Crown lands for the purposes mentioned in those sections, and by section 18 (a) of the Canadian-Pacific Railway Act, 1881, that power has been exercised. Ib.

Consolidated Railway Act—Canadian-Pacific Railway Act, 1881.—The Consolidated Railway Act, 1879, which is incorporated in the Canadian-Pacific Railway Act, 1881, only applies where its language is not inconsistent with the special incorporating Act. Ib.

Dominion—Representation of the Provinces—Periodical Re-adjustments.—By the British North America Act, 1867, s. 5, Canada was to be divided into four provinces; by section 37 the House of Commons was to consist of 181 members in the proportions for the several provinces therein mentioned; by section 51 the representation of the four provinces was to be re-adjusted decennially in accordance with the results of the census, on the principle that Quebec was to have the fixed number of 65, and each of the other provinces such a number of members as would bear the same proportion to the number of its population as the number 65 bore to the population of Quebec, and on any such re-adjustment the number of members for a province was not to be reduced unless the proportion of the population of the province to the "aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding re-adjustment" were diminished by one twentieth part or upwards; by section 146 it was made lawful for the Queen by Order in Council to admit other colonies or provinces into the Union, and such Order in Council was to have the effect of an Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom:—Held, with respect to one of the four original provinces, that the words "aggregate population" were not confined to those four provinces, but included the population of the provinces admitted into the Union subsequently to the passage of the British North America Act. Held, also, in the case of a province admitted since the Act, that section 51 was not confined to the distribution of representatives between the four original provinces, and that there might be "re-adjustment" without alteration in a particular province, so that the representation of the province might be diminished, though at a previous decennial period there had been no increase. Att.-Gen. for Prince Edward Island v. Att.-Gen. for Canada; Att.-Gen. for New Brunswick v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, 74 L. J. P.C. 9; [1905] A.C. 37; 91 L. T. 636; 21 T. L. R. 25—P.C.

Provincial Legislature—Powers of Company Incorporated by Dominion Statute—Business Extending Beyond the Province.—It is not competent to a provincial Legislature to impose conditions precedent to the exercise of powers conferred by the Dominion Parliament upon an undertaking which extends beyond the limits of the province, such undertakings being under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament. Reg. v. Mohr (7 Quebec L. R. 183; 2 Cartwright, 257) disapproved. Toronto Corporation v. Bell Telephone Co. of Canada, 74 L. J. P.C. 22; [1905] A.C. 52; 91 L. T. 700; 21 T. L. R. 45—P.C.

Liquor Traffic—Suppression of.—The Legislative Assembly of Manitoba had jurisdiction to enact the Liquor Act, 1900, of which the purpose is to restrict the consumption of liquor within the province without interfering with transactions between a person in the province and persons in another province or in a foreign country. Such power is given by section 92, sub-section 16 of the British North American Act, 1867. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for the Dominion (65 L. J. P.C. 36; [1896] A.C. 348) followed. Att.-Gen. for Manitoba v. Manitoba Licence-holders' Association, 71 L. J. P.C. 28; [1902] A.C. 73; 85 L. T. 591; 50 W. R. 431—P.C.

Provincial Legislatures—Powers of Dominion and of Provincial Legislatures.—A Provincial Legislature has no power to order work to be done on a railway which has been declared by the Dominion Parliament to be "for the general advantage of Canada"; such a power is, under the British North America Act, 1867, s. 92, sub-s. 10 (c), exclusively assigned to the Parliament of Canada. Canadian-Pacific Railway v. Notre Dame de Bonsecours Parish (supra) distinguished. Madden v. Nelson and Fort Sheppard Railway, 68 L. J. P.C. 148; [1899] A.C. 626; 81 L. T. 276—P.C.

Powers of Dominion and of Provincial Legislatures.]—Although by section 92, sub-section 10 of the British North America Act, 1867, railways which extend beyond the limits of a Province are subject exclusively as railways to the legislative authority of the Dominion, such railways do not cease to be part of the Provinces in which they are situated nor are they in other respects exempted from the jurisdiction of Provincial Legislatures. Matters of purely local concern, having no relation to the structure of the railway, are within the local jurisdiction. Canadian-Pacific Railway v. Notre Dame de Bonsecours Parish, 68 L. J. P.C. 54; [1899] A.C. 367; 80 L. T. 434—P.C.

The appellant company was required by the respondents to clear out a certain ditch on the line within the parish, and the effect of the operation would not alter the structure of the ditch or the railway:—Held, that the order was within the competence of the parish to make. Ib.

— Railways—Civil Rights.]—In cases in which it is equally competent for the Parliament of Canada and for the Provincial Legislatures to make laws, and a conflict arises, the legislation of the Dominion Parliament must prevail. Grand Trunk Railway v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, 76 L. J. P.C. 23; [1907] A.C. 65; 95 L. T. 631; 23 T. L. R. 40—P.C.

By section 92, sub-section 13 of the British North America Act, 1867, "Property and Civil Rights in the Province" are within the powers of the Provincial Legislatures. By sub-section 10, "Railways . . . connecting the Province with any other or others of the Provinces, or extending beyond the limits of the Province," are excepted from the powers of Provincial Legislatures:—Held, that an Act defining the relations of a railway company and its servants was ancillary to railway legislation, and, though affecting the civil rights of those servants, was within the competence of the Parliament of Canada. Ib.

— Legislation Ultra Vires—Naturalisation and Aliens.]—An enactment by a Provincial Legislature that no Chinaman shall be employed in mines is beyond its competence, inasmuch as by the British North America Act, 1867, s. 91, sub-s. 25, legislation with respect to "naturalisation and aliens" is reserved exclusively to the Parliament of the Dominion. Union Colliery Co. of British Columbia v. Bryden, 68 L. J. P.C. 118; [1899] A.C. 580; 81 L. T. 277—P.C.

Railway Company—Statutory Powers—Damage Caused by Sparks from Engine—Liability apart from Negligence.]—A corporation acting under statutory powers is not liable in damages for injury done in the due exercise without negligence of those powers. In this respect the law of Quebec is the same as that of England, and is not affected either by the Civil Code of Lower Canada or the Railway Act of Canada, 1888. Neither section 92 nor section 288 of that Act imposes liability for injury caused by a proper user of the railway—the former referring to compensation and not to damages in an action, and the latter dealing with wholly different questions. Canadian-Pacific Railway v. Roy, 71 L. J. P.C. 51; [1902] A.C. 220; 86 L. T. 127; 50 W. R. 415—P.C.

— Statutory Rules—Construction—Dispensing Power of Railway Committee.]—Where in each of several provisions in a general Act of Parliament dealing with railways a certain precaution is imposed for the prevention of accidents, and in one provision a limited dispensing power is given to omit such precaution, the dispensing power must be confined to the particular provision in which it occurs, and cannot be extended so as to exonerate a company from liability for an accident arising from the absence of such precaution under one of the other provisions. Grand Trunk Railway of Canada v. Washington, 68 L. J. P.C. 37; [1899] A.C. 275; 80 L. T. 301—P.C.

— Dominion Lands Granted to—Grant by Way of Subsidy—Reservation of Mines and Minerals.]—Dominion lands granted to a railway company by way of subsidy under the Railway Land Subsidies Act, 1890, are not subject to the reservation of mines and minerals, except gold and silver; and such lands are not governed by the Dominion Lands Act, 1886, or the Regulations of 1889 made thereunder, as that Act and the Regulations apply only to sales of Dominion lands for settlement and occupation. Calgary and Edmonton Railway v. Regem, 73 L. J. P.C. 110; [1904] A.C. 765; 91 L. T. 301; 20 T. L. R. 770—P.C.

Sale of Land—Payment of Price by Installments—Insolvency of Debtor—Right of Creditor to Repayment before Expiration of Time.]—Where a company has bought land of which the purchase-money is to be paid by instalments and has been placed in liquidation by its directors on account of its inability to meet its obligations, and has also been unable to find a purchaser of the land, the vendor is entitled under article 1,092 of the Civil Code to bring an action for the whole balance of purchase-money before the stipulated time for payment arrives. Kensington Land Co. v. Canada Industrial Co., 72 L. J. P.C. 66; [1903] A.C. 213; 88 L. T. 711—P.C.

Temperance Act—Construction.]—By section 15 of the Canada Temperance Act, 1864, "every prosecution shall be commenced within three months after the alleged offence." By section 17, "Two or more offences by the same party may be included in any such complaint"; but the maximum penalty in such case is one hundred dollars:—Held, that the effect of the two sections is not that a fine of one hundred dollars is to cover all the offences committed within three months of the complaint, and that section 17 is permissive, and not imperative. Wentworth v. Mathieu, 69 L. J. P.C. 11; [1900] A.C. 212; 82 L. T. 161—P.C.

(b) BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Corporation—Roads and Bridges—Adoption by Corporation—Negligence—Liability.]—Where a statute enacts that roads and bridges are originally vested in the Province, but may be adopted by a municipality—no special form of adoption, however, being necessary—acts done and authority exercised by a corporation in respect of such roads and bridges will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be taken as proof of adoption. Victoria Corporation v.

Patterson; Victoria Corporation v. Lang, 68 L. J. P.C. 128; [1899] A.C. 615; 81 L. T. 270—P.C.

A bridge within the limits of the appellant corporation gave way and persons were drowned. The jury found that the proximate cause of the accident was the defective condition of a beam into which, some years previously, an officer of the corporation had bored holes. There was evidence that for a considerable time the corporation had undertaken the care and management of the bridge:—Held, as matter of legal inference from the facts found, that the corporation had adopted the bridge, and were, therefore, liable for damages in respect of the accident. Ib.

Electoral Law—Exclusion of Japanese from Franchise—Competence of Provincial Legislature—Naturalisation.—Although by section 91, sub-section 25 of the British North America Act, 1867, the subject of “naturalisation and aliens” is exclusively reserved for the Parliament of the Dominion, the consequences of either alienage or naturalisation are not so reserved, and it is within the competence of a Provincial Legislature to exclude aliens from the franchise, each province having, by section 92, sub-section 1, the power of making laws in respect of its constitution. Union Colliery Co. of British Columbia v. Bryden (68 L. J. P.C. 118; [1899] A.C. 580) distinguished. Vancouver City Collector of Voters or Cunningham v. Tomey Homma, 72 L. J. P.C. 23; [1903] A.C. 151; 87 L. T. 572—P.C.

Land—Conflicting Claims to Public Lands—Transfer of Lands in British Columbia to Canada.—Held, on the evidence, that certain land called Deadmah’s Island, lying on the coast of British Columbia, was originally and was subsequently maintained as a military reserve, remained accordingly Imperial property at the time of the British North America Act, 1867, and was transferred to the Dominion by the Home Government by a despatch in 1884. Att.-Gen. of British Columbia v. Att.-Gen. of Canada, 75 L. J. P.C. 114; [1906] A.C. 552; 95 L. T. 571—P.C.

Grant of Mines and Minerals—Grant by Dominion Government—Subsequent Statutory Grant of Same Land by Provincial Government.—A grant of land was made by the Dominion Government in 1887 to the respondents, a company incorporated by an Act of British Columbia. The land had been vested in the Dominion Government by a Provincial Act of 1888. The same land was granted in 1904 under a Provincial Act of 1904 to the appellant. Under the Act of 1904 any settler who had occupied or improved land within the area in question before the Provincial Act therein mentioned of 1888, and fulfilled the conditions there specified, was entitled to a free grant thereof. The appellant was such a settler and had fulfilled the statutory conditions:—Held, that the appellant’s title, including the mines and minerals, superseded that of the respondents, and that the British Columbia Legislature had power to enact the statute of 1904. McGregor v. Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, 76 L. J. P.C. 85; [1907] A.C. 462; 97 L. T. 223—P.C.

Revenue—Income Tax—Payment by Results.]

—Under the Assessment Act, 1897, income tax is chargeable on sums exceeding one thousand dollars in respect of all profits and gains derived from personal exertions, whether such profits and gains are fixed or fluctuating, certain or precarious; the returns to be made under section 32 (e) being on “income, whether derivable from salary or otherwise.” Att.-Gen. of British Columbia v. Ostrum, 73 L. J. P.C. 11; [1904] A.C. 144; 89 L. T. 509; 20 T. L. R. 64—P.C.

Private Act—General Act—“Unrecorded water.”—Private Acts conferring special rights and imposing special obligations for special purposes are not overruled by general legislation, the application of which might interfere with the rights granted and the obligations imposed by the private Acts. Esquimalt Waterworks Co. v. City of Victoria Corporation, 76 L. J. P.C. 75 [1907] A.C. 499; 97 L. T. 492; 23 T. L. R. 762—P.C.

By section 2 of the British Columbia Water Clauses Consolidation Act, 1897, “Unrecorded water shall mean all water . . . not held under or used in accordance with a record under this Act, or under the Acts repealed hereby . . . and shall include all water for the time being unappropriated or unoccupied, or not used for a beneficial purpose.”—Held, that water which has been ascertained and appropriated and by private Acts vested in a corporation for the discharge of obligations which might on due notice be imposed upon the corporation, but have not yet been imposed, is not “unrecorded water” within the meaning of the Act. Ib.

Yukon Territorial Act—Final Judgment.—In an action by executors against the appellant to recover certain sums of money due to their estate, the Judge of the Territorial Court, at the request of the plaintiffs, selected one of the items, and adjudicated on the evidence taken that the action in respect thereof be dismissed:—Held, that this was, within the meaning of the Yukon Territorial Act, 1899, s. 8, a final judgment in respect thereof, notwithstanding that the remaining items in suit were referred and the costs were reserved. No appeal therefrom to the British Columbia Court lay after the expiration of twenty days. McDonald v. Belcher, 73 L. J. P.C. 91; [1904] A.C. 429; 90 L. T. 735—P.C.

(c) MANITOBA.

Swamp Lands—Transfer to Manitoba—Date of Vesting.—By section 4 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1886, c. 47, s. 4, “All Crown lands in Manitoba which are shewn to the satisfaction of the Dominion Government to be swamp lands shall be transferred to the Province, and enure wholly to its benefit and uses”:—Held, that such lands became vested in the Province not from the date of the statute, but from that of actual transfer. Att.-Gen. for Manitoba v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, 73 L. J. P.C. 100; [1904] A.C. 799; 91 L. T. 300; 20 T. L. R. 769—P.C.

(d) NEWFOUNDLAND.

Whaling Industry Act, 1902—Duty—Receipt—Licence.—A receipt for a licence duty payable under the Whaling Industry Act, 1902, and signed by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is not the equivalent of an actual licence, which must be granted by the Governor in Council; and where the actual licence which is expressed to supersede the receipt is for a narrower area than that which is specified in the application, there is no obligation on the Government and no implied contract to grant a licence co-extensive with the application. Newfoundland Steam Whaling Co. v. Newfoundland Government, 73 L. J. P.C. 69; [1904] A.C. 399; 91 L. T. 153; 20 T. L. R. 566—P.C.

(e) NOVA SCOTIA.

Practice—Certiorari—Special Leave to Appeal—Canada Temperance Acts.—The Canada Temperance Act, 1886, empowers the tribunal thereby constituted, "before whom any prosecution for an offence" against the Act "is brought" to issue a search warrant and make a destruction order as therein described. The Canada Temperance Amendment Act, 1888, re-enacted this provision, with the omission of the words referring to a prosecution:—Held, in a case where a search warrant had been issued and a destruction order made without any previous prosecution, that a writ of certiorari could not be issued to bring the warrant and order into Court, and that the case was not one in which special leave to appeal ought to be granted. Townsend v. Cox, 76 L. J. P.C. 98; [1907] A.C. 514; 97 L. T. 620—P.C.

(f) ONTARIO.

Assessment—Real Estate—Electric Cars.—The electric cars and apparatus and plant of a tramway company are not assessable as real estate under an Act which includes under the terms "land," "real property," and "real estate" things "erected upon or affixed to the land, and all machinery or other things so fixed to any building as to form in law part of the realty." Kirkpatrick v. Bank of Montreal (2 Ont. L. R. 113) disapproved. Toronto Railway v. Toronto Corporation, 73 L. J. P.C. 120; [1904] A.C. 809; 91 L. T. 541; 20 T. L. R. 774—P.C.

Appointment of Queen's Counsel—Patents of Precedence.—By the combined effect of the British North America Act, 1867, and the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1877, c. 139, it is competent to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to appoint Queen's Counsel and to grant patents of precedence for the province to members of the provincial Bar. Att.-Gen. for Canada v. Att.-Gen. for Ontario, 67 L. J. P.C. 17; [1898] A.C. 247; 77 L. T. 539—P.C.

Observations on the appointment of Queen's Counsel and the grant of patents of precedence in England. Ib.

Contract—Payments in Arrear—Interest.—By the Ontario Judicature Act, 1897, s. 113, "interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law or in which it has been usual for a jury to allow it." The effect of this enactment is that in all cases where, in the opinion of the Court, the payment of a just debt has been improperly withheld, and it seems to be fair and equitable that the party in default should make compensation by payment of interest, it is incumbent upon the Court to allow interest for such time and at such rate as the Court may think right. Toronto Railway v. Toronto City, 75 L. J. P.C. 86; [1906] A.C. 117; 93 L. T. 646; 22 T. L. R. 32—P.C.

Common School Fund—Rights and Liabilities of Provinces inter se—Arbitration—Jurisdiction of Arbitrators.—A Common School Fund for the purpose of education was established by an Act of the old Province of Canada of 1850, and lands were set apart in what is now the Province of Ontario for the purposes of the fund. Questions having arisen between the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec in respect of the administration of the fund, arbitrators were appointed under statutes of the Dominion and of the Provinces to consider (inter alia)—first, the ascertainment and determination of the amount of the principal of the fund and the method of computing interest; and secondly, the amount for which Ontario was liable, and also the value of the school lands which had not yet been sold. In an action by Quebec against Ontario a claim was made for a specific sum representing the uncollected purchase-moneys of lands sold by Ontario to which no title had as yet been granted:—Held, that the claim, being in effect against a trustee for wilful neglect and default, was not within the submission to arbitration. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for Quebec, 72 L. J. P.C. 9; 87 L. T. 453—P.C.

Indian Reserves—Proprietary Rights of Province—Choice and Location of Lands Appropriated.—Section 91, sub-section 24 of the British North America Act, 1867, by which the Parliament of Canada has exclusive legislative authority over "Indians and Lands reserved for the Indians," does not vest in the Government of the Dominion any proprietary rights in such lands or power by legislation to interfere therewith in infringement of the proprietary rights of the province in which the lands are situated. Ontario Mining Co. v. Seybold, 72 L. J. P.C. 5; [1903] A.C. 73; 87 L. T. 449—P.C.

The choice and location of lands to be appropriated as Indian reserves can only be effected by the joint action of the Provincial and Dominion Governments. But when such lands are surrendered by the Indians, the result is to vest them in the Crown for the beneficial use of the province whose grantees' title prevails over the title purported to be granted by the Dominion. St. Catherine's Milling and Lumber Co. v. Reg. (58 L. J. P.C. 54; 14 App. Cas. 46) followed. Ib.

Unauthorised Acquiescence of Officials.—A province cannot be bound by the unauthorised acts of officers of departments. Ib.

Lease Granted by Municipality—Exemption from Taxation—Covenant in Lease—Liability of Lessee.—By section 7 of the Ontario Assessment Act, 1892, exemption from taxation is conferred upon property belonging to a municipality "but not when occupied by any person as tenant or lessee." By section 20 taxes may be recovered from either the owner, tenant, or occupier, saving his recourse against any other person:—Held, that the lessee of land belonging to a municipality was liable to pay taxes without recourse to the corporation, and that the latter were entitled to have a covenant inserted in the lease for the payment of taxes by the lessee. Canadian-Pacific Railway v. Toronto Corporation, 74 L. J. P.C. 15; [1905] A.C. 33; 91 L. T. 703; 21 T. L. R. 44—P.C.

Patent — Expiry — “Foreign patent.”—By section 8 of the Canadian Patent Act, 1892, “if a foreign patent exists the Canadian patent shall expire at the earliest date on which any foreign patent for the same invention expires”:—Held, that the expiration of the Canadian patent takes effect if there be co-existence at any time between the Canadian and the foreign patent, and that it is not necessary that there should be such co-existence either at the date of the application for or the date of the grant of the Canadian patent. A British patent is, within the meaning of the Act, a foreign patent. Dominion Cotton Mills Co. v. General Engineering Co. of Ontario, 71 L. J. P.C. 119; [1902] A.C. 570; 87 L. T. 186—P.C.

Agreement between Corporation and Railway Company — Extension of Lines — Powers and Rights of Corporation and Railway.—The respondent company, under an agreement with the Toronto Corporation, confirmed by an Act of Parliament, acquired for a term of years the property in and the right to work the street railways of the city:—Held, on the construction of the agreement, that neither the corporation nor the company had any street railway powers within new territorial additions to the city made during the term. Toronto City v. Toronto Railway; Toronto Railway v. Toronto City, 76 L. J. P.C. 57; [1907] A.C. 315; 96 L. T. 794; 23 T. L. R. 480—P.C.

The agreement provided that the company should be required to lay down such extensions and new lines as might be recommended by the city engineer and approved by the city council, and that on the company's failure to do so the privilege of laying down such new lines and extensions might be granted by the council to any other person or company, and that the company in such case should have no right to compensation against the city:—Held, that the only remedy of the corporation for failure on the company's part to lay down such new lines was the right to grant the privilege to another person or company; that it was for the company, and not for the engineer or council, to determine what new lines should be laid, what routes adopted and stopping places chosen on streets within the city as existing at the date of the agreement. Ib.

Railway — Enforcing Mortgage — Power of Sale.—A railway which is subject to the legislation of the Dominion of Canada can, under the provisions of the Dominion Railway Acts, 1883 and 1888, be sold in a suit by the trustees for bond-holders to enforce a mortgage on the railway company's railway lands and franchises. Central Ontario Railway v. Trusts and Guarantee Co., 74 L. J. P.C. 116; [1905] A.C. 576; 93 L. T. 317; 21 T. L. R. 732—P.C.

Semble, a railway the powers of which are regulated exclusively by the law of a province cannot be so sold. Ib.

Sale of Gas Works to Municipality—“Works, plant, appliances, and property of the company used for light, heat, and power purposes”—Franchise and Goodwill—Expropriation—Voluntary Agreement to Purchase.—By statute the appellant company was protected against compulsory purchase by the respondent corporation until 1911; but by an agreement made in 1896 it was provided that, upon the city giving one year's notice, it should have the option of purchasing and acquiring all the works, plants, appliances, and property of the company used for light, heat, and power purposes, both gas and electric, at a price to be fixed by arbitration, and that, upon the acquisition by the city of the works, plant, and property, the company should cease to carry on its business. The city having exercised its option,—Held, that, in ascertaining the price to be paid by the city, the arbitrators were right in allowing nothing in respect of the earning power or franchise of the company and in refusing to add 10 per cent. to the price, inasmuch as it was not a case of expropriation, but of transfer of property under voluntary agreement. Kingston Light, Heat, and Power Co. v. Kingston Corporation, 20 T. L. R. 448—P.C.

Teachers, Exemption of, from Examination.—The exemption conferred by the Ontario Separate Schools Act, 1897, s. 36, upon “persons qualified by law as teachers” in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec from the examination imposed on public school teachers generally is applicable only to the individuals who were so qualified at the passing of the British North America Act, 1867. Brothers of the Christian Schools v. Minister of Education for Ontario, 76 L. J. P.C. 22; [1907] A.C. 69; 95 L. T. 630; 23 T. L. R. 29—P.C.

Ultra Vires—Provincial Legislation—Criminal Law and Procedure—Lord's Day Profanation.—Section 91, sub-section 27 of the British North America Act, 1867, reserves, among the exclusive powers of the Dominion Parliament, “The Criminal Law . . . including the procedure in criminal matters,” and under this enactment the Ontario Lord's Day Profanation Act, which imposes penalties for breach of its provisions, was beyond the competence of the Provincial Legislature. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Hamilton Street Railway, 72 L. J. P.C. 105; [1903] A.C. 524; 89 L. T. 107—P.C.

(g) QUEBEC.

“Commercial matters”—Stock Exchange.—The purchase and sales of shares by stockbrokers on the instructions of a client who is not himself a dealer are “commercial matters” within the meaning of the Quebec Civil Code, and proof thereof may be made by oral testimony. Forget v. Baatter, 69 L. J. P.C. 101; [1900] A.C. 467; 82 L. T. 510—P.C.

“Commencement of proof in writing”—Evidence.—The deposition of a party to an action that he employed the other party to do “something” for him is a sufficient “commencement of proof in writing” to render admissible oral evidence to show what the actual transactions were. Ib.

Secondary Evidence — Absence of Notice to Produce.—Secondary evidence of the written records of transactions is not made inadmissible by the absence of notice to produce such records, and on failure of proof from the Civil Code or Code of Procedure or otherwise of a practice in the Quebec Courts to require such notice, no objection based on the absence thereof can be entertained. Ib.

Common School Fund—Rights and Liabilities of Provinces inter se—Arbitration—Jurisdiction of Arbitrators.—A Common School Fund for the purpose of education was established by an Act of the old Province of Canada of 1850, and lands were set apart in what is now the Province of Ontario for the purposes of the fund. Questions having arisen between the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec in respect of the administration of the fund, arbitrators were appointed under statutes of the Dominion and of the Provinces to consider (inter alia)—first, the ascertainment and determination of the amount of the principal of the fund and the method of computing interest; and secondly, the amount for which Ontario was liable, and also the value of the school lands which had not yet been sold. In an action by Quebec against Ontario a claim was made for a specific sum representing the uncollected purchase-moneys of lands sold by Ontario to which no title had as yet been granted:—Held, that the claim being in effect against a trustee for wilful neglect and default, was not within the submission to arbitration. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for Quebec, 72 L. J. P.C. 9; [1903] A.C. 39; 87 L. T. 453—P.C.

Contract by Correspondence — Construction—Agent.—The respondent by letter agreed "to sell and convey" certain property without mention of the purchaser, and gave "reasonable and sufficient time" to the appellant "for correspondence and communication with foreign and near correspondents . . . pending the arrangements by you for completing sale," offering "Two and a half per cent. commission payable to you on the said sum after completing sale." The appellant simply accepted "the offer and agreement therein":—Held, that the letters constituted an agency and not a vendor-and-purchaser agreement, under which the appellant was not regarded as himself the purchaser, but was to find a purchaser and earn a commission. Livingstone v. Ross, 70 L. J. P.C. 58; [1901] A.C. 327; 85 L. T. 382—P.C.

Crown Grant—Seignior—Exclusive Right of Fishing.—The purchaser of a seignior in whom were vested all the rights and privileges conferred by the original concession from the King of France, "avec droit de chasse, pesche et traite avec les sauvages dans toute l'étendue de la dite concession," is not entitled without more special words to the exclusive right of fishing along the foreshore of the lands granted. Cabot v. Att.-Gen. of Quebec, 77 L. J. P.C. 11; [1907] A.C. 511; 97 L. T. 618; 23 T. L. R. 762—P.C.

Husband and Wife—Claims made as Creditor of Wife's Estate and of Daughter—Evidence.—The appellant claimed large sums as creditor of the estate of his wife, who died in 1893, and of his daughter. The wife by her will gave all her property to the respondent, her daughter. The appellant first launched his claims in 1894; but the allegations on which they were based were wholly inconsistent not only with the sworn statement which he made on his insolvency in 1876, in which his wife was entered as a creditor, but also with the statement made in 1893, for revenue purposes, in respect of his wife's will, under his instructions. The only evidence in support of the claims were his own statements in the pleadings:—Held, that the claims could not be sustained. Eddy v. Eddy, 69 L. J. P.C. 58; [1900] A.C. 299—P.C.

— "Dons modiques."—By the law of Quebec no gift beyond dons modiques is permitted from a husband to a wife. The Court of Queen's Bench held that articles of the value of between 5,000 and 6,000 dollars, given during a married life of forty years, were such modest ones as the law would not interfere with, and their Lordships declined to dissent from those who dwelt in the society which the law affected. Ib.

— Separation as to Property—Mortgage of Wife's Property—Money Used for Husband's Purposes—Validity of Mortgage.—The words "for her husband" in article 1801 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, which invalidates any obligation binding her separate property "for her husband," mean generally in any way for the husband's purposes as distinguished from those of the wife, and ignorance on the part of the obligee cannot avail him if in fact she bound herself for her husband. Trust and Loan Co. of Canada v. Gauthier, 73 L. J. P.C. 5; [1904] A.C. 94; 89 L. T. 453; 20 T. L. R. 15—P.C.

Insolvent Traders—Judicial Abandonment of Property — Landlord's Preferential Rights — Statute—Retroactive Effect of Legislation—Code of Civil Procedure.—The principle that legislation is presumed not to be retroactive cannot, in the case of an alteration in the general law, be extended to all the consequences of the original enactment. Thus it does not operate to preserve the privileges of the grantor of a lease in respect of the judicial abandonment of property by a trader where those privileges have been curtailed by legislation subsequent to the date of the lease. Ross v. Beaudry, 74 L. J. P.C. 106; [1905] A.C. 570; 93 L. T. 315; 21 T. L. R. 735—P.C.

By article 2,005 of the Civil Procedure Code, in the case of the liquidation of property in the Province of Quebec abandoned by an insolvent trader, the lessor's privilege extended to the whole of the rent due and certain further rent as therein specified. This article was amended by 61 Vict. c. 46, and this privilege was restricted to twelve months' rent due, with the same additions as in the original enactment. A lease was granted before the amendment, and the lessee judicially abandoned his property after the amendment:—Held, that the lessor's privilege was defined by the amendment, and not by the original law. Ib.

Land — Adjoining Owners — Flow of Water — Injury Caused by Works — Works Executed by Lessee and Intending Purchaser—Liability as between Owner and Lessee.—Where the owner of land by a deed of lease embodying an agreement of sale gives possession of the land to another, who so deals therewith as to cause injury to the land of an adjoining proprietor, the latter is not entitled as against such first owner to damages or to an order to remove the cause of damage. Kieffer v. Le Séminaire de Québec, 72 L. J. P.C. 18; [1903] A.C. 85; 87 L. T. 484—P.C.

Municipal Corporation—By-law Guaranteeing Debentures—Approval by Ratepayers and Lieutenant-Governor.—By section 7 (c) of the Stadacona Water, Light, and Power Co.'s Act, 1897, any contract between a municipal corporation and a company for works authorised by the Act shall, if it involve "financial obligations" on the part of the corporation, only be valid when the by-law authorising such contract has been approved by the ratepayers and the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. By section 37 a corporation may guarantee by by-law the bonds of the company, provided that it be thereto authorised by petition of the majority in number and in value of the ratepayers of that portion of the municipality to which the company's operations extend:—Held, that the two sections must be read together, and that a by-law guaranteeing the debentures of the company was invalid, not having been approved by the majority of all the ratepayers and the Lieutenant-Governor, inasmuch as it involved "financial obligations," that term not being confined to direct financial obligations incurred by the corporation's constructing works itself. Hanson v. Grand'mère Corporation, 73 L. J. P.C. 105; [1904] A.C. 789; 91 L. T. 302; 20 T. L. R. 772—P.C.

Assessment Roll—Petition for Annulment of Assessment—Prescription—Interruption of Prescription.—By a special roll of the appellant city half the costs of street improvements was, in February, 1895, assessed on the proprietors of property on either side of the street. In the following August a number of proprietors filed a petition that the roll should be set aside on the ground of irregularity. The city did not answer or plead to the petition till October, 1899. Judgment was given for the city in June, 1900, and affirmed on appeal in June, 1901. In September, 1902, the lands of the respondents were seized by the sheriff for the amount claimed by the city. The respondents filed an opposition and pleaded prescription. By the city's charter, section 120, the right to recover any assessment is prescribed and extinguished unless within three years an action has been commenced for recovery thereof. By section 144 a contestation of an assessment roll must be brought within six months of the assessment:—Held, that the amount of the assessment became due on the filing of the roll; that the city's right of action was not suspended during the pendency of a contestation, and that therefore the right of the city to recover the amount was prescribed and extinguished. Montreal City v. Cantin, 75 L. J. P.C. 41; [1906] A.C. 241; 94 L. T. 357; 22 T. L. R. 364—P.C.

Negligence—Action for—Judgment or New Trial—Evidence—Function of a Court of Appeal—Master and Servant—Injury to Workman.—The function of the Court of Review in the Province of Quebec is, under the Civil Procedure Code, where an application is made for judgment or a new trial, the same as that of the Court of Appeal in England. It is not its province to re-try the question, or to set aside the verdict if it is one which the jury might reasonably have found, even though a different result might have been more satisfactory to the Judge at the trial or to the Court of Appeal. McArthur v. Dominion Cartridge Co., 74 L. J. P.C. 80; [1905] A.C. 72; 91 L. T. 698; 53 W. R. 305; 21 T. L. R. 47—P.C.

The proposition laid down in certain French decisions which are not binding in Quebec—that in an action for damages for negligence resulting in injury to the plaintiff there must be proof of a fault which certainly caused the injury—is not one of universal application. Id.

Private Association—Charge against Member—Opportunity of Defence—Montreal Police Benevolent and Pension Society—Rules—"Obliged to resign"—Claim to Gratuity or Pension—Rules of Society, 23, 45.—By rule 45 of the respondent association any member entitled by length of service to a gratuity or pension, who is dismissed from the force or obliged to resign, is entitled to have his case considered by the board of directors, and his right to a gratuity or pension determined by a majority of the board:—Held, that where a constable has been suspended, an enquiry has been ordered, and he sends in his resignation, he has been "obliged to resign" within the meaning of the rule. But held also, that the board in such a case must act on judicial principles, and give the constable an opportunity of defending himself. They cannot leave the question to a committee of their body, and then decide by a majority of the members of the whole association in general meeting on the committee's finding. Lapointe v. L'Association de Bienfaisance et de Retraite de la Police de Montréal, 75 L. J. P.C. 78; [1906] A.C. 535; 95 L. T. 479; 22 T. L. R. 768—P.C.

Railway—Damages for Death of Servant—Right of Action by Deceased's Representatives—Contracting Out by Deceased—Indemnity or Satisfaction.—By article 1056 of the Quebec Civil Code, where a person dies in consequence of the commission of an offence or quasi-offence without having obtained indemnity or satisfaction, his wife or relations have a right to recover damages from the guilty person:—Held, that, as in Robinson v. Canadian-Pacific Railway (61 L. J. P.C. 79; [1892] A.C. 481), article 1056 was decided to have conferred an independent and personal right of action on the widow and relatives, and not, as in Lord Campbell's Act, a right conferred on the representatives of the deceased only, decisions under Lord Campbell's Act are inapplicable to cases under article 1056. Reg. v. Grenier (30 Can. S.C. R. 42) overruled. Miller v. Grand Trunk Railway, 75 L. J. P.C. 45; [1906] A.C. 187; 94 L. T. 231; 22 T. L. R. 297—P.C.

The appellant was the widow of a servant of the respondent company who was killed through the company's negligence. He was a member of the company's provident fund, which included insurance on death; but under the rules the company did not contribute to the insurance. By one of them, the member, in consideration of the company's contribution to the fund, was to have no claim in case of injury or death:—Held, that the appellant was not precluded from recovering damages on behalf of herself and children, inasmuch as the insurance money was no "indemnity or satisfaction" under article 1056, as the company did not contribute to the insurance fund, and the death bore no relation to the "offence or quasi-offence," since the insurance money would have equally had to be paid if the deceased had died a natural death. Id.

— Street Railway—Contract between City and Railway—Percentage of Earnings Due to City—Outside Municipalities.—By article 1018 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, "All the clauses of a contract are interpreted the one by the other, giving to each the meaning derived from the entire Act." By a contract between a railway company and the City of Montreal the company was to pay to the city a certain percentage of the gross earnings "of its said railway"; it was to establish lines of railway "in the city," in the streets thereafter mentioned, and in such other streets as should be determined by the city council; in the case of annexation of outside municipalities the system was to be extended through such annexed territory. It was also provided that the company was every quarter to render to the city "a true and just account . . . of the whole of their gross earnings" and to allow inspection of the books and accounts by a person appointed by the city council. Outside municipalities had independent powers, and with them in case of extension separate arrangements had to be made:—Held, that the city was only entitled to a percentage of earnings within the city, and that its general power of inspection was only given to enable a proper adjustment of earnings. Montreal Street Railway v. City of Montreal, 75 L. J. P.C. 9; [1906] A.C. 100; 93 L. T. 678; 22 T. L. R. 60—P.C.

Succession Duty—Movable Property—Domicil of Testator.—The succession duty imposed on movables by the Quebec Succession Duty Acts are payable only on property which the successor claims under the law of Quebec, and are not payable on a succession devolving under the law of another province. Lambe v. Manuel, 72 L. J. P.C. 17; [1908] A.C. 68; 87 L. T. 460—P.C.

— Testator Domiciled in Ontario Owning Property in Quebec.—The Quebec Succession Duty Acts only impose a tax on property claimed under or by virtue of Quebec law, and not upon movable property locally situated in Quebec, but forming part of a succession devolving under the law of Ontario. Lambe v. Manuel, 87 L. T. 460—P.C.

Adjacent Owners—Injury by Works on Land—Damages—Right of Action.—The appellant and the respondents were owners of adjacent pieces of land. The respondents demised their land to B. under an agreement to sell, and B. took possession of the land and executed some works on it for his own benefit as an intending purchaser, and not for or by the direction of the respondents. The effect of such works was injurious to the appellant's land:—Held, that the appellant had no right of action against the respondents for damages for the nuisance to his land, and could not compel them to abate such nuisance. Kieffer v. Le Séminaire de Québec, 87 L. T. 484—P.C.

Taxation—Educational Institution—Exemption.—Land owned by an educational institution, but not attached to any school or house of education, though parts of it were used for purposes of recreation by scholars and teachers, and from which a profit was derived,—Held, not to be entitled to the exemption from taxation conferred by article 712 of the Municipal Code of Quebec upon property of educational institutions not possessed solely by them for the purposes of revenue. Séminaire de Québec v. Limouliou Corporation, 68 L. J. P.C. 34; [1899] A.C. 288; 80 L. T. 331—P.C.

Transfer of Debt—"Signification"—Notarial Act.—Notice of the sale or transfer of a debt, accompanied by a copy of the transfer, is sufficient "signification" within the meaning of article 1,571 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, without the intervention of a notary. The institution by the transferee of an action against the debtor to recover the debt is of itself a sufficient signification of the act of sale, and there is nothing in the Code which requires signification of the sale and a delivery of a copy of the act of sale to be made at once and the same time. Bank of Toronto v. St. Lawrence Fire Insurance Co., 72 L. J. P.C. 14; 87 L. T. 462—P.C.

Water Company—Compulsory Powers of Appropriating Property—Procedure—Trespass—Injunction.—A public body with compulsory powers of appropriating a person's land or water rights or of acquiring some easement over his property cannot take land or interfere with the free use by the owner of his property without giving to the landowner notice to treat for some definite subject-matter. On failure by such body to comply with statutory directions a landowner whose property has been injuriously affected retains his ordinary right of action for trespass, and where the damages are of a substantial character is entitled to an injunction. In such a case there is no discretion in the Court to award damages only in lieu of an injunction. Saunby v. City of London Water Commissioners, 75 L. J. P.C. 25; [1906] A.C. 110; 93 L. T. 648; 22 T. L. R. 37—P.C.

6. CEYLON.

Arbitration—Judicial Order of Reference—Power to Withdraw.—Under the Civil Procedure Code of Ceylon it is not competent to either of the parties in an action to withdraw from a judicial order of reference granted by the Court on the application and with the consent of both parties; an arbitration in an action being a judicial proceeding from beginning to end, and the award having the effect of a judicial decree. Aitken v. Fernando, 72 L. J. P.C. 63; [1908] A.C. 200; 88 L. T. 179—P.C.

Decree for Default—Application to set Aside Decree—"Good and sufficient evidence"—Lunatic not so Found by Inquisition—Order of Master in Lunacy in England.—The order of a Master in Lunacy in England is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein, and if uncontradicted ought to be regarded as sufficient evidence, being made by a competent tribunal in a matter within its jurisdiction, not only in this country, but in all his Majesty's dominions. Harvey v. Regem, 70 L. J. P.C. 107; [1901] A.C. 601; 84 L. T. 849—P.C.

Such an order in such circumstances is "good and sufficient evidence" within chapter xii. article 87 of the Ceylon Civil Procedure Code of the inability of a defendant by reason of accident or misfortune to appear and shew cause against a decree absolute for default. Ib.

Intestate Estate—Suit for Partition or Sale—No Administrator Appointed.—The provision of section 547 of the Ceylon Civil Procedure Code, 1889, that no action is maintainable for the recovery of property included in the estate of a deceased person when such estate exceeds 1,000 rupees in value, without the grant of probate or administration, is obligatory, and cannot be waived by agreement. An action in which it is sought to recover a share of an intestate's property, which is alleged to have been irregularly alienated, is an action for the recovery of property, although in form it may be an action for partition only. Ponnamma v. Arumogam, 74 L. J. P.C. 102; [1905] A.C. 383; 92 L. T. 740; 21 T. L. R. 524—P.C.

Will—Attestation—Non-notarial Will—Unofficial Presence of Notary.—By the law of Ceylon a will may be attested either—first, in the presence of a licensed notary public and two or more witnesses; or secondly, "if no notary shall be present," in the presence of five or more witnesses:—Held, that the presence of a notary who does not act in an official capacity does not vitiate the execution of a will attested by five witnesses. Perera v. Perera, 70 L. J. P.C. 46; [1901] A.C. 354; 84 L. T. 371—P.C.

7. CHANNEL ISLANDS.

Public Right of Way—Dedication to the Public—Minority—Possessory Action—Limitation of Time.—In the Channel Islands the doctrine of dedication to the public is unknown, and a right of way, whether public or private, must be proved by grant or prescription. Godfray v. Sark (Constables), 71 L. J. P.C. 116; [1902] A.C. 534; 87 L. T. 3—P.C.

The conveyance of land and of rights of user and occupation of land is a matter of record, and a "contrat," not necessarily in writing, is acknowledged by the parties before and attested by the Royal Court, and a minute embodying its terms is registered. Ib.

There is no Court which can decree specific performance of a private contract or which administers the English equitable doctrines of part performance, acquiescence by the vendor in the expenditure of money by the purchaser, or other similar equities. Ib.

The law and custom of Normandy, by which minors must assert in Court "les saisines de leurs antecessours," applies only to "actions possessoires," to recover possession of which the plaintiff has been unjustly deprived, and not to petitory or real actions in which the title is in issue:—Held, that a right of way of which the public user had not been enjoyed for more than thirty years was not established. Ib.

Guernsey—Local Authority—Statutory Right—Obstruction to Public Place—Right to Remove Obstruction.—The appellants, in exercise of an alleged statutory right, placed their wires across the streets of which the respondents were the duly appointed guardians. The appellants failed to prove the existence of the statutory right, and the respondents removed the wires, whereupon the appellants brought an action for damages:—Held, that, even apart from evidence of the respondents' power to prohibit the stretching of wires across the street, or to remove them if placed without their consent, the action failed for want of proof of authority so to place the wires. National Telephone Co. v. St. Peter Port, Guernsey (Constables), 69 L. J. P.C. 74; [1900] A.C. 317; 82 L. T. 398—P.C.

Jersey—Jurisdiction of Royal Court—Parish—Resolutions of Civil and Ecclesiastical Assemblies—Suit to Annul Resolutions—Laches.—The Royal Court of Jersey has jurisdiction to interfere where the civil assembly of a parish passes a vote for applying the funds under its control to purposes not warranted by law; but an application for the exercise of such jurisdiction must be made with due promptitude. Roberts v. Ercout, 74 L. J. P.C. 28; [1905] A.C. 61; 91 L. T. 809—P.C.

On February 4, 1903, the ecclesiastical assembly of a parish considered an architect's report with respect to necessary repairs of the church. On February 10 the civil assembly, taking cognisance of the proceedings of February 4, authorised the preparation of plans, specifications, and estimates, and the payment by the connetable of the preliminary costs. On August 12 the architect submitted an estimate, which on August 25 was accepted by the ecclesiastical assembly; and on September 3 the civil assembly voted the amount and resolved to issue a loan, the trésor funds being insufficient. On September 19 the appellant filed his suit against the connetable for a declaration that the vote and resolution for a loan were illegal. The Superior Number, affirming the order of the Inferior Number of the Royal Court, dismissed the suit:—Held, that, as the proceedings formed a continuous sequence from February to September, of each step in which the appellant was aware, he was too late in complaining. Ib.

—Validity of Will—Undue Influence—Evidence of Executors—Evidence of Relations and Parochial Authorities.—In an action to set aside a will on the ground of undue influence and incapacity brought by the principal heir-at-law against the executors and beneficiaries,—Held, first, that by the law of Jersey the evidence of executors was properly excluded; secondly, that the parochial authorities were wrongly added as parties to the action, and that their evidence was inadmissible; thirdly, that the fact that the will was prepared by the executors, who took a beneficial interest themselves, was, in the absence of fraud or dishonesty, no ground for impugning its validity; and fourthly, that on the evidence there was no fraud or coercion or want of testamentary capacity. Baudains v. Richardson, 75 L. J. P.C. 57; [1906] A.C. 169; 94 L. T. 290; 22 T. L. R. 333—P.C.

— Settlement of Real Estate during Joint Lives of Husband and Wife—Separation of the Spouses “quant aux biens”—Claim of Husband's Heir.—The rule of the law of Jersey which invalidates any gift of real estate by a husband, stante matrimonio, in favour of his wife, to the prejudice of his lawful heir, has no application to a case in which the wife's father conveys lands to the husband and wife, in consideration of an annuity paid to himself, by a deed under which the spouses take a joint interest during their joint lives and the survivor takes the whole. Such a deed is not a contract of sale and purchase, but a family arrangement, and is the source and measure of the rights acquired by each of the spouses. Broomer v. Arthur, 67 L. J. P.C. 148; [1898] A.C. 777—P.C.

S. CHINA.

Shanghai—Land Regulations—Surrender of Private Land for Public Purposes—Extension of Lines of Road—New Lines of Road—Roads “already defined”—By a regulation having the force of law it was enacted that “due provision shall be made for the extension of the lines of roads at present laid down.” Steps were prescribed for determining “what new lines of road are necessary”; and all land subsequently rented was to be held on the terms of the renter's surrendering any of his land “required for such roads”:—Held, that the powers conferred were not restricted to the lineal or lateral extension of existing roads, but included all roads enlarging the means of traffic. Shanghai Corporation v. McMurray, 69 L. J. P.C. 19; [1900] A.C. 206; 82 L. T. 101—P.C.

The words “already defined” prohibiting appropriation of land for other purposes than those specified, held to include the roads referred to in the whole of the regulation, new roads as well as enlargements of existing roads. Id.

9. GIBRALTAR.

Trial of British Subject for Offence Committed Abroad—Right to a Jury—Morocco.—By the Morocco Order in Council, Order III. sub-s. 11, the Supreme Court (that is, the Court of Gibraltar) has in all criminal matters in which the defendant is a British subject an original jurisdiction concurrent with the Court of Morocco, subject to any rules of procedure made under the Order (and none such have been made), but in all other respects with all the powers of the Supreme Court independent of the Order. Consequently, when the trial of a person charged with a criminal offence has been transferred from Morocco to Gibraltar, the mode prescribed by the Gibraltar Order must be pursued—that Order making no distinction between cases originally arising in Gibraltar and those brought thither from other places—and the accused is entitled to a trial by jury according to the Gibraltar Order. Spilsbury v. Reg., 68 L. J. P.C. 66; [1899] A.C. 392; 80 L. T. 602; 63 J. P. 691; 19 Cox C.C. 303—P.C.

10. NEW ZEALAND.

Crown Land—Title by Possession against the Crown.—By section 19 of the New Zealand Colonisation Act, 1847, all the lands of the New Zealand Land Co. were, in the events therein described (which happened), “thereupon” to “revert to and become vested in Her Majesty as part of the demesne lands of the Crown in New Zealand.” In 1839 a purchaser obtained from the New Zealand Land Co. a land order in respect of certain allotments, of which the effect was to make him equitable owner, the legal estate being in the company. No conveyance was executed, and in 1850 the company surrendered all its lands in compliance with the Act of 1847. The purchaser died in or before 1851, and thereafter until 1870 the land was left derelict. In 1870 the appellant's predecessor and vendor took possession, and the appellant purchased the land in 1870:—Held, that the effect of the Act of 1847 was that the Crown became not a bare trustee for the purchaser or those claiming under him, but absolute and unqualified owner of the land, subject to no equities, and that the appellant, not having been in possession long enough to acquire title against the Crown, was an intruder. Riddiford v. Regem, 74 L. J. P.C. 37; [1905] A.C. 147; 92 L. T. 247; 21 T. L. R. 265—P.C.

False Trade Description—No Intention to Defraud—Forfeiture of Goods.—Goods imported into New Zealand with a false trade description are liable to forfeiture under section 104 of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1889, incorporating the Customs Law Consolidation Act, 1882, whereby all such goods are liable to seizure and forfeiture, notwithstanding that the owner, having acted innocently, has not committed an offence against the Act in the terms of section 89. Coppen v. Moore (67 L. J. Q.B. 639; [1898] 2 Q.B. 306) approved. Commissioner of Trade and Customs v. Bell, 71 L. J. P.C. 109; [1902] A.C. 563; 87 L. T. 156—P.C.

Licensing—Jurisdiction to Grant Licences—Poll of Electoral District—Poll Declared Invalid.—Where a poll of the electors of a licensing district appointed under the Alcoholic Liquors Sale Control Act, 1895, to determine whether licences are to be continued, diminished, or abolished, has been declared irregular and void, the number of licences is to remain, under section 8, sub-section 4, unchanged until the next licensing poll. Smith v. McArthur, 73 L. J. P.C. 88; [1904] A.C. 389; 90 L. T. 744; 20 T. L. R. 529—P.C.

By the Interpretation Act, 1888, every enactment is to “receive such fair large and liberal construction and interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act.” By section 21 of the Alcoholic Liquors Sale Control Act, 1893, where a statutory district has been abolished or altered and divided into new districts, the poll in force in the original district is to remain in force in the new districts until the time for taking the next triennial poll:—Held, that the Interpretation Act makes this section applicable to one or more new districts constituted out of two or more previously existing districts. Id.

Land Legislation—Registered Title.—A registered title to land in New Zealand is, in the absence of fraud, conclusive, and defects in procedure cannot affect such title. The fraud which must be proved in order to invalidate the title of a registered purchaser for value, whether he buys from a prior registered owner or from a person claiming under a title certified under the Native Land Acts, must be brought home to the person whose registered title is impeached or to his agents. Fraud by persons from whom he claims does not affect him unless knowledge of it is brought home to him or his agents. Assets Co. v. Mere Roihi and others, 74 L. J. P.C. 49; [1905] A.C. 176; 92 L. T. 397; 21 T. L. R. 311—P.C.

— Native Titles—Crown Lands—Extinction of Native Rights—Power to Sue an Officer of the Crown.—An aggrieved person may sue an officer of the Crown to restrain a threatened act in alleged pursuance of an Act of Parliament, but really outside its limits. The Attorney-General is not a necessary or proper party to such an action. The Courts of New Zealand have under the Native Rights Act, 1865, power to enquire into native title and to ascertain whether or not it has been extinguished according to law. The appellant claimed an interest in part of certain lands which had been declared by the Governor, acting under statutory powers, to be waste lands of the Crown, and were subsequently offered for sale, alleging that the native rights had not been extinguished therein:—Held, that he was entitled to maintain the action. Nireaha Tamaki v. Baker, 70 L. J. P.C. 66; [1901] A.C. 561; 84 L. T. 633—P.C.

— Native Land Court—Jurisdiction—Validation Court.—By the Poututu Jurisdiction Act, 1889, jurisdiction with respect to certain lands was conferred upon the Native Land Court, whose orders and decrees were to be “final and conclusive”:—Held, that the words “final and conclusive” did not exclude the right to a re-hearing, which belonged to the ordinary litigants of the Native Land Court. Barker v. Edger, 67 L. J. P.C. 115; [1898] A.C. 749; 79 L. T. 151—P.C.

By an Act passed in 1892 the Validation Court was constituted, and it was provided that the commencement of proceedings in that Court should operate as a stay of proceedings, affecting the same matters, in all other Courts:—Held, that the commencement of such proceedings did not operate as a stay of proceedings under the Poututu Act. Ib.

— Valuation—Valuer-General's Authority—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court.—Where the freeholder of land has assented to the valuation of the Valuer-General, the leaseholder has no redress, and the jurisdiction and power of the Valuer-General under the Government Valuation of Land Amendment Act, 1900, are not subject to the control of the Supreme Court. Ward v. Att.-Gen. for New Zealand, 76 L. J. P.C. 52; 96 L. T. 280; 23 T. L. R. 297—P.C.

Land in Trust—Numerous Allottees—Beneficial Ownership.—The use of the word “trust” is not always sufficient to create an equitable right or obligation which can be enforced by legal proceedings. Thus, where lands were granted to an individual to be held in trust for an unascertained and practically unascertainable class of loyal natives, no beneficial ownership is conferred on individual members of such a class. Te Teira v. Te Roera Tareha, 71 L. J. P.C. 11; [1902] A.C. 56; 85 L. T. 558—P.C.

Mines—Proclamation Allowing Discharge of Débris into River—Lands Injurious Affected—Compensation—Procedure.—Where, under sections 103 and 109 of the Mining Act, 1898, a proclamation is issued permitting the discharge into a river of débris and waste water from mines, every claim for compensation for injuriously affecting any land in respect of such proclamation must, if not settled by agreement, be determined by a Judge or magistrate as directed by section 233 of the Mining Act, and cannot be treated as undisputed under section 44 of the Public Works Act, 1894, even if no notice be served that the claim is disputed. Heslop v. Minister of Mines for New Zealand, 73 L. J. P.C. 117; [1904] A.C. 781; 91 L. T. 544; 20 T. L. R. 771—P.C.

Municipal Corporation—“Adjacent.”—The word “adjacent” is not one to which a precise and uniform meaning is usually attached. It is not confined to places adjoining, and it includes places close to or near, its application being entirely a question of circumstances. Wellington (City) v. Lower Hutt Borough, 73 L. J. P.C. 80; [1904] A.C. 773; 91 L. T. 539; 20 T. L. R. 712—P.C.

By section 219 of the Municipal Corporation Act, 1900, where the council of any borough desires to construct a bridge which in its opinion will benefit many or all “of the inhabitants of an adjacent borough or county or other district,” and such council is of opinion that such adjacent district should contribute to the cost, the council may apply to the Governor, who may issue a warrant specifying the proportion of the cost to be borne by the adjacent district. The respondents proposed to construct a bridge, and obtained a warrant apportioning part of the cost to the appellant corporation, whose district was six miles distant from the respondents' boundary, and three other local divisions intervened:—The COURT OF APPEAL, by a majority, held that the appellants' district was “adjacent” to that of the respondents, and the JUDICIAL COMMITTEE declined to interfere with the decision. Ib.

Public Authority—Compulsory Purchase—Claim for Compensation—Omission to Challenge Claim within Statutory Period.—By the Public Works Act (New Zealand), 1894, s. 44, where land is required for public purposes, and the owner, in manner prescribed by the statute, has sent in his claim, if the local authority within sixty days of receiving such claim fails to give notice in writing that the claim is not admitted, the claim is to have the effect of an award, and may be enforced under the Act:—Held, that a Court of law has no power to grant relief against the omission to challenge the amount within the time limited. Wellington (Mayor) v. Johnston, 71 L. J. P.C. 73; [1902] A.C. 396; 86 L. T. 538—P.C.

Railways Construction—Retention of Railway as Government Property—Extinction of Debenture-holders' Rights.]—By sections 125 and 126 of the Railways Construction and Land Act, 1881, on events specified therein, including the failure to repay public moneys advanced, the governor is empowered to publish an Order in Council that the railway has become absolutely vested in the Queen. By a special Act of 1884, debentures and the interest payable thereon are to be "a first charge on the entire assets of the company, including the railway and everything pertaining thereto":—Held, that these words only operated to give priority to debenture-holders over the ordinary creditors of the company, and that the title of the Government was not subject to the charge. Coates v. Reg., 69 L. J. P.C. 26; [1900] A.C. 217; 82 L. T. 162—P.C.

Revenue—Company—“Income derived from business”—“Profits derived from or received in New Zealand.”—By sections 51 and 59 of the New Zealand Land and Assessment Act, 1900, the income of a company derived from business and assessable to income tax includes “the profits derived from or received in New Zealand.” The respondent company sends messages from New Zealand to Madras. The Government, which owns the telegraphs in New Zealand, receives the entire charge for each message, deducting the cost of transmission over its own lines, and also of transmission to New South Wales, to the Government of which the balance is paid. The message then travels by successive stages to the point from which it is despatched by the company's cable, and the company receives the balance after deduction of the charges for those stages, which are paid to the Governments concerned. There are no contracts with respect to the company's operations between the New Zealand Government and the company:—Held, that the profits of the company for the conveyance of messages over its own cables were not “derived from or received in New Zealand,” and not liable to income tax. Erichsen v. Last (50 L. J. Q.B. 570; 51 L. J. Q.B. 86; 7 Q.B. D. 12; 8 Q.B. D. 414) distinguished. Income Tax Commissioner for New Zealand v. Eastern Extension Telegraph Co., 75 L. J. P.C. 84; [1906] A.C. 526; 95 L. T. 308; 22 T. L. R. 780—P.C.

Entering Judgment—New Trial.]—By rule 5 in the Schedule to the Court of Appeal (New Zealand) Act, 1882, powers are conferred on the Court of Appeal of entering judgment according to the justice of the case similar to those contained in the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Order LVIII. rule 4. The verdict having been held unsatisfactory by the Judge at the trial, but no application having been made on the appeal to enter judgment for the defendants, a new trial was ordered. Clouston v. Corry, 75 L. J. P.C. 20; [1906] A.C. 122; 93 L. T. 706; 54 W. R. 382; 22 T. L. R. 107—P.C.

Estate Duty—Life Interest Given to a Widow with Power of Appointment—Exercise of Power in Favour of Herself—Statutory Exemption from Duty.]—Where a testator gives his widow a life interest in his residuary estate, together with an absolute power of appointment over the property, which she exercises in favour of herself, she does not become “absolutely entitled” under her husband's will, and cannot claim the exemption from duty conferred on widows so entitled under the Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Acts, 1881 and 1885. Jackson v. Commissioner of Stamps, 72 L. J. P.C. 68; [1903] A.C. 350; 88 L. T. 480—P.C.

Testamentary Gift to Charity—Death Duty—Income Tax—Exemptions.]—A bequest to found an institution for the training of boys who are either destitute orphans, or the children of persons of good character and straitened circumstances, is a “charitable” bequest within the meaning of section 3 of the Charitable Gifts Duties Exemption Act, 1883, and the institution so founded is a “public” school within section 2 of that Act, although the recipients of the benefit are to be trained in a particular church and chosen from specified localities, and is as such entitled to the exemption from taxation granted by the Act. Dilworth v. New Zealand Commissioner of Stamps, 68 L. J. P.C. 1; [1899] A.C. 99; 79 L. T. 473; 47 W. R. 337—P.C.

Such an institution is also exempt from income tax as a “public charitable institution . . . carried on for” a “public charitable purpose, and not for any gain or profit,” under section 3, sub-section 4 of the Land and Income Assessment Act Amendment Act, 1892. Id.

Stipendiary Magistrate—Jurisdiction of, whether Local or General—Enquiry into Licensing Poll.]—By the Magistrates' Courts Act, 1893, the system of resident magistrates exercising jurisdiction over allocated districts was replaced by a system of stipendiary magistrates appointed to hold office “within the Colony”:—Held, that the jurisdiction of a stipendiary magistrate is not confined to a particular district, the Magistrates' Court being no longer a collection of Courts, but one Court throughout the whole colony in which all the stipendiary magistrates are of equal rank and authority. Thus any stipendiary magistrate, whether or not usually sitting in the district affected, is entitled to entertain a petition for enquiring into a licensing poll presented under the Alcoholic Liquors Sale Control Act, 1895. Bastings v. Callaghan, 74 L. J. P.C. 79; [1905] A.C. 351; 92 L. T. 734; 21 T. L. R. 501—P.C.

11. WEST INDIES.

(a) TRINIDAD.

Crown Concession—Construction—Lands in Possession of the Crown.]—Lands in Trinidad, the subject of a concession by the Crown, “which now are, or at any time during the said term or terms shall come into the possession of Her Majesty,” include only those in the actual possession of the Crown, and not those to which the Crown has a right or title without possession. New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Co. v. Att.-Gen. for Trinidad and Tobago, 73 L. J. P.C. 97; [1904] A.C. 415; 91 L. T. 208; 20 T. L. R. 571—P.C.

Land Forfeited to Crown—Waiver of Forfeiture—Receipt of Rates.]—Where land has been forfeited to the Crown by regular legal process, the fact that rates have subsequently been demanded from and paid by persons found in occupation of the land without any title, will not be held to be a waiver of the forfeiture. De Silva v. Att.-Gen. for Trinidad, 79 L. T. 130—P.C.

12. APPEALS TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

(a) LEAVE WHEN GRANTED.

In Criminal Proceedings.]—The rule is accurately stated in Dillet, In re (12 App. Cas. 459), that, save in exceptional circumstances, such as a gross miscarriage of justice or disregard of the forms of legal process, her Majesty will not review or interfere with the course of criminal proceedings. Curew v. Japan (Crown Prosecutor), 66 L. J. P.C. 95; [1897] A.C. 719; 77 L. T. 1; 18 Cox C.C. 625—P.C.

Special leave to appeal from a criminal conviction after a trial by jury cannot be granted where there is evidence for the jury, and no fact is established sufficient to countervail the findings and verdict. Aldred, Ex parte, 71 L. J. P.C. 27; [1902] A.C. 81; 86 L. T. 163; 20 Cox C.C. 149—P.C.

Special leave to appeal from a criminal conviction by a special Court refused. Reg. v. Marais; Marais, Ex parte, 71 L. J. P.C. 32; [1902] A.C. 51—P.C.

Treason.]—See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Appeal in Forma Pauperis.]—Where leave to appeal has been obtained in regular form, the appeal may be presented in forma pauperis. Quinlan v. Child, 69 L. J. P.C. 85; [1900] A.C. 496—P.C.

Where the facts and issues of several suits were intermingled with each other, although in one the grounds for leave to appeal were insufficient, leave to appeal was given in all. Ib.

There being no power of appeal to the Court of Appeal for the Windward Islands in forma pauperis was held to be an additional reason for granting special leave to appeal. Ib.

Their Lordships have no jurisdiction to order a stay of sale in execution pending an appeal. Ib.

As a general rule leave will not be given to appeal in forma pauperis where the Court below has power to grant such leave on the usual conditions, unless in the first instance an application for leave has been made within due time to the Court from which it is proposed to bring the appeal. Walker v. Walker, 72 L. J. P.C. 36; [1903] A.C. 170; 88 L. T. 133; 51 W. R. 658—P.C.

Leave to appeal in forma pauperis refused on the ground that the materials supplied on the application for leave to appeal were ample and complete, and afforded no ground of action to the petitioner, who was plaintiff in the action. Mitchell v. New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Co., 73 L. J. P.C. 17; [1904] A.C. 149; 89 L. T. 83—P.C.

No Provision in Colonial Code.]—When a Colonial Code makes no provision for appeals in forma pauperis from a decision of the Supreme Court of the colony, special leave to appeal will be granted as of right, provided that the case is, as regards amount, value, and nature, fit to be taken in appeal to his Majesty in Council. Ponnamma v. Arumogam, 71 L. J. P. C. 121; [1902] A. C. 561—P. C.

—Rescission of Order Granting such Leave.]
—Leave to appeal to the King in Council in forma pauperis is not of course, and ought not to be granted where it is made apparent that the proposed appeal is idle and frivolous. Order in Council (69 L. J. P.C. 85; [1900] A.C. 496), granting leave to appeal, rescinded on the petition of the respondent, on the ground that there was no real question to be tried. Quinlan v. Quinlan, 70 L. J. P.C. 122; [1901] A.C. 612; 85 L. T. 360—P.C.

“Final order.”]—Where in an action for account the Court at the request of the plaintiffs selects one item, and in respect thereof after hearing the evidence makes an order that the action be dismissed, such order is a final order and subject to the conditions under which an appeal may be taken therefrom. McDonald v. Belcher, 73 L. J. P.C. 91; [1904] A.C. 429; 90 L. T. 735—P.C.

Immaterial Omission in Petition—Costs.]
Where in a petition for special leave to appeal reference is made to a statute of which it is alleged that it is important to ascertain the construction, but the petitioner inadvertently omits to state that the statute has been repealed, such omission, not affecting the real question at issue, will not operate to deprive the petitioner of the costs to which he is otherwise entitled. Ib.

Judgments Out of Time—Leave Refused.]
Where an appellant is out of time for appealing from an order he cannot bring himself within time by a fresh application for the same purpose to the Court below, the refusal of which is within time. Grieve v. Tasker, 75 L. J. P.C. 12; [1906] A.C. 132; 94 L. T. 115—P.C.

The appellant obtained leave to appeal from an order made in March, 1905. He then petitioned for leave to appeal from orders of June, 1899, and August, 1904, in respect of which the time for appeal had expired, on the ground that they were necessary to the conduct of his appeal from the order of March, 1905. All three orders were substantially the same. Appeal from order of March, 1905, dismissed, and appellant's petition refused. Ib.

Act of Executive Government of a Colony—No Application to Colonial Courts.]—The Judicial Committee will not interfere with an act of the executive Government of a colony in a case in which no application has been made to the Courts of Justice in the Colony to interpose in the matter. Mgomini, Ex parte, 94 L. T. 558; 21 Cox C.C. 154; 22 T. L. R. 413—P.C.

Abstract Point of Law not Arising in Proceedings.]—Special leave to appeal will not be granted for the purpose of obtaining a determination of an abstract point of law which did not arise in the case. Rex v. Lowe, 73 L. J. P.C. 65; [1904] A.C. 412; 91 L. T. 210; 20 T. L. R. 572—P.C.

Speculative Opinions on Hypothetical Questions.]—It is contrary to the practice of the Judicial Committee to attempt to give speculative opinions on hypothetical questions submitted to them. The questions upon which a decision is given must arise in concrete cases involving private rights. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Hamilton Street Railway, 72 L. J. P.C. 105, [1903] A.C. 524; 89 L. T. 107—P.C.

Concurrent Findings of Fact.—Concurrent judgments of facts in the Courts below will not be reversed unless the appellant adduces the clearest proof of error, and points to the source of that error. Allen v. Quebec Warehouse Co. (56 L. J. P.C. 6; 12 App. Cas. 101) followed. Whitney v. Joyce, 75 L. J. P.C. 89; 95 L. T. 74—P.C.

Unanimous Judgment—Question of Fact.—The unanimous judgment of Courts below on a question of fact will not be set aside except where it is plain that there has been a miscarriage of justice, or at least that the evidence has not been adequately weighed. Archambault v. Archambault, 71 L. J. P.C. 131; [1902] A.C. 575; 87 L. T. 404—P.C.

Point not Raised and Considered in Court Below.—A new point which was not fully raised and considered in the Court below will not be entertained on the appeal to the King in Council. Ib.

Martial Law—Civil Tribunals.—Where actual war is raging, acts done by the military authorities are not justiciable by the ordinary tribunals. The fact that for some purposes some tribunals have been permitted to pursue their ordinary course in a district in which martial law has been proclaimed is not conclusive that war is not raging. Ephinstone v. Bedreechund (1 Knapp P.C. 316) followed. Special leave to appeal refused from a judgment affirming the rightful custody of the petitioner by the military authority in a district in which martial law prevails. Marais v. General Officer Commanding Lines of Communication, 71 L. J. P.C. 42; [1902] A.C. 109; 85 L. T. 734; 50 W. R. 273—P.C.

Legislation Legalising Sentences of Court-martial.—There is no analogy between the proceedings of courts-martial and those of Courts of justice administering the ordinary law. The Judicial Committee has no power to review the sentences of courts-martial or to enquire into the propriety or impropriety of legislation which has established the legality of such sentences. Tilonko v. Att.-Gen. of Natal (No. 1), 76 L. J. P.C. 29; [1907] A.C. 93; 95 L. T. 853; 23 T. L. R. 21—P.C.

Appealable Value—Amount.—In estimating the appealable value regard will be had to the whole matter involved in the suit, and not to the value of a fractional part of the property sought to be recovered by the petitioner. Mussumat Ameena Khatoor v. Radhabenod Misser (12 Moo. P.C. 470; 7 Moo. Indian App. Cas. 261) approved. Ponamma v. Arumogam, 71 L. J. P.C. 121; [1902] A.C. 561—P.C.

Subsequent Legislation.—The rights of parties must be decided according to the law in force at the commencement of the action, and a provision in a later law that such law shall apply to pending actions is inapplicable to an appeal to the King in Council. An appeal to the King in Council is an appeal, strictly so called, confined to the materials which were before the Court below, and not a re-hearing. Ponamma v. Arumogam, 74 L. J. P.C. 102; [1905] A.C. 383; 92 L. T. 740; 21 T. L. R. 524—P.C.

Question Settled by—Act of Colonial Legislature.—Special leave to appeal will not be granted where the question has been settled by a Colonial Legislature, the function of the Judicial Committee being the application, not the policy, of legislation. Tilonko v. Att.-Gen. of Natal (No. 2), 76 L. J. P.C. 105; [1907] A.C. 461; 23 T. L. R. 668—P.C.

Bishop—Jurisdiction of—Revocation of Appointment of Chaplain.—The appellant was nominated by the respondent to a colonial chaplaincy within his diocese, and the nomination was accepted by the Secretary of State. In consequence of certain reports as to his conduct, the Colonial Government decided to suspend the issue of his official letter of appointment pending an enquiry. An enquiry was held before the bishop, who found certain charges of misconduct proved, and withdrew his nomination:—Held, that, there being no litigation which the bishop had jurisdiction to determine, no appeal lay to the Judicial Committee from his act in withdrawing the nomination. Ward v. Mauritianus (Bishop), 95 L. T. 854; 23 T. L. R. 52—P.C.

Power to Relax Conditions—New Trial—Judgment.—There is no power to relax or dispense with an enactment prescribing the exact conditions under which applications for a new trial or for judgment must be made. George D. Emery Co. v. Wells, 75 L. J. P.C. 104; [1906] A.C. 515; 95 L. T. 589—P.C.

Interlocutory Orders—Interim Injunction.—The Judicial Committee will not encourage appeals from interlocutory orders of a temporary character, such as an interim injunction. Croudace v. Zobel, 68 L. J. P.C. 47; [1899] A.C. 258; 79 L. T. 602—P.C.

Powers of Board after Amendment.—Where the Judicial Committee order an amendment as to parties to be allowed and thereby reverse a decision of the Court below, the Committee cannot hear the action as a Court of first instance on the merits, but must refer it back to the Court below. Kent v. La Communauté des Sœurs de Charité de la Providence, 72 L. J. P.C. 61; [1903] A.C. 220; 88 L. T. 275—P.C.

Special Leave—Terms.—Special leave to appeal granted on the terms of the appellant's submission to pay the costs of appeal in any event, if so directed. Montreal Gas Co. v. Cadieux, 67 L. J. P.C. 115; [1898] A.C. 718—P.C.

Duty of Court of Appeal—No Cross-appeal.—The respondents, the next-of-kin of a testator, presented a petition for the revocation of the probate of his will, on the ground that he was not of sound mind, and that the will was obtained by undue influence. The Court of first instance decided in their favour. The executrix appealed, and the Court of Appeal held the will good so far as regarded the personal estate of the testator, but invalid so far as regarded his real estate, which was considerable. No such point had been raised at the trial, at which the will was attacked and defended as a whole. The executrix appealed, but there was no cross-appeal by the next-of-kin:—Held, that the course taken by the Court of Appeal was not correct according to the rule laid down in The Tasmania (15 App. Cas. 223)—that a Court of Appeal ought only to decide in favour of an appellant on a ground put forward for the first time on the hearing of the appeal if it be satisfied that it has before it beyond all doubt all the facts bearing upon the new contention as completely as if it had been raised at the trial—but, in the absence of a cross-appeal by the next-of-kin, the decision must be affirmed, but without costs. Karunaratne v. Ferdinandus, 71 L. J. P.C. 76; [1902] A.C. 405; 86 L. T. 329—P.C.

Commonwealth of Australia—High Court.—Applications for special leave to appeal from the High Court of Australia ought to be treated in the same manner as applications for special leave to appeal from the Supreme Court of Canada, as explained in Cité de Montréal v. Ecclesiastiques du Séminaire de St. Sulpice de Montréal (59 L. J. P.C. 20; 14 App. Cas. 660) and in Prince v. Gagnon (8 App. Cas. 103), "Daily Telegraph" Newspaper Co. v. McLaughlin, 73 L. J. P.C. 95; [1904] A.C. 776; 91 L. T. 233; 20 T. L. R. 674—P.C.

Such applications will not be granted "save where the case is of gravity involving matters of public interest or some important question of law, or affecting property of considerable amount, or where the case is otherwise of some public importance or of a very substantial character." Ib.

— Special Leave to Appeal.—In cases in which there is an alternative appeal, either to the High Court or to his Majesty in Council, and parties have made their election to appeal to the High Court, special leave to appeal from the High Court to the King in Council will not be given save in very exceptional circumstances. Victorian Railway Commissioners v. Brown, 75 L. J. P.C. 65; [1906] A.C. 381; 95 L. T. 73; 22 T. L. R. 644—P.C.

Australia—Question of Private Right.—Special leave to appeal from a decision of the High Court of Australia will not be granted where a matter of private right only and not of public importance is involved. Walfley Ore Concentrator Syndicate v. Guthridge, 75 L. J. P.C. 87; [1906] A.C. 548; 95 L. T. 73—P.C.

Canada—Special Leave to Appeal from the Supreme Court of.—Where no important question of law is involved, and no prima facie ground warranting an appeal is made out, special leave to appeal from an order of the Supreme Court of Canada will not be granted. Ewing v. Dominion Bank, 74 L. J. P.C. 21; [1904] A.C. 806—P.C.

Where a litigant elects to appeal to the Supreme Court, and not direct to his Majesty in Council, as he may do, special leave to appeal will not be granted save in exceptional circumstances. Clergue v. Murray (72 L. J. P.C. 99; [1903] A.C. 521) followed. Canadian-Pacific Railway v. Blain, 73 L. J. P.C. 109; [1904] A.C. 453—P.C.

Ontario—Admission of Appeal to King in Council—Competency.—The question whether an appeal from the Court of Appeal for Ontario to the King in Council is competent is one upon which the Court of Appeal itself must exercise its judgment; and where that Court has avoided the expression of any opinion, no such appeal is permitted. Gillett v. Lumsden, 74 L. J. P.C. 155; [1905] A.C. 601; 93 L. T. 314; 21 T. L. R. 693—P.C.

(b) INTEREST.

Money Found Due—Discretion of Court.—The Court has a discretion on further directions to order payment of interest on a sum found due from a defendant, although the decree declaring the liability contains no direction for payment of interest, and the statement of claim does not ask for interest. Burland v. Earle, 74 L. J. P.C. 156; [1905] A.C. 590; 93 L. T. 313—P.C.

But in the special circumstances disclosed in the appeal the Board overruled the exercise of the discretion of the Court below, which had intentionally omitted a direction as to interest and allowed interest from the date of that Court's decree. Ib. And see INTEREST.

(c) COSTS.

Security for Costs of Appeal—Form of.—Where a municipality is respondent to an appeal to her Majesty in Council the condition that security shall be given in bond, mortgage, or personal recognisance is sufficiently complied with by delivery of the bonds to the prothonotary and not to the municipality. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. Fitzroy Corporation, 70 L. J. P.C. 1; [1901] A.C. 153; 83 L. T. 442—P.C.

Crown a Party.—The Judicial Committee will henceforth adhere to the practice of the House of Lords, under which the Crown neither pays nor receives costs, unless the case is governed by some local statute, or there are exceptional circumstances to justify a departure from the ordinary rule. Johnson v. Regem, 73 L. J. P.C. 113; [1904] A.C. 817; 91 L. T. 234; 53 W. R. 207; 20 T. L. R. 697—P.C.

Pauper—Successful Appellant.—The rule in pauper cases prevailing in the House of Lords was adopted by the Privy Council, and the successful appellant was awarded such costs of the appeal as would be granted by that rule. Wasteneys v. Wasteneys, 69 L. J. P.C. 83; [1900] A.C. 446—P.C.

Inclosure Act—Award—River Running along Waste—Allotment of Waste—Bed of River—"Ad medium filum."]—An Act for inclosing moors, commons, and waste grounds of a manor does not apply to the bed of a river which is proved to be not waste of the manor, but the freehold of the lord, and not subject to any commonable rights. Therefore an award under the Act of waste bordering on the river does not carry with it the bed of the river ad medium filum. Ecroyd v. Coulthard, supra. 67 L. J. Inclosure Award—Allotment to Trustees for Purpose of Turbary—Ownership of Soil—Lord of the Manor.]—By section 73 of the Inclosure Act, 1845, the valuer acting in the matter of any inclosure shall and may set out and allot for the public purposes mentioned in the provisional order of the Commissioners such parts of the land to be inclosed as shall have been thereby respectively directed to be set apart for such purposes; and in every case in which the valuer shall not think it necessary or proper to direct the same to be otherwise made, such allotments shall be made to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the time being of the parish in which such allotments shall be situate, and shall be held by them in the same manner and with the same legal powers and incidents as if the same allotments were lands belonging to the parish. By an award made under the Act the valuer set out, allotted, and awarded to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of a parish an allotment situate therein for the purpose of the exercise of rights of turbary, and declared that the allotment should be held by them and their successors for ever upon trust to permit the occupiers of certain cottages to cut and dig turf thereon:—Held, that the ownership of the soil in the allotment was thereby taken away from the lord of the manor and vested in the churchwardens and overseers of the poor. Simcoe v. Pethick, 67 L. J. Q.B. 919; [1898] 2 Q.B. 555; 79 L. T. 432—C.A.

—Jurisdiction of Commissioner—Watercourse Repairing and Cleansing—Highway Authority.]

—An Inclosure Act provided that the commissioner should set out such watercourses as he should think proper, and should order and direct by whom and at whose expense such watercourses should be repaired and cleansed. The Act further provided that the commissioner should assign land for the getting of materials for repairing public roads. The commissioner, in pursuance of such act, by his award, appointed certain roads to be set out, and awarded to the surveyor of highways land for the getting of materials for the repair of public roads. He further ordered that a watercourse should be made, and directed that such watercourse should for ever thereafter be repaired and cleansed by the surveyor of highways for the time being, the expenses attendant upon such repairing and cleansing to be paid out of a rate to be made for the repair of highways in the township:—Held, that it was within the jurisdiction of the commissioner to order the surveyor of highways to repair and cleanse the watercourse and to raise the expenses of so doing by means of a rate. Aff. Gen. v. Tamworth Rural Council, 85 L. T. 190—Byrne, J.

Land Allotted in Lieu of Tithes—Annual Payment for Poor of Parish—Charge on Tithes.]

Certain lands were allotted in 1834 in lieu of great tithes of a certain parish under an Inclosure Act which provided that any allotment should not prejudice any person or persons having any right or claim out of or affecting any lands allotted or inclosed, but the persons to whom any hereditaments should be allotted should be seised thereof subject to such and the same charges and incumbrances as the hereditaments whereof they were seised before the award. It was proved that the great tithes had from time immemorial been subject to the annual provision of a certain quantity of corn for the benefit of the poor of the parish, and from 1834 to 1881 the owners or occupiers of the lands allotted in lieu thereof had made payments in money or kind in respect of this charge. In 1881 the lands in question were sold to the defendants' predecessor in title, and conveyed to him "subject to the unredeemed land tax and tithe commutation rentcharge both rectorial and vicarial and to all other payments and outgoings ecclesiastical and civil charged upon or payable out of the said hereditaments." Payments had occasionally been made by him on account of the charge:—Held, that the payment constituted a valid charge on the property allotted in lieu of tithes, and that the purchaser took subject thereto under his conveyance. Lanchbury v. Bode (67 L. J. Ch. 196; [1898] 2 Ch. 120) distinguished. Alms Corn Charity, In re; Charity Commissioners v. Bode, 71 L. J. Ch. 76; [1901] 2 Ch. 750; 85 L. T. 533—Stirling, J.

"Parsonage"—Liability to Charge.—A charge "issuing and payable out of a parsonage" is a charge on the endowments of the benefice. Ib.

Annual Payment of Corn to Poor of Parish—Charge on Great Tithes—Lands Allotted in Lieu of Tithes—Sale of Lands—Lands subject to Charge.—In 1881 the defendant purchased from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners certain lands which in 1834 had been allotted to their predecessors in title under the Inclosure Act, 11 Geo. 4, c. 1, in lieu of the great tithes of the parish of H. There was evidence that from time immemorial an annual payment of a certain quantity of corn had been made out of the tithes for the benefit of the poor of the parish, and from 1834 to 1881 the same payment had been made by the owners or occupiers of the lands in question. The conveyance to the defendant was expressed to be made "free from incumbrances," but was also expressly subject to the unredeemed land tax, tithe commutation rent-charge, both rectorial and vicarial, and to all other payments and outgoings, ecclesiastical or civil, charged upon or payable out of the lands conveyed:—Held, that the payment of corn constituted a valid charge to which the lands allotted in lieu of the tithes became subject by virtue of section 66 of the Inclosure Act, and that the defendant by the terms of his conveyance took the lands subject to the charge. Alms Corn Charity, In re; Charity Commissioners v. Bode, 71 L. J. Ch. 76; [1901] 2 Ch. 750; 85 L. T. 533—Stirling, L.J.

Reservation of Minerals to Lord—Allotment of Surface to Commoners—Right to Work Minerals—Right to Support—Damage to Surface—Compensation Clause—Injunction.—The lord of a manor was seised of the soil of the manor and entitled to the mines and minerals thereunder, subject only to the ordinary rights of pasturage in the commoners. The common lands of the manor were duly inclosed and allotted by an award made under an Inclosure Act which enacted that lands allotted to any person in respect of freehold lands entitled to a right of common should be vested in and held by such person as freehold; that the lord of the manor should have, hold, and enjoy all mines and quarries in and under the said common lands, together with liberty of searching for, winning, and working the said mines and quarries, and other usual liberties, as fully and freely as he might or could have had and enjoyed the same in case that Act had not been made, and that without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing; that any damage done to persons by reason of the searching for, winning, and working the mines and quarries under their respective allotments by the lord of the manor without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing, should be assessed as therein mentioned, and should be paid and borne by the occupiers of the several other allotments lying and being in such and the same township as was the allotment so damaged; and that the owners of the allotments might at all times win, work, get, and take stones in their several allotments, and also in the common quarries to be established as therein mentioned, and also for the space of one year after the award in the other allotments. The plaintiffs, who were the surface owners of lands allotted by the award in respect of freehold lands, claimed an injunction to restrain the defendants, lessees of the mines, from the successors in title of the lord of the manor, from so working the mines as to lower or depress the surface of the plaintiffs' lands or injure the buildings thereon:—Held, that the mines and minerals were not granted, but were reserved to the lord of the manor subject to the principle, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non ledas, the words "and that without making or paying any satisfaction for so doing" limiting the reservation to the ordinary rights of ownership and amounting to a provision that so long as the mineral owners worked in exercise of the usual common-law rights, they were to pay no compensation to any one; that the provisions of the compensation clause were quite consistent with the working of mines and quarries in the ordinary way and subject to the ordinary rights of surface owners; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction. Bishop Auckland Industrial Co-operative Flour and Provision Society v. Butterknowle Colliery Co., 73 L. J. Ch. 335; [1904] 2 Ch. 419; 90 L. T. 149; 68 J. P. 177; 20 T. L. R. 204—Farwell, J. Affirmed in C.A., 73 L. J. Ch. 635; [1904] 2 Ch. 419. See MINES. Affirmed in H.L., 41 L. J. N.C. 814.

Quære, whether the decisions in Consett Waterworks Co. v. Ritson (64 L. J. Ch. 293n.; 22 Q.B. D. 702) and Bell v. Dudley (Earl) (64 L. J. Ch. 291; [1895] 1 Ch. 182) do not conflict with the subsequent decision of the HOUSE OF LORDS in New Sharlston Collieries v. Westmorland (Earl) (73 L. J. Ch. 333n.). Ib.

Repair of Roads—Action for Breach of Duty—Canon of Construction to be applied in Construing Act.—By an Inclosure Act passed in the 7 George 3, with reference to the inclosure of certain commons and waste grounds known as B. Moor, after reciting that the persons interested were owners and proprietors of messuages, &c., in the several townships therein mentioned, including, amongst others, the township of W., it was enacted that the commissioners should appoint and undertake the repair of (inter alia) two roads mentioned in the statement of claim. The plaintiffs alleged that these roads were duly made in accordance with the award, and were for many years kept in repair by the surveyor of the township of W., and that the said township was included in the defendant urban district, and that the defendants were liable to repair them. There was no evidence that the inhabitants of W., taken as a body, had ever in fact repaired or paid for the repair of the roads in question since 1767, although it was shewn that since 1859 certain of the inhabitants of the township had contributed towards the repair of the roads for their own convenience. It was contended by the plaintiffs that liability to repair the roads in question was imposed upon the defendants:—Held, in the circumstances, that the Court was justified in reading in after the words “in such manner as other public highways are by law directed to be repaired by such of the said townships respectively” the words “within whose district such public highways are situated”; that the doctrine of contemporanea expositio did not apply; that the defendants were not liable to repair the roads in question as the same were outside their district; and that in construing an Inclosure Act it is right to take the whole of the document as one complete document. It is not sufficient to take out one section and disregard others which are germane to the same subject. Att.-Gen. v. Lunsdale Rural Council, 86 L. T. 822—Farwell, J.

Metropolitan Common—Land Included in Scheme—Claim of Alleged Owner—Lapse of Time.—Where a certain piece of land was included in a scheme (made in 1890 under the Metropolitan Commons Acts, 1866 and 1869, and confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1891), and in the plan embodied with the scheme, as portion of the common subject to such scheme, and a person nine years afterwards brought an action against the conservators claiming to be entitled to the piece of land in fee-simple, it was held that the inclusion of such land in the scheme and plan was conclusive that the land formed part of the common, and that the alleged owner was debarred from asserting any title to the land. Cook v. Mitcham Common Conservators, 70 L. J. Ch. 228; [1901] 1 Ch. 387; 83 L. T. 519; 49 W. R. 201—Farwell, J.

Section 14 of the Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866, which requires every scheme to state the rights affected by it, refers to all rights of property claimed in respect of land comprised in a common, and not merely to rights in or over the common as such. Id.

3. WASTE.

River.—Whether a river running along waste of a manor is waste is a question of fact. Ecroyd v. Coulthard, 67 L. J. Ch. 458; [1898] 2 Ch. 358; 78 L. T. 702—C.A.

Evidence—Boundary Stones.—The erection of boundary stones with the initials thereon of an adjacent proprietor, so as to mark out uninclosed lands, is, standing alone, strong evidence of ownership, and if recognised and acquiesced in by those whose interest it would be to dispute such ownership, it may afford irresistible evidence in favour of the party claiming the property set out. Jenkins v. Dunraven (Earl), 62 J. P. 661—Byrne, J.

— Ancient Survey of Manor.—An ancient survey of a manor is admissible though not conclusive evidence in a question relating to lands within the manor. Id.

4. QUARRY.

Right to get Stone—Freehold and Copyhold Tenants—Evidence—Court Rolls.—The copyhold tenants of a manor may by custom have a right of common to get stone and sand out of the lord's waste to be used by them on their respective tenements within the manor, and there is no legal objection to the existence of a similar right in the freehold tenants. Such a right is not unreasonable, and the court rolls may be given in evidence to its existence. The lord cannot inclose against such a right of common; and the fact that an amercement rent was at one time paid in respect of the quarry from which the stone was taken cannot affect the tenants in respect of the right in question. Heath v. Deane, 74 L. J. Ch. 466; [1905] 2 Ch. 86; 92 L. T. 643; 21 T. L. R. 404—Joyce, J.

2. FORMATION.

"Institution in the nature of a joint-stock company"—Acquisition of Gain.—Neither the acquisition of gain nor the provision of a dividend among its members is of the essence of a joint-stock company. Dictum of KAY, J., in Bristol Athenæum, In re (59 L. J. Ch. 116; 43 Ch. D. 236), dissented from. Russell Literary and Scientific Institution, In re; Figgins v. Baglino, 67 L. J. Ch. 411; [1898] 2 Ch. 72; 78 L. T. 588—North, J.

A literary and scientific institution founded and established by the issue of transferable shares, entitling their holders to the property of the institution, but bearing no dividend, was held an institution "founded or established by the contributions of shareholders in the nature of a joint-stock company" so as to escape the operation of section 30 of the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854, which forbids a distribution of the property among the members on a dissolution. Ib.

An institution within the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854, in the constitution of which the following ingredients existed—a common property, the contributions of members as the source of such property, and the holding of the property by numerous persons in transferable shares,—Held, an institution "in the nature of a joint-stock company" within the meaning of the proviso of section 30 of the Act, although the institution was not carried on for purposes of profit, and although, by its constitution, the members were forbidden to receive any dividend or bonus during the continuance of the institution, but were entitled on its dissolution to a share of the profits after payment of debts and liabilities. Jones, In re; Clegg v. Ellison, 67 L. J. Ch. 504; [1898] 2 Ch. 83; 78 L. T. 639; 46 W. R. 577—Stirling, J.

In such a case the property of the institution may, on a dissolution, be divided among the members, and is not liable to be applied, under section 30, to a similar institution. Bristol Athenæum, In re (59 L. J. Ch. 116; 43 Ch. D. 236), considered. Ib.

Illegal Association—Action to Administer Funds—Claim on Contract.—In an action to administer the funds of the defendant syndicate, brought by a subscriber against the syndicate, the supervising committee and the bankers, certain enquiries were ordered, in the course of which it transpired that the syndicate consisted of more than twenty members and was illegal, not being registered under the Companies Acts.

and advertisements were issued for creditors on which a claim was made by U. Brothers for printing and posting prospectuses. It appeared that U. Brothers were already suing the committee and others in the Queen's Bench Division for payment of their debt. On a summons to disallow their claim in this action it was held, that the only ground for the claim was that the syndicate had taken the benefit of the work and therefore the claim must rest on a quantum meruit; that the doctrine did not apply where other persons were liable, and that as the persons or some of them sued in the Queen's Bench Division appeared to be liable, the claim in this action ought not to be allowed. Hume v. Record Reign Jubilee Syndicate, 80 L. T. 404—Stirling, J.

Illegality—Unregistered Association of More than Twenty Members—Right to Maintain Action.]—The trustees of an unregistered association of more than twenty persons formed for mutual insurance against death and accident sued the late treasurer for moneys of the society which he had converted to his own use;—Held, that the society was not rendered illegal by the Companies Act, 1862, for want of registration, and that the plaintiffs were not precluded from maintaining the action by reason of non-registration under that Act or the Friendly Societies Act, 1896. Marrs v. Thompson, 86 L. T. 759—D.

Company Limited by Guarantee—Member's Liability beyond Amount Prescribed by Memorandum.]—A member of a company limited by guarantee, under the Companies Act, 1862, is not liable to be placed on the list of contributors, in the event of a winding-up, for an amount beyond that prescribed by the memorandum of association as the extent of his guarantee. Maria Anna and Steinbank Coal Co., In re; Maxwell's Case (L. R. 20 Eq. 585), and Maria Anna and Steinbank Coal Co., In re; McKewan's Case (46 L. J. Ch. 819; 6 Ch. D. 447), distinguished, as turning on the Companies Act, 1856, and relating to companies limited by shares. Bangor and North Wales Mutual Marine Protection Association, In re; Baird's Case, 68 L. J. Ch. 521; [1899] 2 Ch. 593; 80 L. T. 870; 47 W. R. 695; 7 Manson, 160—Wright, J.

Whether these cases are authorities on the construction of the Companies Act, 1862, even as to companies limited by shares, quære. Ib.

"Flotation"—Mining Claims—Prospector's Agreement.]—The condition of "flotation" in an agreement between a mining prospector and his employers is fulfilled when claims, pegged off under licences and registered in the name of the employers or their nominees, are sold to a mining company in consideration of fully paid-up shares of the company and the undertaking by the purchasers of the contracts and obligations of the vendors. It is not necessary that the purchasing company should have offered its shares to the public or be actually working at a profit, or that the word should be confined to the particular kind of flotation referred to in the mining regulations in force in the territories of the British South Africa Co. Torva Exploring Syndicate v. Kelly, 69 L. J. P.C. 115; [1900] A.C. 612; 83 L. T. 34—P.C.

As to Pre-Incorporation Contracts.]—See 9. CONTRACTS, infra.

Name—Similarity.]—See TRADE NAME.

3. MEMORANDUM OF ASSOCIATION AND ULTRA VIRES.

Primary Object—Wide General Powers—Subordination of Powers—Separate Objects—Ultra Vires.]—Although a limited company may be formed for any number of separate objects of the most diverse kind, provided that those objects are precisely discriminated as separate in its memorandum of association, yet, when it is clear on the general construction of the memorandum that the company is formed for a single primary object, and that other objects contained in its memorandum are intended to be only subordinate or ancillary to that single primary object, it is not possible to construe each of those other objects as a separate and independent object of the company, merely because of the insertion of a clause in the memorandum of association to the effect that each of those other objects shall so be construed. Stephens v. Mysore Reefs (Kangundy) Mining Co., 71 L. J. Ch. 295; [1902] 1 Ch. 745; 86 L. T. 221; 50 W. R. 509; 9 Manson, 199—Swinfen Eady, J.

—Wide General Powers—Construction—Ultra Vires.]—A company was formed—first, to acquire and take over as a going concern the undertaking of another gold-mining company; and secondly, to acquire gold mines, mining and other rights, and land, auriferous, metalliferous, or otherwise, or any interests in the same, in Mysore and elsewhere, and to work, exercise, develop, and turn to account the said mines, &c. The memorandum of association also gave the company wide general powers. The property acquired under the first object was not workable at a profit, and the directors now sought to purchase other mining properties in Bombay. A general meeting of the company was called, and a resolution was passed approving of the draft agreement, and authorizing the directors to enter into it and carry it into effect. On a motion by a shareholder for an injunction to restrain the company from entering into the agreement on the ground that it was ultra vires,—Held, that the main object of the company was gold mining in "Mysore and elsewhere," and that the proposed agreement to purchase other mining properties was within the objects stated in the memorandum of association, and injunction refused. Stephens v. Mysore Reefs (Kangundy) Mining Co. (71 L. J. Ch. 295; [1902] 1 Ch. 745) discussed and distinguished. Pedlar v. Road Block Gold Mines, 74 L. J. Ch. 733; [1905] 2 Ch. 427; 93 L. T. 665; 54 W. R. 44; 12 Manson, 422—Warrington, J.

—Liability to Subscribe for Shares in New Company.]—A company was formed (a) to acquire lands, mines, mineral and other properties and grants, concessions, claims, licences, and options in any part of the world; (b) to purchase and undertake the business of the N.T. Mining and Smelting Co. under a specified agreement; (c) to carry on business as general merchants, bankers, capitalists, financiers, and all kinds of financial, commercial, trading, and other similar operations or business in any part of the world: (g) to promote companies having objects wholly or in part similar to those of the company, and in particular to provide the whole or any part of the capital thereof, or by taking shares therein: (n) to subscribe for, acquire, hold, sell, and give guarantees in relation to the shares and securities of any company. The company had undertaken and carried on the business of the N. T. Mining and Smelting Co., but, having money unemployed, the directors proposed to acquire a large interest in a mine situated in another State of Australia over which they had bought an option. If the option should be exercised, a new company promoted by the defendant company was to be formed to take over the W. F. Mine from the company, and it was proposed that the defendant company should subscribe for 64,000 shares in such new company, applying 32,000*l.* of its cash in hand in paying for such shares. On a motion by a shareholder for an injunction to restrain the company from carrying into effect the purchase of the W. F. Mine on the ground that the proposed agreement was ultra vires,—Held, that although if clauses (a) and (b) had stood alone it might have been possible to find in the memorandum of association such a main primary object of the company as was found in Stephens v. Mysore Reefs (Kangundy) Mining Co., Lim. (71 L. J. Ch. 295; [1902] 1 Ch. 745), yet that, when read in conjunction with the following clauses, especially (g) and (n), it was shewn that the company contemplated many primary objects, and that what was proposed to be done was not ultra vires. Butler v. Northern Territories Mines of Australia, 96 L. T. 41; 23 T. L. R. 179—Kekewich, J.

Sale of Undertaking—Reconstruction—Voluntary Winding-up—Contemporaneous Resolutions for Sale and Winding-up—Shares in New Company—Ultra Vires.—It is competent to a company by its memorandum of association to exclude the operation of section 161 of the Companies Act, 1862, in the event of a sale by the company of its undertaking to another company, part of the consideration for such sale being shares in the purchasing company, notwithstanding that the resolutions for sale and voluntary winding-up are contemporaneous and that stipulations in the agreement for sale can only be thoroughly carried out in the winding-up. Cotton v. Imperial &c. Agency Corporation (61 L. J. Ch. 684; [1892] 3 Ch. 454) followed and extended. Doughty v. Lomagunda Reefs, Lim., 71 L. J. Ch. 888; [1902] 2 Ch. 837; 51 W. R. 29; 9 Manson, 418—Buckley, J. Affirmed on the ground of non-joinder of parties. Doughty v. Lomagunda Reefs, Lim., 72 L. J. Ch. 331; [1903] 1 Ch. 673; 88 L. T. 337; 51 W. R. 564; 10 Manson, 189—C.A. But see Bisgood v. Henderson's Transvaal Estates, Lim., 43 L. J. N.C. 225.

Power to Sell Land—No Express Power—Implied Power—Memorandum of Association—Ultra Vires—Reasonably Necessary.—“Incidental or conducive.”—A colliery company, without express power of sale in its memorandum of association, may sell land from time to time and in a proper manner where it is reasonably necessary and has the effect of making the rest of the company's property more useful. Johns v. Balfour (1 Megone, 191) applied. Kingsbury Collieries and Moore's Contract, In re, 76 L. J. Ch. 469; [1907] 2 Ch. 259; 96 L. T. 829; 14 Manson, 212; 23 T. L. R. 497—Kekewich, J.

Signatory—Shareholder—Liability for Unpaid Portion of Share.—The signatories to the memorandum of association of a company, though they thereby agree to become members of the company, do not become debtors to the full amount of their shares; they are only liable, like other members of the company, to pay calls if and when made upon them in the manner provided by the articles. Alexander v. Automatic Telephone Co., 68 L. J. Ch. 514; [1899] 2 Ch. 302; 80 L. T. 753—Cozens-Hardy, J.

Alteration of—Jurisdiction—Company Registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1856.—The Court has jurisdiction under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, to make an order for the alteration of the memorandum of association of a company registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1856. Copiapo Mining Co., In re, 6 Manson, 320—Wright, J.

The Court has jurisdiction to make an order under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, in the case of a company registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1856, although it is not also registered under the Companies Act, 1862. Nitrophosphate and Odams Chemical Manure Co., In re (W. N. (1893), p. 141); Hong-Kong and China Gas Co., In re (33 L. J. N.C. 578; W. N. (1898), p. 158 (3)), and Copiapo Mining Co., In re (34 L. J. N.C. 138; W. N. (1899), p. 25 (1); 6 Manson, 320), followed. General Credit Co., In re (W. N. (1891), p. 153), not followed. Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Co., In re, 73 L. J. Ch. 175; [1904] 1 Ch. 360; 90 L. T. 56; 11 Manson, 93—Swinfen Eady, J.

Association Formed for Purpose not of Gain—Sanction of Board of Trade to Proposed Alteration.—Where an association incorporated with the licence of the Board of Trade under section 23 of the Companies Act, 1867, as an association formed for purposes not of gain, without the word “limited,” desires to alter its memorandum of association, the proper course is first to submit the proposed alterations to the Board of Trade, and if the Board approves and authorises them then to apply to the Court under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, for its sanction. St. Hilda's Incorporated College, Cheltenham, In re, 70 L. J. Ch. 266; [1901] 1 Ch. 556; 49 W. R. 279; 8 Manson, 430—Buckley, J.

Unlimited Company—No Shares or Capital.—The High Court has jurisdiction, equally after as before the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, to wind up an unlimited company, having neither shares nor capital, and therefore under section 1, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, jurisdiction to confirm a resolution altering the provisions of the memorandum of association of such a company. North of England Steamship Insurance Co., In re, 69 L. J. Ch. 211; [1900] 1 Ch. 481; 82 L. T. 598; 48 W. R. 604; 7 Manson, 364—Cozens-Hardy, J.

— To Enable Company "to carry on its business more economically or efficiently."—A manufacturing company, founding upon section 1, sub-section 5 (a) of the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, petitioned the Court to confirm a resolution altering its memorandum of association by adding thereto a clause enabling the company to invest its reserve funds and other moneys not immediately required for the other objects of the company in such stocks and securities as the company or directors might think proper, on the ground that it required to have large sums at command, and that it was more economical to have these invested in marketable securities than deposited in the bank. The Court granted the petition. Coats' Petition, 2 F. 829—Ct. of Sess.

— Single-ship Company—Discretion.—The Court has jurisdiction and will exercise its discretion under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, to confirm the alteration of the memorandum of association of a company, so as to change it from a single-ship company into a general shipping company, where there is evidence that under the proposed extension the business of the company can be more efficiently carried on, and no shareholder or creditor opposes. Bernicia Steamship, Lim., In re, 69 L. J. Ch. 194; 81 L. T. 816; 7 Manson, 361—Cozens-Hardy, J.

— Cycling—Motoring.—A company was formed having for its objects the promotion of the interests of cyclists:—Held, that a proposed alteration of the memorandum so as to include in the objects the promotion of the interests of motorists, was not within either clause (a) or clause (d) of section 1, sub-section 5 of the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, as an alteration, which would "enable the company to carry on its business more economically or efficiently" or "to carry on some business which may conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company." Cyclists' Touring Club, In re, 76 L. J. Ch. 172; [1907] 1 Ch. 269; 96 L. T. 780; 14 Manson, 52; 23 T. L. R. 220—Warrington, J.

— Extension to New Business.—A company carrying on the ordinary business of bankers petitioned the Court to confirm a resolution, passed unanimously, to alter its memorandum of association by empowering it to undertake the execution of trusts and to act as executor or administrator, as trustee or treasurer. The application was opposed by seven shareholders, who were solicitors, on the ground that the alteration would not be beneficial to the shareholders and would be injurious to the solicitors' profession. The Court confirmed the alteration, with the modification that the powers were not to be exercised unless some part of the trust property was situate within the jurisdiction of the Court. Munster and Leinster Bank, In re, [1907] 1 Ir. R. 237—M.R.

— Practice.—Immediately after the presentation of a petition under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, a summons should be taken out to have a day fixed for the hearing of the petition, and directions given for advertising the presentation of the petition in accordance with the practice stated in Palmer's Company Precedents (1906 ed.), Part I. p. 1163. Id.

— Extension of Local Area of Operations—Change of Name.—A laundry company, incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890, presented a petition under the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, for confirmation of a special resolution altering its memorandum of association so as to enable it to extend the local area of its operations. The Court granted the petition without requiring any change in the company's name. Kirkaldy Steam Laundry Co., In re, 6 F. 778—Court of Sess.

— Verbal Alterations.—The power given to the Court by the Companies (Memorandum of Association) Act, 1890, to sanction alterations in the memorandum of association of a company does not apply to mere verbal alterations in the language of the original memorandum of association. Consett Iron Co., In re, 70 L. J. Ch. 198; [1901] 1 Ch. 236; 84 L. T. 258; 8 Manson, 429—Cozens-Hardy, J.

— Ultra Vires—Judgment by Consent on Contract Ultra Vires—Effect of.—A judgment against a company obtained by consent upon a contract which was ultra vires has no more validity than the contract upon which it is founded, but is impeachable to the same extent as the contract. In such a case the contract cannot be maintained as to matters admitted to be lawful, while matters ultra vires are disallowed, but it must be wholly set aside. Great North-West Central Railway v. Charlebois, 79 L. T. 35—P.C.

— Gratuities to Servant—Power of Company.—A scheme prepared by a water company under schedule 4 to the Metropolis Water Act, 1902, for the application and distribution of the compensation moneys payable upon the purchase of the company's undertaking by the Metropolitan Water Board held not to empower the company to pay a certain sum, part of the compensation moneys, as gratuities to those servants who had been for a certain number of years in the service of the company. Warren v. Lambeth Waterworks, 21 T. L. R. 685—Warrington, J.

— Railway Company and Dock Company—Amalgamation—Supply of Water by Railway Undertaking to Dock Undertaking.—A railway company and a dock company were amalgamated under an Act which provided that the two undertakings should form one undertaking and be the undertaking of the defendant company, but that no provisions of Acts which related exclusively to one of the undertakings should apply to the other undertaking. The defendant company supplied their dock undertaking with water obtained from their railway undertaking:—Held, that the defendants were not carrying on the business of a water company, and were not acting ultra vires in supplying the dock with water. Att.-Gen. v. North-Eastern Railway, 76 L. J. Ch. 5; [1906] 2 Ch. 675; 95 L. T. 512; 70 J. P. 473; 22 T. L. R. 695—C.A. Affirming, 54 W. R. 212—Joyce, J.

— Investment of Property in the Name of Sole Trustee.—It is not beyond the powers of a company to invest its funds in the name of a sole trustee. Burland v. Earle, 71 L. J. P.C. 1; [1902] A.C. 83; 85 L. T. 553; 50 W. R. 241—P.C.

— Power to "lend money"—Loan to Servant

of Company.]—The articles of the company empowered the directors to lend money and generally undertake such other financial operations as might in their opinion be incidental or useful to the general business of the company:—Held, that this authorised the making of a loan to a servant trusted by the company. Rainford v. James Keith & Blackman Co., 74 L. J. Ch. 531; [1905] 2 Ch. 147; 92 L. T. 786; 54 W. R. 189; 12 Manson, 278; 21 T. L. R. 582—C.A.

4. ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

Explaining Memorandum by Articles.]—Articles of association can be read for the purpose of explaining the memorandum in respect of a matter which need not appear in the latter—for example, the borrowing of money by a railway company—but not for the purpose of shewing that borrowing means the granting of perpetual annuities, for that is not borrowing, nor is it a purpose subsidiary to the general objects of such a company. Southern Brazilian Rio Grande do Sul Railway, In re, 74 L. J. Ch. 392; [1905] 2 Ch. 78; 92 L. T. 593; 53 W. R. 489; 12 Manson, 323; 21 T. L. R. 451—Buckley, J.

Alteration—Alteration of Articles—Lien Created on Fully Paid Shares—Antecedent Debts—Vendor's Shares—Shares Paid in Full in Advance of Calls.]—Section 50 of the Companies Act, 1862, authorises a limited company formed with articles which confer no lien upon fully paid shares, and which allow them to be transferred without any fetter, to alter those articles by special resolution, and to impose a lien and restrictions on the registration of transfers of those shares by members indebted to the company; and that can be done so as to impose a lien or restriction in respect of a debt contracted before and existing at the time when the articles were altered, so long as the alteration is bona fide for the benefit of the company, and not to defeat the rights of any particular shareholder. Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa, 69 L. J. Ch. 266; [1900] 1 Ch. 656—C.A.

The altered articles, however, may not be binding as regards some particular fully paid-up shareholder, even though passed bona fide, as he may have special rights by contract, or otherwise, against the company, which may exempt him from the operation of the articles as altered. Ib.

Per LINDLEY, M.R., and ROMER, L.J.—Shares allotted as fully paid to the vendor of the property purchased by the company in payment of the purchase-money are not, in the absence of any special bargain with the vendor, exempt from the operation of the altered articles; nor, per ROMER, L.J., are shares which the company has allowed the shareholder to pay up in full in advance of calls. Ib.

The fact that the original articles provided for a limited lien upon unpaid shares only would not justify a person who acquired fully paid shares in assuming that those shares would never be made subject to a lien by the alteration of the articles. Ib.

VOL. I.

Per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.—A company cannot by altering its articles impose a lien on fully paid vendor's shares, as the effect of that would be to make those shares less marketable, and so affect the consideration given for the property purchased. Ib.

Whether it can impose a lien in that way upon shares which the shareholder has been allowed to pay up in full in advance of calls, quære. Ib.

—Contract not to Alter Articles—Special Resolution to Alter Same—Issue of Shares to Control Voting—Injunction.]—The principle of the decision in Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (69 L. J. Ch. 266; [1900] 1 Ch. 656), that a company cannot as between itself and its shareholders contract itself out of the right to alter its articles of association conferred by section 50 of the Companies Act, 1862, applies to the case of a contract to that effect between a company and an outside person independent of and not contained in its articles. Punt v. Symons & Co., 72 L. J. Ch. 768; [1903] 2 Ch. 506; 89 L. T. 525; 52 W. R. 41; 10 Manson, 415—Byrne, J.

Where a company, formed for the purchase of a certain business, had entered into an independent contract with the vendor not to alter its articles in respect of certain powers of management given to the vendor by the contract, and the directors subsequently, by the issue of certain new shares, not for the general advantage of the company, but in order to control the voting power, had obtained the passing of a special resolution to alter the articles so as to deprive the vendor of his powers under the contract, an injunction was granted restraining them from holding a confirmatory meeting. Principle of Fraser v. Whalley (2 H. & M. 10) applied. Ib.

—Life Assurance—Participating Policy-holders—Rights of Policy-holders to Profits.]—A life assurance company constituted by a deed of settlement with by-laws, and originally registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Registration Act, 1844, cannot, when registering itself as a limited company under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1900, make articles altering the provisions of its by-laws in such manner as to alter the contractual rights to profits of the holders of participating policies of the company acquired under the by-laws. Baily v. British Equitable Assurance Co., 73 L. J. Ch. 240; [1904] 1 Ch. 374; 90 L. T. 335; 52 W. R. 549; 11 Manson, 169; 20 T. L. R. 242—C.A.

The power which a company has under section 50 of the Companies Act, 1862, of altering its articles by special resolution, though it enables it to alter to some extent the rights of shareholders in respect of their shares, does not enable it to alter contracts between the company and outsiders, or contracts between the company and shareholders otherwise than in respect to their shares. Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (69 L. J. Ch. 266; [1900] 1 Ch. 656), distinguished. Ib.

Article Empowering Directors to Contract with Themselves on Behalf of Company.]—Where articles of association purport to give directors very wide powers to enter into contracts with themselves on behalf of the company "having regard to the interests of the Company," directors who seek to maintain a contract with themselves made under such a power must bring evidence that in making it they had regard to the interest of the company. Alexander's Timber Co., In re, 70 L. J. Ch. 767; 8 Manson, 392—Wright, J.

Power to "lend money"—Loan to Servant of Company.—The articles of the company empowered the directors to lend money and generally undertake such other financial operations as might in their opinion be incidental or useful to the general business of the company:—Held, that this authorised the making of a loan to a servant trusted by the company. Rainford v. James Keith & Blackman Co., 74 L. J. Ch. 531; [1905] 2 Ch. 147; 92 L. T. 786; 12 Manson, 278; 21 T. L. R. 582—C.A.

Restricting Alienation—Repugnancy.—By the articles of association of a company it was inter alia provided that any member proposing to transfer a share should serve a "transfer notice" upon the company of his intention, which notice constituted the company his agent for the sale of the share to any member at the "fair value" thereof, the latter being defined as a sum of 100*l.*, or such other sum as should from time to time be fixed as the "fair value" by resolution of the company in general meeting. No share could, save as therein provided, be transferred to a non-member so long as any member was willing to purchase at the "fair value," the directors being empowered to refuse to register any transfer to a non-member of whom they did not approve, such transfer being void. Upon the company, within twenty-eight days after the service of the "transfer notice," finding a member willing to purchase, the retiring member was bound, upon payment of the "fair value," to transfer the share to the purchasing member, in default of which the company might receive the purchase-money and enter the name of the purchasing member in the register as the holder of the share. In the event of the company not finding a purchaser within the twenty-eight days, the retiring member might, within three months, sell and transfer the share to any person, subject to the approval of the directors, and at any price. It was also provided that the executors or administrators of a deceased member should be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the shares registered in the name of such member, and that any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death of any member might, subject to the regulations contained in the articles, transfer such share to himself or any other person; the executors of a deceased member being further empowered, subject to the approval of the directors, to transfer the share of such member to his son or brother, or to any son or brother of any existing member:—Held, per BOYD, J., and KENNY, J. (PALLES, C.B., expressing no opinion on the point), that the articles of association were not invalid, either as infringing the rule against perpetuity or as being repugnant to the right of alienation inherent in absolute ownership. Att.-Gen. v. Jameson, [1904] 2 Ir. R. 644—K.B. D.

Compulsory Transfer of Shares on Bankruptcy

—Articles of Association—Repugnancy—Fraud on Bankruptcy Law.—A provision in the articles of association of a company for the compulsory transfer of shares is neither repugnant to the nature of personal property nor obnoxious to the rule against perpetuity. Borland's Trustee v. Steel Brothers & Co., 70 L. J. Ch. 51; 49 W. R. 120—Farwell, J.

The fact that the liability to such compulsory transfer is to arise only in the event of the shareholder's bankruptcy, and the fact that the transfer is to be effected at a pre-arranged valuation which may possibly be less than the actual market value of the share at the time of transfer, do not in themselves constitute a fraud upon the bankruptcy law; provided that both these provisions are made without undue preference, and bona fide with a view to the successful working of the company. Ib.

Rule against Perpetuity—Personal Contract.—The rule against perpetuity has no application in the case of personal contracts. Ib.
